PREFACE.

The compilation of a work of any kind, is always a subject of solicitude to those who desire to produce a work that shall at least approximate as nearly to perfection and accuracy as ordinary foresight and attention to detail can insure.

In presenting, therefore, this, the first volume of the ILLINOIS STATE GAZETTEER AND BUSINESS DIRECTORY, to the public, the Publisher feels no ordinary degree of diffidence, appreciating, as he does, the vast amount of labor and patience which is required in collecting the material and compiling a work of this character. Although the greater part of the matter contained in it has been obtained by actual canvass, yet the grateful acknowledgements of the Publisher are due to many individuals of the smaller villages for much valuable information. The sketches of the larger towns and cities have generally been prepared by prominent and well informed citizens of such places, to whom, also, he presents his cordial thanks for their hearty co-operation and the interest they have taken in the work. He appreciates, highly, the uniform kindness which has attended the collection of historical, statistical and other information.

While it is not claimed that the work is perfect, yet with the consciousness that he has done all in his power to make it as nearly so as possible, the Publisher leaves it to a discriminating public, hoping that while they deal lightly with its errors its merits will not be overlooked.

ILLINOIS.

[As it would be impossible in a work of this kind to insert an entire History of Illinois, we insert a sketch of its origin, settlement, agricultural and mineral resources, size, geographical position, and other data of interest to the citizens of this Great Prairie State.]

THE STATE OF ILLINOIS was, originally, a part of Florida, and belonged to Spain, and was so laid down upon the old Spanish map of North America. The Spaniards, led on by the daring Fernando de Soto, were the first Europeans who had discovered the Mississippi; they had erected the standard of Spain on its shores in the year 1541, and, according to the views at that time prevailing, had thus established the title of their country to the whole of that vast region watered by its tributary streams, so that henceforth the State of Illinois became a Spanish colony, and its native inhabitants vassals of the Spanish crown. But, although the Spaniards claimed the State by right of possession, its settlement was never entered upon by them, but was first carried into effect by the French.

At the time this State was ceded to England, the French portion of the population amounted to about 3000 souls. They resided along the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers, and their largest towns were Kaskaskia and Cahokia, of which the former contained about 100, and the latter about 50 families. Other small villages were in their vicinity, and one at Peoria, on the Illinois River. Prairie Du Rocher contained 14 families, and Prairie Du Pont, a short distance from Cahokia, about as many. Another considerable settlement was in and about Fort Chartres; but the whole did not exceed 3000 individuals. The French settlements were laid out by common consent on the same plan or system. The blocks were about three hundred feet square, and each block contained four lots. The streets were rather narrow, but always at right angles. Lots in the old times were enclosed by cedar posts or pickets, planted about two feet in the ground and extending five feet above. These pickets were placed touching each other, the whole forming a light and safe paling around each proprietor's lot. The upper ends of the pickets were sharpened, so that it was rather difficult to get over the the fence. A neat gate was generally made in the fence opposite to the door of the house, and the whole concern was kept clean and neat.

Each village had a tract of land for common fields, containing several thousand acres, which was surrounded by a common fence, each family possessing a separate and well-defined portion of the land exclusively for itself. Besides this, a common, which contained frequently several thousand acres, and in which each villager had a joint, instead of a separate interest, was appended to every village for wood and pasturage. Each proprietor of land was bound to make and keep in repair the fences in his land.

The French in those days mostly sowed spring wheat. Sometimes wheat was sowed late in the fall. Indian corn was not so much cultivated as wheat, or used as much by the inhabitants. A species of Indian or hominy corn was raised for the voyagers, which was an article of commerce. The French did not use Indian corn meal for bread to any great extent, but raised it for stock and to fatten hogs.

The French houses were generally one story high, and made of wood. A few of them were of stone. There was not a single brick house in the country for one hundred or more years from its first settlement. These houses were formed of large posts or timbers, the posts being three or four feet apart in many of them. In others the posts were closer together, and the intervals filled up with a mortar made of common clay and cut straw. The mortar filled up the cracks, so that the wall was even and regular. The whole wall, outside and inside, was usually whitewashed with fine lime, so that these houses presented a clean, neat appearance. The other class of houses having the posts further apart, the spaces were filled up with puncheons. The posts were grooved for the puncheons to fit in. These houses were used for stables, barns, &c., &c. The covering of the houses, stables, &c., were generally of straw, or long grass cut in the prairie. All the houses had porticoes around them, the posts of which were generally of cedar or mulberry. A garden was assigned to each house. The doors were plain batton work, of walnut usually. The windows were generally glazed, and the sash opened and shut on hinges. Close by the houses were neat clean wells, nicely walled with stone, having a windlass fixed in them, so that water was convenient and clean.

The State of Illinois, although ceded in 1763, continued in the possession of France until 1765, when Captain Stirling, sent by Gen. Gage, then commander-in-chief of the British forces in America, to take possession of the territory, arrived, and assumed its government in the name of His Britannic Majesty. He established his headquarters at Fort Chartres, and issued a royal proclamation, granting to the Roman Catholic subjects of His Majesty the free and undisturbed exercise of their religion, according to the rites of the Roman Catholic Church, as it had already been granted to the Canadians.

Captain Stirling was succeeded by Major Farmer, and the latter superseded by Col. Reed, in 1766. Col. Reed remained also but a short time, and was succeeded by Lieutenant-Colonel Wilkins, who arrived at Kaskaskia, on the 5th of September, 1768. Ever since the occupation of the territory by the British, the administration of justice had been in the hands of the military commandant, which caused no little annoyance to the public, and occasioned frequent complaints. A Civil Court, consisting of seven judges, was afterwards established, but trial by jury being refused, it did not become popular.

Arthur St. Clair, an officer of the Revolutionary army, who had served with some distinction, was appointed the first Governor and Commander-in-chief of the Territory.

The white population of the Territory was but small: that of Illinois had remained stationary. Struck with the fertility of the soil of Illinois, several of the soldiers of Col. Clarke settled in that country. They were the earliest American settlers in Illinois. They lived mostly in stations, or block-house forts, which they had been compelled to erect for their protection, since the Indians committed great depredations on the habitations of the new settlers. The general construction of those block-house forts were about this: The lowest order of these forts was a single house, strongly built, a story and a half or two stories high. The lower story was provided with port-holes to shoot through, and also with substantial puncheon doors, three or four inches thick, with strong bars, to prevent the Indians from entering. The second story projected over the first three or four feet, and had holes in the floor, outside the lower story, to shoot down at the Indians attempting to enter.

Another higher grade of pioneer fortifications was made thus: four large, strong block-houses, fashioned as above, were erected at the four corners of a square lot of ground, as large as the necessities of the people required. The intervals between these block-houses were filled up with large timbers, placed deep in the ground, and extending twelve or fifteen feet above the surface. Within these stockades were cabins built for the families to reside in. A well of water, or a spring, was generally found to be necessary in these forts. In perilous times the horses were admitted into the forts for safe keeping. Generally there were two strong gates to these garrisons, with bars in proportion, to secure the doors against the savages. Port-holes were cut out in the stockades at about seven feet high, and platforms raised to stand on when shooting.

The timber in the vicinity of these forts was carefully cleared off, so as to afford no hiding-places to the Indians. In the mornings it was often dangerous to open the gates and walk out. The Indians frequently attacked the milking parties and others first going out of the fort. Sentinels were kept up all night in dangerous times.

The customs of these early American settlers were much on the French model, extremely gay, polite, and merry.

In personal appearance these pioneers were rough and unrefined, yet were they kind, social, and generous. They were brave, energetic and hospitable, and ready to share with their neighbors or newly-arrived strangers their last loaf.

Their habits and manners were plain, simple, and unostentatious. Their dwellings were log cabins of the simplest structure, their furniture, utensils and dress were also as simple and economical as possible.

For clothing, dressed deer-skins were extensively used, for hunting-shirts, pants, leggins and moccasins; the red skin of the prairie wolf or fox was converted into the hat or cap. Dressed skins of the buffalo, bear and elk furnished the covering of their beds. Wooden vessels were used instead of bowls. A gourd formed the drinking-cup.

The American settlers were hunters and stock-growers, raising, besides a small amount of wheat, chiefly corn, which was beaten for bread in the mortar, and ground on a grater, or in a hand mill.

Many of these settlers observed the Sabbath with an austerity that would have become a Puritan.

To the French, on the other hand, the Sabbath always had been, and still was a day of hilarity and pleasure. They would strictly attend mass in the morning and practice their devotions in the church; and in the afternoon would assemble in parties at private houses for gay social intercourse, when cards, dances, and various sports, made the time pass. Intemperance, either in eating or drinking, was never witnessed among them.

Up to the year 1818 the population of the Territory of Illinois had increased to about 50,000 inhabitants. At the commencement of that year the people of the Territory unanimously resolved to have Illinois admitted into the Union as an independent State, and ordered Nathaniel Pope, their delegate to Congress, to take measures to that effect. Nathaniel Pope brought the subject at once before Congress, and reported a bill thereon. About that time the danger, already vaguely apprehended before, of the dissolution of the Confederate States of the Republic, had assumed a very threatening aspect. Nathaniel Pope justly observed, that if Illinois, which, by reason of the great extent of its territory, its fertile soil, and the facilities it offered for the support of a crowded population, was destined to become a chief instrument either in the preservation or in the dissolution of the Union,—was given a large boundary on the Northern Lakes, the increase of the commerce on which was very confidently expected, then, united as Illinois already was by the bonds of interest to the States west of the Mississippi, it would also become connected by the closest ties of business and commerce with the Eastern States, and thus be bound to sustain the Federal Union forever; whilst, on the other hand, if no such extensive territory should be given to her, the interests of the State would compel her to enrol herself among the States of the new Southwestern confederacy, whenever the Union should be dissolved. Nathaniel Pope's views met the full approbation of Congress, and the bill, in virtue of which the Territory of Illinois was to be raised to the rank of an independent State, was passed as a law, in the month of April, 1818; it granted to Illinois the extension of her northern boundary to the parallel of 42° 30′ north latitude, and the privilege of applying the money arising from the sale of the public lands, to the encouragement of learning within the borders of the State.

Congress having passed this act, a Convention, of which Elias K. Kane, a lawyer, was the leading member, was convoked during the summer of 1818 in Illinois, to form its Constitution. By this Constitution the Governor and Lieutenant-Governor were required to have been citizens of the United States for 30 years previous to their election. The qualifications for the office of Lieutenant-Governor were afterwards so far modified that any citizen of the United States who had resided in the State for two years, could be elected to that office. Power was vested in the Governor to nominate, and in the Senate to confirm all officers, except those whose appointments had already been provided for by the Constitution, including also the Judges of the Supreme and Inferior Courts, State Treasurer, and Public Printer. The Convention, however, in order to please a favorite of theirs, inserted a schedule in the Constitution, declaring "that an Auditor, Attorney-General, and other officers of the State, may be appointed by the General Assembly." This schedule was productive of innumerable intrigues and quarrels between the Governors and the Legislature, which ended in the Legislature, who had at first contented themselves with electing an Auditor and Attorney-General, depriving the Governor, as was the case with Gov. Duncan, of the power of appointing any public officers, except notaries public, and public administrators.

Shadrach Bond, a farmer by occupation, and a son of plain common sense, without pretensions to a refined education, who had already been several times elected to the Territorial Legislature, and once as a delegate of the Territory of Congress, was elected the first Governor, and entered upon the discharge of his duties in October, 1818. At the same time, the Legislature assembled in Kaskaskia. In his first message to the Legislature, he earnestly recommands the construction of the canal, which was to run through Illinois, and to connect the Mississippi with Lake Michigan. He died in the year 1834.

The Legislature convened in Kaskaskia elected Joseph Philips, a lawyer by profession, who had been a captain in the United States Army, and afterwards Secretary of State to the Territory, as Chief Justice; and John Reynolds, Thomas C. Brown, and William P. Foster, (the latter, however, soon resigned his office,) as Associate Justices of the Supreme Court. Ninian Edwards, and Jesse B. Thomas, who had been chosen President of the Convention, were elected first Senators. Daniel P. Cook was appointed first Attorney-General, Elias K. Kane, Secretary of State, John Thomas, State Treasurer, and Elijah C. Berry, Auditor of Public Accounts.

The State of Illinois extends about 150 miles from east to west, by 400 from north to south. Such a disproportion in the geographical figure of a State, is certain to create a separate northern and southern interest, even if the people of such a State were of a common stock, which, not being the case with the people of Illinois, will sufficiently account for their frequent disinclination to agree upon the adoption of such a policy, and such measures of government, as would have best suited the interests of the State, and aided in relieving her from the calamities, under which she was then suffering. The settlers of the southern portion of the State were chiefly people from the Slave States, those of the northern section principally New Yorkers and New Englanders. Many of the inhabitants of the neighboring Slave States, who were poor, and did not relish a residence in a slave country, where the very negroes were wont to stigmatize them as the poor white folks, had removed to Illinois where the immigration of slaveholders was strictly forbidden. The greater part of them were an honest and hospitable people, indifferent to wealth, and fond of social enjoyment.

The settlers of the northern part of the State, on the other hand, were industrious people from the Eastern States, enterprising farmers, manufacturers, or merchants, who, by their restless energy and activity, soon converted the howling wilderness into a region covered with farms, churches, and villages, so that their settlements, though founded at a later period than those of the southern part, were soon ahead of the latter in point of civilization; and their success will sufficiently explain the mutual hatred of the southern and northern settlers.

GEOGRAPHY.

Situated in the centre of the United States, the State of Illinois extends from 37° to 42° 30' latitude North, and from 87° 49' to 91° 28' longitude West of Greenwich, or from 10° 47' to 14° 26' longitude West of Washington. Illinois is bounded on the North-east by Lake Michigan; on the East by Indiana, from a part of which it is separated by the Wabash river on the South by Kentucky and Missouri, being separated from Kentucky by the Ohio, and from Missouri by the Mississippi; on the West by Missouri, from which it is also separated by the Mississippi; on the North-west by Iowa, the Mississippi constituting the common boundary of both States, and on the North by Wisconsin.

The whole length of the Illinoisian frontier amounts to 1,160 miles, 855 of which are formed by navigable waters, as Lake Michigan, the Wabash, Ohio and Mississippi. The greatest length of the State, from South to North, from Cairo to Wisconsin, amounts to 378 miles; its greatest breadth to 212 miles. The area of the State is computed at 55,405 square miles, or 35,459,200 acres—1,833,412 of which are so-called swamp-lands; the residue, 33,625,788 acres, being tillable, and the most part of them having a soil of unsurpassed fertility.

Illinois communicates by means of the St. Lawrence with the Atlantic ocean, and by the Mississippi with the Gulf of Mexico.

The State of Illinois forms the lower part of that slope in which is embraced the greater part of the State of Indiana, and of which Lake Michigan, with its shores, constitutes the upper part. The lowest point of this slope and of the State is the city of Cairo, situated about 350 feet above the level of the Gulf of Mexico, at the conflux of the Ohio and Mississippi, in the extreme southern portion of the State; hence, the highest place in Illinois being situated only 800 feet above the level of the sea, it will appear that the whole State, though containing several hilly sections, is a very level plain; being, with the sole exception of Delaware and Louisiana, the flattest country in the Union.

Illinois is more than forty times as great as the State of Rhode Island in its area, containing but 10,720 square miles less than the entire New England States. None but the following States possess a greater area:—Virginia having 61,852, Georgia 58,000, Florida 59,268, Missouri 67,380, Michigan 56,243, California 188,981, and Texas 237,321 square miles: but if California shall yet be divided into Upper and Lower California, and Texas, as at the time of its annexation was provided for, into five different States, then Illinois, as far as regards its area, will rank fifth among the States of the Union. Illinois seems to be destined, within a short time, to play a great role in the United States, being entitled to this not only by the vastness of its area and its excellent geographical position, but also by the fertility of its easily cultivated soil, the multitude of its rivers and fine railroads, and the rapid increase of its population, together with the enterprise and intelligence of its citizens.

The principal rivers of the State of Illinois are—

The Illinois River, which, formed by the conflux of the Kankakee and Des Moines about fifty miles south-west of Chicago, during a course of 500 miles, receives several other rivers, as the Fox River, the Spoon River, the Crooked Creek, Mackinaw, Sangamon, and the Vermilion, from the south, besides several others. The Illinois River is deep and broad, extending at several places, as at Peoria, where it forms a basin called then Peoria Lake, to such a breadth as to present the appearance of a sea. It was first navigated in the year 1828 by a steamboat.

Rock River, rising in Wisconsin, pursues a course of 300 miles, being navigable to some extent; there are, however, several rapids in the upper part of its course. A great part of the country through which Rock River runs is an undulating prairie, with a rich soil, though with but few forests.

The Kaskaskia, a navigable river, rising in Champaign county, after a run to the south-west of more than 300 miles, empties its waters into the Mississippi, about 120 miles above the mouth of the Ohio. Kaskaskia River was already, in the year 1837, navigated by steamboats as far as Carlisle. Its banks, for an extent varying from two to ten miles, are richly garnished with woods and forests of oaks, hickory, ash, maple, elm and acacia trees. The country through which the river winds its course is undulating and fertile.

The Big Muddy River, in the south-western portion of the State, has various sources, constituting at their conflux the river above named, which, after a run to the south-west, discharges its waters into the Mississippi. The country through which it runs is undulating and wooded, offering great advantages to agriculture and the breeding of cattle.

Embarras River, in the eastern part of the State, takes its rise near the source of the Kaskaskia, and runs southerly, discharging its waters into the Wabash about six miles below Vincennes. The land along Embarras River is not everywhere of the same good quality, consisting at the origin of the river chiefly of prairie lands, and further north of Charleston, of forests garlanding the banks of the river at a breadth varying between two and six miles, extending even to ten miles below that place.

Little Wabash River, rising also near the source of the Kaskaskia, runs south, emptying its waters into the Great Wabash, in Gallatin county. Its banks, for an extent of several miles, are garnished with good and heavy timber; at intervals poplars can be found. The country adjacent to this river is fertile, exposed, however, to inundations from the river.

Sangamon River, rising in McLean county, runs south-west, constituting during the latter part of its course the boundary line between Monroe and Cass counties, and emptying its waters into Illinois River. The country watered by the Sangamon is one of the richest, being quite level, and having excellent soil.

Apple River, rising in Jo Daviess county, near the Wisconsin frontier, has a rocky bed, and is very rapid, running south-west, and flowing into the Mississippi about twenty miles below Galena. The adjacent bottom-lands have excellent soil; the more elevated country in its vicinity being hilly, its banks woody, and the country around its springs undulating.

Chicago River, consisting of two branches, the more considerable one of which is that running North, and both of them flowing together within the city of Chicago, empties its waters into Lake Michigan.

Des Plaines River, rising in Wisconsin, at the distance of a few miles from Lake Michigan, runs south, and is a tributary of Illinois River by the union of its waters with those of the Kankakee. Its banks are tufted with frequent groves, the country around it being well watered, and the soil very rich.

Du Page River, in the north-eastern section of the State, consists of two branches, emptying their united waters into the Des Plaines River, three miles above the confluence of the latter with the Kankakee.

The Cash River, in the southern portion of the State, formed by the union of several small streams, flows into the Ohio, six miles above the junction of the latter with the Mississippi. The alluvial land along Cash River, wherever it is not exposed to inundation, possesses a rich soil and heavy timber.

The Edwards River, rising in the midst of the prairies of Henry county, runs westward, through Mercer county, to the Mississippi. The country around it consists of undulating prairie-lands, intersected by shady groves, and well supplied with water.

The Fever River, rising in Jo Daviess county, consists of two branches, and empties its waters into the Mississippi, about seven miles south of Galena. Its channel is rocky, and its course very rapid. On the eastern branch there is little wood, but excellent prairies, and mines yielding an abundant supply of lead. There is more wood on the western branch, the alluvial country around which has a rich soil. The name of the river has been derived from the fevers said to prevail in the vicinity of its banks; whilst others have called it Bean River (in French Rivière de la Fève), either of which is incorrect, the river having been named by a Frenchman of the name of Le Fèvre, who at an early period settled at the mouth of the stream.

Fox River, on the banks of which fine forests may be found, rises in Wisconsin, flowing, near Ottawa, into the Illinois.

Another river of the same name runs south, a tributary of the Little Wabash, into which it empties its waters. The land along its banks is not very excellent.

A third river of the same name, in White county, runs, after a short course, into the Great Wabash.

Green River, rising in the swamps of the northern counties, runs west, through Henry county, into Rock River. The country below the swamps is good, consisting of both woods and prairies.

Henderson River, rising in Knox county, runs south-west, receiving during its course several small streams, and flowing into the Mississippi. Fine forests grow on its banks, the country around which is among the most fertile in Illinois.

Iroquois River, rising in the north-western section of Indiana, runs north-west, becoming a tributary of the Illinois by discharging its waters into the Kankakee. The country through which the Iroquois runs is undulating; the soil a little sandy, but rich; timber to be found in sufficient quantity.

The Kankakee, one of the principal tributary rivers of the Illinois, rising in Indiana, runs west, receiving the Iroquois and Des Plaines rivers. Woods are but rarely to be met with on its banks, the prairies around which are slightly undulating, having a rich soil.

The Kickapoo consists of two branches, after the conflux of which it pursues a southerly direction, discharging its waters into the Illinois, two miles below Peoria. On both its branches there is much excellent land, intersected with groups of forests, the ground being rather hilly.

The Kishwaukee, or Sycamore, formed by the junction of several small waters, some of which rise in Wisconsin, others in the northern counties of Illinois, discharges the waters of its three principal branchss, after their combination, in Rock River. Its banks have but little wood; the prairie along the eastern branch is flat and fertile; and the country along the southern and northern branches undulating, and remarkable for its very rich, deep, black soil, and its beds of lime and coal.

The Kite River, in Ogle county, runs west, flowing into Rock River, about two miles below Oregon. The country is very level, and the soil very fine; woods, among which are many poplars, can be found at intervals.

The Leaf River, in Ogle county, also empties its waters into Rock River. The land adjoining its banks is rich, calcareous, and woody at intervals.

Little Rock River, rising in Jo Daviess county, flows into Rock River. On its banks there is much excellent soil.

The Mackinaw (Michilimackinac), rising in the prairies of McLean county, and receiving several small brooks, runs through Tazewell county into the Illinois river, three miles below Pekin. The adjacent bottom-lands have a rich soil. Timber, especially white oak and cedar, may be found. The prairies of the country are undulating and dry. Towards the sources of the river, the number of species of woods increases, whilst the soil is very good.

The Mauvaise Terre, in Morgan county, runs west, meeting Illinois River about two miles below Naples. Although from the name of the river (Mauvaise Terre, "poor land,") one might infer that the soil of the adjacent country is of a very bad quality, this is not the case; the country, on the contrary, surpassing many other sections in fertility, and has the advantage of having a just proportion between prairie and forest, as also a remarkable salubrity of waters.

The Peek-a-ton-o-kee rises in Wisconsin, in two separate branches, which, after their conflux, flows into Illinois to meet Rock River.

The Plum River, the country surrounding the banks of which has a fine soil, with both wood and prairie, runs through Jo Daviess county into the Mississippi.

Pope's River, rising in the great prairies in the southern part of Henry county, runs west through Mercer county, discharging its waters into the Mississippi, a few miles below the mouth of Edwards' River. The adjacent country is very good, but destitute of forests; on the banks of the river, towards the end of its course, there are, however, some extensive woods, while its upper banks are surrounded by prairies.

Saline River, in Saline and Gallatin counties, consists of three branches, discharging their united waters into the Ohio, twelve miles below Shawneetown.

Senatchwine River, on the banks of which there is much good land, both wood and prairie, runs through Peoria county into Illinois River, about twenty miles above Peoria.

The Sinsinaway, rising in Wisconsin, runs south-west into the Mississippi, about six miles above Fever River. Timber on its banks is very rare; only now and then some cedars and pines may be found.

Small-pox River, rising south-east of Galena, runs west into the Mississippi, close by the mouth of Fever River. On its banks, near the place where it flows into the Mississippi, much valuable timber may be found.

The Snycartee, a branch of the Mississippi, whence it flows, in the southern portion of Adams county, running for about fifty miles parallel with, and five miles from, the Missisippi, to meet it again in Calhoun county, forms, with the Mississippi, an island, consisting of alluvial land, not destitute either of forest or prairie, but frequently exposed to inundations.

Spoon River consists of an eastern and western branch, both of which, having received a multitude of creeks, unite; whereupon the river takes a southern direction to meet the Illinois, opposite Havana. On its banks there are many extensive woody tracts; the soil of the adjoining country is of unsurpassed excellence. The prairies near by the river are undulating, dry and fertile.

St. Mary's River, rising in Perry county, discharges its waters into the Mississippi six miles below the mouth of the Kaskaskia.

The Sugar River, rising in Wisconsin, runs southerly to meet the Peek-a ton-o-kee. The land upon its banks is of good quality; the country between Rock and Sugar rivers very humid.

Turtle River, rising in Wisconsin, flows near the boundary into Rock River.

Vermilion River, rising in Livingston county, runs through La Salle county, emptying into Illinois River. Towards its springs the country is nearly level, having a rich soil and vast prairies, but very little wood. In the vicinity of the river, and near the bluffs, are many extensive coal mines, of which those situated in the direction of the Illinois River reach a depth of 100 feet· also beds of sand, and lime, and a kind of stone used as whetstone, may here be found.

Big Vermilion River, proceeding in three different branches through Champaign and Vermilion counties, falls, in Indiana, into the Wabash. Its banks are garnished with a wood from one to two miles broad; the adjacent prairies are dry, rolling and fertile.

Little Vermilion River, rising in the southern part of Vermilion county, runs also into the Wabash in Indiana. On its banks fine forests may be found.

Wood River, rising in Macoupin county, runs through Madison county, discharging its waters nearly opposite the mouth of the Missouri, into the Mississippi. The land through which it runs is of superior quality.

Illinois has, besides these streams, a multitude of rivulets, the banks of which, as well as those of the rivers mentioned above, consist of alluvial, and consequently very fertile soil, so that neither in the Union, nor anywhere else on earth, could be found a State of equal size with Illinois rivalling the latter in the fertility and superior quality of its soil.

Of lakes, none of any great magnitude can be found in Illinois; that portion of Lake Michigan* bounding the State being comparatively but small, so that this lake, the navigation of which has contributed so much to the advancement of Illinois, cannot be properly considered as belonging to the State.

The only sheet of water, that in a measure might lay claim to the name of a lake, is Peoria Lake, which, however, as was mentioned when Illinois River was spoken of, is nothing but an enlargement of this river; none of the other waters deserve this name at all, except Crystal Lake, but should rather be called ponds.

There are also a number of Creeks, of which probably Crooked Creek may be considered the largest and most important, rising in numerous branches in McDonough and Hancock counties, and near the borders of Warren, runs a southern course through McDonough and Schuyler counties, and enters the Illinois in Section 13, one south, one west, six miles below Beardstown.

An artificial aqueduct, that has likewise considerably accelerated the advancement of Illinois, is yet to be mentioned. The Illinois and Michigan Canal extends from Chicago to Peru, a distance of one hundred miles, connecting thus the Lake of Michigan with the Illinois; it is 6 feet deep, 70 feet broad at the top, and 36 at the bottom.

What distinguishes the State of Illinois from all the other States of the Union are its immense prairies; from which it has been exclusively called the "Prairie State." We do not intend to give in this geographical sketch a detailed description of the nature of a prairie, but setting apart a special chapter for this, we shall here only mention the principal prairies —those known under peculiar names.

The most considerable of these prairies is the Grand Prairie, comprehending all prairie-lands between the rivers flowing into the Mississippi and those meeting the Wabash. The prairie itself does not consist of one single continuous extensive tract of land, but of many different prairies, separated one from the other by a range of woods, while the prairies, in their turn, stretch between the usually woody banks of the rivers and creeks. The most southerly portion of the great prairie is situated in the north-east section of Jackson county, extending north-easterly from the Mississippi, with a breadth varying from two to ten and more miles, through Perry, Washington, Jefferson, Marion, Fayette, Clay, Effingham, Shelby,

*The greatest length of Lake Michigan is 360 miles; its greatest breadth, 108 miles; mean depth, 300 feet; elevation, 587 feet; area, 23,000 square miles.

Moultrie, Cumberland, Coles, Champaign, Vermilion, and Iroquois counties; here it meets the prairies stretching easterly from Illinois River and its tributaries. That portion of these prairie-lands lying in Marion county, between Crooked Creek and the eastern branch of the Kaskaskia, intersected by the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, is often exclusively nanmed the Grand Prairie.

The greater portion of the Grand Prairie is slightly undulating, its southern part quite level, having many tracts of land of but inferior quality. At the distance of ten or twelve miles around, timber is sure to be found; coal almost everywhere, at no great depth.

Another prairie, also called Grand Prairie, commences in Crawford county, extending north through Clark and Edgar counties to Vermilion. It is not very broad, and at frequent intervals is intersected by forest-bordered rivers.

The soil of the southern and eastern is not as good as that of the northern and western portion of these prairies, which, with the exception of those adjacent to the Wabash, have a thin and nearly level washy humus.

Allen's Prairie, in Green county, twelve miles north-east of Carrollton, is fertile, and wooded on the banks of the rivers runniug through it.

Alison's Prairie, in Lawrence county, five miles easterly from Lawrenceville, is some five miles by ten. That portion of it adjacent to the Wabash, is humid; by far the greater portion of it, however, is dry and fertile.

Apple-Creek Prairie, in Green county, north of Apple Creek, is from three to four miles by ten in extent. Its soil is good.

Barney's Prairie, in Wabash county, north of Mount Carmel. Fertile.

Bear Prairie, in Wayne county, east of Fairfield.

Bellevue Prairie, in Calhoun county, at the foot of the bluffs, ten miles in extent, has a dry and fertile soil.

Big Mound Prairie, Wayne county, west of Fairfield, three miles long, rolling, with a thin surface of humus.

Big Prairie, in White county, three miles square, much mixed with sand, but fertile.

Boltinghouse Prairie, in Edwards county, south of Albion, extending four miles by three, has an undulating, fertile soil.

Bonpas Prairie, in the same county, north-east of Albion, and about two miles in diameter. Soil good.

Brown's Prairie, twelve miles north of Alton, runs through the corners of Macoupin, Jersey, and Madison counties, which border upon each other. The soil is dry and fertile.

Brushy Prairie, in Wayne county, eleven miles east of Fairfield.

Buckheart Prairie, in Fulton county, north-east of Lewistown, about seven miles long.

Buck Prairie, in Edwards county, six miles north-east of Albion, two and a-half miles broad.

Buckhorn Prairie, in Morgan county, about seven miles south of Jacksonville. The soil is rich, a little humid, and very level.

Bullard's Prairie, in Lawrence county, west of Lawrenceville, is ten miles by two in extent, having a second-rate soil.

Burnt Prairie extends from the north-western section of White into Wayne county. Its circumference is not very great; its soil at intervals good.

Another prairie of the same name, situated in Edwards county, north-west of Albion, extends two miles by six, interspersed with many small groves. Soil good.

Canton Prairie, in Fulton county, commencing in the vicinity of Spoon River, extends northerly till it meets Grand Prairie, near Rock River; it is rolling, dry, and very fertile, with the exception of its northern section, which is of inferior quality.

Casey's Prairie, in Jefferson county, five miles by two, nearly level; second-rate soil.

Christy's Prairie, in Lawrence county, ten miles west of Lawrenceville, rolling, and of good average soil.

Cold Prairie, in St. Clair county, between Belleville and Illinoistown.

Compston's Prairie, in Wabash county, twelve miles west of Mount Carmel, is level, fertile, but somewhat humid.

Cotton Hill Prairie, in Sangamon county, twelve miles south of Springfield.

Cox's Prairie, in Jackson county, north-east of Brownsville; good rolling prairie.

Crow Prairie, in Putnam county, twelve miles below Hennepin, six miles by three; fertile, and bounded by forests.

Another prairie of the same name extends, four miles by twelve, along the western bank of Illinois River from Putnam into Bureau county; soil dry and productive.

Decker's Prairie, in Wabash county, twelve miles north-east of Mount Carmel.

Diamond Grove Prairie, in Morgan county, south of Jacksonville, containing about sixteen square miles, is dry, undulating, and productive.

Dolson's Prairie, in the western section of Clark county, containing about seventy square miles, has a level, humid, clayish soil.

Dutch Prairie, in the south-western part of St. Clair county.

Edmonson's Prairie, in McDonough county, six miles south-west of Macomb, ten miles by two.

Eight-mile Prairie, in Williamson county, eighteen miles south-west of Frankfort; very flat.

Elk Prairie, in Perry county, five miles long, dry and nearly level; second-rate soil.

Ester's Prairie, in Franklin county, fourteen miles north of Frankfort; level and dry.

Flat Prairie, in Randolph county, twenty miles east of Kaskaskia.

Fork Prairie, in Bond county, north of Greenville; gently undulating.

Four-mile Prairie, in Perry county, four miles by seven; dry, rolling and productive.

Fourteen-mile Prairie, in Effingham county, east of Livingston; nearly level, for the most part dry, interspersed with groups of forests.

Garden Prairie, in Sangamon county, fourteen miles north-west of Springfield, two miles by eight; first-rate soil.

Granger's Prairie, in the north-western section of Adams county, three miles square; possesses very productive soil.

Gun Prairie, in Jefferson county, six miles south of Mount Vernon, has a considerable circuit, and a fertile soil.

Hancock Prairie, commencing in Adams county, runs with a breadth varying between ten and twenty miles, far north, through Hancock, Henderson, and Warren counties, between Henderson and Spoon rivers, being nearly level, and very productive.

Hargrave's Prairie, in Wayne county, seven miles by two, is undulating, having but a thin surface of humus.

Hawkins' Prairie, in Greene county, nine miles south-east of Carrollton.

Herron's Prairie is situated in Williamson county.

Herrington's Prairie, in Wayne county, eleven miles north-west of Fairfield, eight miles by four; has an undulating surface, and second-rate soil.

High Prairie, in St. Clair county, eight miles from Belleville; very productive.

Hog Prairie, in Hamilton county, situated westerly from McLeansburg; has a small circumference, and a level, humid soil.

Horse Prairie, in Randolph county; soil rolling and fertile.

Illinois Prairie, in Calhoun county, commencing near the mouth of Illinois River, runs, twenty miles by two, along the bluffs, having a fertile soil.

Indian Prairie, in Wayne county, ten miles north-west of Fairfield; is level, and its soil of indifferent quality.

Jersey Prairie, in Morgan county, ten miles north of Jacksonville, has a rich soil, and is bounded by fine timber.

Jordan's Prairie, in Jefferson county, six miles north of Mount Vernon, five miles by two, has a second rate soil.

Knight's Prairie, in Hamilton county, west of McLeansboro'.

Knob Prairie, in Franklin county, north-west of Frankfort, is low and humid.

La Motte Prairie, in Crawford county, eight miles long, of a breadth which greatly varies; has a somewhat sandy but rich soil.

La Salle Prairie, in Peoria county, adjacent to Peoria Lake; the southern section is rolling and fertile, though a little sandy; the northern being more clayish.

Lemarde Prairie, in Wayne county, seven miles north-west of Fairfield, is three miles by six in extent, having an indifferent soil.

Little Mount Prairie, in the same county, three miles south-west of Fairfield; not very large.

There are four prairies in the State bearing the name of Long Prairie, of which—

The first is in Wabash county, thirteen miles north-west of Mount Carmel; undulating, and of but inferior quality.

The second, in Edwards county, north of Albion, is nine miles by two in extent, interspersed with many groves.

The third, in Clay county, runs into Wayne county, nine miles by three; being, properly speaking, a branch of Twelve-mile Prairie. It is level, and has but a poor soil.

The fourth, in Jefferson county, five miles west of Mount Vernon, is four miles by two in extent, having a sufficiently good soil.

Looking-glass Prairie, in St. Clair county, twenty miles long, and from six to ten miles wide; undulating, and very productive, runs into Madison county.

Lorton's Prairie, in the northern part of Green county, has excellent soil and fine forests.

Lost Prairie, in Perry county, seven miles west of Pinckneyville, one and a-half miles broad and double that length, is high, rolling, and very productive.

Loup Prairie, in St. Clair county.

Lucons' Prairie, in the southern part of Lawrence county.

Macon County Prairie, situated north of Decatur, extends between the north branch of the Sangamon river and Salt Creek, with a breadth varying from fifteen to twenty miles; some parts of it are lovely and humid, others rolling and dry.

Macoupin Prairie, in Green county, reaches into Jersey county; gently rolling, having a rich soil and stately forests near the Illinois river and the Macoupin creek.

Marshall's Prairie, in Jackson county, fourteen miles north-east of Brownsville, has a rolling and fertile surface.

Mason's Prairie, in the southern section of Richland county.

Mill's Prairie, in Edwards county, eleven miles north-east of Albion, is four miles long, about two broad; quite fertile.

Moore's Prairie, in Jefferson county, south-east of Mount Vernon, eight miles by about two. Some parts of it are flat and humid, others dry and gently undulating.

Another prairie of the same name, situated in St. Clair county, five miles east of Belleville, has a diameter of about five miles; it is nearly level, and fertile.

Mud Prairie, in Washington county, reaches into Perry county, north-east of Pinckneyville; it is level and humid.

Another prairie of the same name lies in Wayne county, north-west of Fairfield; also low and humid.

A third prairie of the same name (Mud Prairie) is situated in the south-eastern portion of St. Clair county.

Nine-mile Prairie, in Perry county, ten miles east of Pinckneyville.

North Arm Prairie, in Edgar county, six miles east of Paris, is three miles broad, running along the frontier of Indiana, until it meets the grand prairie. Its soil is good.

North Prairie, in Morgan county, twelve miles north-east of Jacksonville, is dry, undulating, and very productive.

Another prairie of the same name, in the same county, runs along Walnut Creek, and is level.

Ogle Prairie, in St. Clair county, five miles north of Belleville, extending one and a-half miles by five, is rolling and very fertile.

Ox-bow Prairie, in Putnam county, ten miles south of Hennepin, five miles by one and a-half, surrounded by fine forrests, and very productive.

Parker's Prairie, in the western section of Clark county, has a level, humid soil, of inferior quality.

Philo's Prairie, in Williamson county, twelve miles south of Frankfort; gently undulating, and fertile.

Plum Creek Prairie reaches from St. Clair into Randolph county, and is ten miles by three in extent. Its soil is good.

Prairie du Long, in the south of St. Clair county.

Pratt's Prairie, in Greene county, fifteen miles north-west of Carrollton.

Rattan's Prairie, in Madison county, seven miles north-west of Edwardsville; is level, and at intervals washy.

Ridge Prairie, in Madison county, is eight miles by eight, running from near by Edwardsville to St. Clair county; gently undulating, and very productive.

Rollin's Prairie, in Franklin county, north of Frankfort, is six miles long by four broad; it is level and fertile.

Five different prairies in the State of Illinois bear the name of Round Prairie, of which—

The first is in Schuyler county, four miles in diameter; dry, fertile, and surrounded by woods.

The second is in Wabash county, north-east of Mount Carmel, with a diameter of four miles: has an excellent soil.

The third is in Bond county, six miles north-west of Greenville, with a diameter of nearly two miles: is rolling, very fertile, and surrounded by forests.

The fourth is in Perry county, about eight miles from Pinckneyville: it has but a small circumference.

The fifth is in Sangamon county, seven miles south-east of Springfield: it is very productive.

Salt Prairie, in Calhoun county, forms a small strip, half a mile broad and six miles long; it is dry and fertile.

Sand Prairie, in Tazewell county, four miles south of Pekin, has a sandy, good soil.

Seven-mile Prairie, in White county, seven miles west of Carmi.

Shipley's Prairie, in Wayne county, five miles south-east of Fairfield.

Shoal-Creek Prairie runs from Clinton through Bond into Montgomery county, with an average breadth of eight miles, gently undulating, and containing much good land.

Six's Prairie, in Brown county, seventeen miles south-west of Rushville, is ten miles by three in extent, undulating, dry, productive, and surrrounded by woods.

Six-mile Prairie, in the south-western section of Madison county, consisting of alluvial ground, is inclosed by woods.

Another prairie of the same name is situated in Perry county, nine miles south of Pinckneyville, nine miles long by six broad, with tolerably good soil.

Smooth Prairie, in Madison county, eight miles east of Alton, is three miles by two in extent being level and somewhat humid.

South Prairie, in Morgan county, on the southern side of Walnut Creek.

Squaw Prairie, in Boone county, is level and fertile, containing about ten square miles.

String Prairie, in Greene county, commences four miles west of Carrollton, running fifteen miles east, with a breadth of from one to three miles; is level, and a good tract of land upon the whole.

Sweet's Prairie, in Scott county, three miles west of Manchester, is level and washy.

Swett's Prairie, in Madison county, four miles north-east of Edwardsville.

Three-mile Prairie, in Washington county, eight miles south of Nashville, is undulating.

Tonis Prairie, in Wayne county, six miles north-east of Fairfield, has second rate soil.

Totten's Prairie, in Fulton county, seven miles north-west of Lewiston, is ten miles long and of varying breadth. The soil is good.

Turney's Prairie, in Wayne county, eight miles south of Fairfield, has a small circumference and a good soil.

Twelve-mile Prairie, in Effingham county, reaches into Clay county; level and humid at intervals.

Another "Twelve-mile Prairie," situated in St. Clair county, is somewhat rolling, having a good soil.

Union Prairie, in the south-eastern section of Clark county, is five miles long by three broad.

Another prairie bearing the same name (Union Prairie), lies in Schuyler county, four miles west of Rushville.

Village Prairie, in Edwards county, two miles north of Albion, is about three miles long.

Walnut Hill Prairie reaches from Jefferson into Marion county; it is four miles by three, some parts of it being fertile, others humid and level.

Walnut Prairie, in Clark county, extends five miles by two, having a fertile, though somewhat sandy soil.

Webb's Prairie, in Franklin county, fifteen miles north-east of Frankfort, has a fertile soil.

Wood's Prairie, in Wabash county, ten miles distant from Mount Carmel, is very productive.

Having enumerated above the prairies which are known by their own proper names, we cannot leave it unmentioned, that there are many others bearing indifferent names; Illinois having in general such an abundance of prairies, that nearly two-thirds of its area consist of them.

There are no mountains in Illinois; in the southern as well as in the northern part of the State, there are a few hills; near the banks of the Illinois, Mississippi, and several other rivers, the ground is elevated, forming the so-called bluffs, on which, at the present day, may be found, uneffaced by the hands of Time, the marks and traces left by the water, which was formerly much higher, and gradually lowered; whence it may be safe to conclude, that where now the fertile prairies of Illinois extend, and the rich soil of the country yields its golden harvests, must have once been a vast sheet of water, the mud deposited by which formed the soil, thus accounting for the present great fertility of the country.

In relation to the quality of its soils, Illinois is generally divided as follows:

First, the alluvial land on the margins of the rivers, and extending with a breadth varying from half a mile or a mile to seven or eight miles. Wherever it is elevated, this country is of an extraordinary fertility; at those places where it is low, and consequently exposed to inundations, it is a very unsafe matter to attempt cultivating it. The most extensive tract of alluvial land is the so-called American Bottom, which was thus named at the time it formed the western boundary of the United States; it stretches from the junction of the Kaskaskia with the Mississippi, along the latter to the mouth of the Missouri, containing about 450 square miles, or 288,000 acres.

Secondly, the table-land, fifty to a hundred feet higher than the alluvial land; this commences at the slopes, by which the latter is encompassed; it consists principally of prairies, which, according to their respectively higher or lower situations, are either dry, or humid and marshy.

Thirdly, the somewhat hilly sections of the State, which, alternately consisting of wood and prairie, are on the whole not as fertile as either the alluvial or table land.

The soil of Illinois is unsurpased in fertility by that of any other State, there being no room for doubt, that at the time it shall have been settled throughout its entire extent, the produce of its harvests will surpass that of many other States together. Where in the world could a fertility be found equal to that of the American Bottom, which, ever since it was settled by the French, about 150 years ago, has, without any manuring whatever, yielded, year after year, the most abundant crops of Indian corn?

CLIMATE.

Upon looking at the map of the Upper Mississippi, we have before us that very extensive net of streams and rivers which is bounded in the west, below the junction of the Ohio and Mississippi, by the Ozark Mountains, through which the Arkansas and Red Rivers have forced their passage; and in the east, by the projecting ridge of the Alleghany Mountains. High lands, elevated 2000 feet above the level of the sea, divide this district in the north from the Arctic river-district, together with which it was undoubtedly covered by a vast sheet of water, at an early period of the formation of the earth; the hills separating it from Lake Superior, which is situated 600 feet above the level of the sea, do not rise more than 1000 feet above it, and the boundary line dividing it from the river-district of the St. Lawrence, runs along the shores of the other great lakes. No chain of mountains, therefore, properly speaking, separates in the north this enormous territory, a small portion of which constitutes the State of Illinois, from the plateaux projecting to the north, which circumstance must necessarily exercise a decisive influence upon the climate of the State, situated as it is between the 43d and 37th degrees of north latitude, and separated by seven degrees from the Gulf of Mexico.

A sea open at all times of the year separates Europe from the North Pole; and the Mediterranean Sea washes between it and Africa; this will sufficiently account for her mederate climate. A frozen region, sending during winter its icy blasts after the flying sun, bounds North America on the north, while her southern coast, penetrated in the summer by the almost perpendicular rays of a burning sun, radiates its accumulated heat to the north. This will explain why a country situated within the same degrees of latitude with Spain and Italy, has cold winters and hot summers.

Illinois has an average temperature, which, if compared with that of Europe, equals that of Middle Germany; its winter is more severe than that at Copenhagen, and her summer as warm as those of Milan or Palermo. Compared with the other States of the Union, Northern Illinois possesses a temperature similar to that of Northern Pennsylvania or Southern New York, while the temperature of Southern Illinois will not differ much from that of Kentucky or Virginia.

THE PRAIRIES.

The most remarkable and striking feature, distinguishing the State of Illinois from the other States of the Union, consists in her extensive prairies, which, covered with a luxuriant growth of grass, and forming excellent natural meadows, by reason of which circumstance they received their present name from the earlier French settlers, commence on a comparatively small scale, near Lake Erie, and occupy the chief part of the land about Lake Michigan, the upper Wabash, and the Illinois, predominating in the vicinity of the Mississippi; so that this entire region is, properly speaking, nothing but a vast prairie, intersected by strips of woods, chiefly confined to the banks and the valleys of the rivers. The prairies are characterized by the absence of timber; they present, in other respects, the same varieties of soil and surface that are found elsewhere; some extend in immense level plains, others are rolling, others again broken by hills, while nearly all of them possess an inexhaustible fertility, and but few are sterile.

The prairies of Illinois may be divided into three classes: the alluvial, or wet, the dry, or undulating, and the bushy.

Those denominated alluvial, or wet prairies, are generally on the banks of the rivers, though sometimes at a distance from them; their soil, consisting of a deep stratum of alluvial land upon clayish ground, is black, friable, and of unsurpassed fertility, admirably adapted to the culture of Indian corn and wheat, and even of grapes, as may be judged from the specimens of wild grapes, which in these prairies exhibit a very luxuriant growth, and from the results hitherto known attending the attempts at vine culture, made in several parts of the State.

The dry or undulating prairies have but few springs. In general, the undulations are so slight, that if it were not for the ravines made by freshets, one might suppose that there was no inclination at all. Their fertility varies greatly, the prairie being in general considered the more productive, the more undulating its surface.

The bushy prairies have an abundant supply of wholesome water, and are covered with hazel and furze bushes, together with small sassafras shrubs, interspersed with grape-vines. Many species of garden-sage, mug-worth, dogwood, and an exhaustless variety and exuberance of gay, herbaceous plants, also grow on these prairies. Early in March the forests begin to blossom—the Loncera Flava, L., or yellow-flowered honeysuckle, and the Jasminum fructicans, or yellow jasmine, diffuse their delicious fragrance through the air, while the red tufts of the Judas-tree (Cercis Canadensis,) unfold their brilliant charms to the eye of the admiring lover of nature.

Of the prairies, the following lines by Captain Basil Hall, an intelligent English traveler, are highly descriptive:

"The charm of a prairie consists in its extension—its green, flowery carpet, its undulating surface, and the skirt of forest whereby it is surrounded; the latter feature being of all others the most significant and expressive, since it characterizes the landscape, and defines the form and boundary of the plain. If the prairie is little, its greatest beauty consists in the vicinity of the encompassing edge of forests, which may be compared to the shores of a lake, being intersected with many deep, inward bends, as so many inlets, and at intervals projecting very far, not unlike a promontory, or protruding arm of land. These projections sometimes so closely approach each other, that the traveler passing through between them, may be said to walk in the midst of an alley overshadowed by the forest, before he enters again upon another broad prairie. Where the plain is extensive, the delineations of the forest in the far background appear as would a misty coast at some distance upon the ocean. The eye sometimes surveys the green prairie without discovering on the illimitable plain a tree or bush, or any other object, save the wilderness of flowers and grass, while on other occasions the view is enlivened by the groves dispersed like islands over the plain, or by a solitary tree rising above the wilderness. The resemblance to the sea which some of these prairies exhibited was really most striking. I had heard of this before, but always supposed the account exaggerated. There is one spot in particular, near the middle of Grand Prairie, if I recollect rightly, where the ground happened to be of the rolling character above alluded to, and where, excepting in the article of color, and that was not widely different from the tinge of some seas, the similarity was so striking that I almost forgot where I was. This deception was heightened by a circumstance which I had often heard mentioned, but the force of which perhaps none but a seaman could fully estimate; I mean the appearance of the distant insulated trees as they gradually rose above the horizon, or receded from our view. They were so exactly like strange sails bearing in sight, that I am sure, if two or three sailors had been present, they would almost have agreed as to what canvass those magical vessels were carrying. Of one they would all have said, 'Oh! she is going nearly before the wind, with top-gallant studding-sails set.' Of another, 'she has got her canvass hauled up, and is going by the wind.' And of a third they might say, 'she is certainly standing toward us, but what sail she has set is not quite clear.'

"In spring, when the young grass has just clothed the soil with a soddy carpet of the most delicate green, but especially when the sun, rising behind a distant elevation of the ground, its rays are reflected by myriads of dew drops, a more pleasing and more eye-benefitting view cannot be imagined. You see the fallow deer quietly feeding on the herbage; the bee flies humming through the air; the wolf, with lowered tail, sneaks away to its distant lair, with the timorous pace of a creature only too well conscious of having disturbed the peace of nature; prairie-fowls, either in entire tribes, like our own domestic fowls, or in couples, cover the surface; the males rambling, and, like turkeys or peacocks, inflating their plumage, make the air resound with a drawled, loud and melancholy cry, resembling the cooing of a wood-pigeon, or still more, the sound produced by rapidly rubbing a tambourine with the finger. The multitude of these birds is so surprisingly great, as to have occasioned the proverbial phrase, 'that if a settler on the prairie expresses a desire for a dish of omelets, his wife will walk out at night and place her bonnet on the open ground, to find it full of eggs on her return next morning.' The plain is literally covered with them in every direction, and if a heavy fall of snow had driven them from the ground, I could see myriads of them clustered around the tops of the trees skirting the prairie. They do not migrate, even after the prairie is already settled, but remain in the high grass, near the newly-established farms; and I often saw them at no great distance from human habitations, familiarly mingle with the poultry of the settlers. They can be easily captured and fed, and I doubt not but they can be easily tamed.

"On turning from the verdant plain to the forests or groups of high-grown timber, the eye, at the said season, will find them clad also in the most lively colors. The rich under and brushwood stands out in full blossom. The andromedeas, the dogwood, the wood-apple, the wild plum and cherry, grow exuberantly on rich soil, and the invisible blossom of the wild vine impregnates the air with its delicious perfume. The variety of the wild fruit-trees, and of blooming bushes, is so great, and so immense the abundance of the blossoms they are covered with, that the branches seem to break down under their weight, and the eye of the spectator comes very near being over satiated.

"The delightful aspect of the prairie, its amenities, and the absence of that sombre awe inspired by forests, contribute to forcing away that sentiment of loneliness which usually steals upon the mind of the solitary wanderer in the wilderness, for although he espies no habitation, and sees no human being, and knows himself to be far off from every settlement of man, he can scarcely defend himself from believing that he is travelling through a landscape embellished by human art. The flowers are so delicate and elegant as apparently to be distributed for mere ornament over the plain, the groves and groups of trees seem to be dispersed over the prairie to enliven the landscape, and we can scarcely get rid of the impression invading our imagination, of the whole scene being flung out and created for the satisfaction of the sentiment of beauty in refined man. The similarity of the whole frequently reminds the Englishman of the extensive parks of the great aristocratical palaces he used to admire in his country; the grass plots, the shaded walks, groves and bushes, produced there by a designing art, nature has spontaneously created here; and nothing but proud structures of lordly mansions, and the view of distant towns or villages, are wanting to make the resemblance complete."

As to the origin of the prairie-lands, various speculations have been indulged, giving rise to a diversity of opinions, the least tenable of which is that, according to which stately forests once covered these plains, afterwards being destroyed by fire; for nothing is better established than the fact, that the travelers who first entered upon these plains, 200 years ago, and gave them their present name, found them destitute of woods and forests; and, moreover, evidence may be adduced to the effect of showing, that wherever those dangerous enemies of the forests, the Indians and buffaloes, were expelled, and the settlers commenced planting trees, as well as in the vicinity of extensive inhabited tracts, the grass will at once recede, giving full scope for the forest to develop itself. In proof of our position, that these prairies were not formerly covered by forests, we may also refer to the immense savannahs and Llanos of South America and Middle Africa, where traces of former forests have yet to be discovered. Thus the late distinguished English traveler, Mungo Park, speaks of the plains of Mandingo, in Western Africa, as having probably existed there since the earliest times; he also describes their annual burning in the same manner in which that of the prairies in the Western States would be described now; the practice there, according to his account, being attended with the same results as here, the country there being also within a short time covered with a luxuriant growth of young and tender grass, on which the cattle feed with avidity.

According to another opinion, the truth of which is highly probable, the level surface of the State of Illinois was formed by inundations. The whole of the State, from a few miles north of the Ohio, where the prairies commence, affords tolerably conclusive evidence of having been once covered with water, which, having forced itself a passage, whereby it was drained off, the ground was left with a rich, soft, muddy, level surface, much of which was afterwards successively worn off by waters formed from the effect of rain; whence it will not be difficult to account for the greater dryness of the more elevated undulating prairie lands.

From whatever cause the prairies took their origin, they are no doubt perpetuated by the annual fires that have swept over them, from an era probably long anterior to the earliest records of history, and still often continue, lit by the hunters, in order to frighten and bewilder the game that bounds over these prairies, and thus render them an easy prey, or to replace the old grass by a luxuriant growth of tender herbage, which might serve as nourishment for the deer. Where the soil is too wet to produce a heavy annual growth of grass sufficient to sustain a strong fire, there is no prairie. Forests prevail along the streams, and in other places where vegetation does not suffer from the drought of the latter part of the summer and early autumn, and, therefore, is less combustible than in the open plains. And the prairies themselves, wherever they do predominate, as will be found invariably the case on dry level regions, exposed to the heat of the sun, may be easily converted into wooded land, by destroying with the plough the tough sward which has formed itself on them. There are large tracts of country where a number of years ago the farmers mowed their hay, that are now covered with a forest of young, rapidly-growing timber.

AGRICULTURE.

If any State of the Union is adapted for agriculture, and the other branches of rural economy relating thereto, such as the raising of cattle, and the culture of fruit trees, it is pre-eminently Illinois, whose extremely fertile prairies recompense the farmer at less trouble than he would be obliged to incur elsewhere, in order to attain the same results. Her virgin soil, adapted by nature for immediate culture, only awaits the plough and the seed, in order to mature within a few months golden ears of the most beautiful Indian corn, the heaviest wheat, and such other species of corn as are indigenous in the temperate zones. Here the husbandman is not obliged for whole years to squander his best strength in clearing the primitive forest, hewing down gigantic trees, and rooting out stumps and weeds, in order to gain, after each and every year of toilsome labor, in the sweat of his brow, another patch of arable ground; but the soil only wants common tilling; here the farmer is not obliged to gather the stones from his acres, the soil being but little encumbered with them. Here no manure is wanted to fertilize the soil; it consists here of a rich, black mould, several feet deep, that is almost inexhaustibly fertile, and capable of producing the richest fruit, year after year, for entire generations. The Illinoisian farmer who cares not to improve the land, or enhance its fertility, as he should, has nothing to do but to plough, sow and reap; less labor is here required than at other places where the usual demands of agriculture must first be satisfied. Hence a man of small means can more rapidly acquire wealth in this State than at places where he must waste his best time and strength in occupations not required here.

The vegetable products of Illinois are especially, Indian corn, which is the staple commodity; wheat, which thrives well in all parts of the State; and also oats, barley, rye, buckwheat, potatoes, sweet potatoes, flax, hemp, peas, clover, cabbage, rapes, and the ordinary pot-herbs, tobacco, and the bean from which the castor-oil (ol. ricini) is obtained, are cultivated here; of the latter, enough is raised for home use. Cotton, in the southern part of the State, is now being cultivated to some extent; and sorghum so extensively everywhere, that it will soon become a great staple.

SOIL.

In regard to agriculture, the soil of Illinois is divided into three classes. On the prairies it is a vegetable mould of different depths, on a substratum from three to four feet thick, of rich mulatto loam or clay, being in most cases entirely free from stones, and requiring only a single tilling in order to produce all the various species of corn and fruits peculiar to these latitudes. The wild grass growing on the prairies furnishes a very nutritious article of food, which will at once account for the universal renown of the beef of Illinois.

The bottom lands skirted by the rivers are of extraordinary fertility, but exposed to frequent inundations, and covered with tall forest trees. Here the vegetable mould attains a depth of from three to twelve feet; its inexhaustibility is easily accounted for by the consideration that the rivers, impregnated with the humus of the prairies through which they flow, deposit it in the bottom lands, whenever a rise of the water causes the latter to be inundated.

The soil of the openings, covered with scattered trees of the forest, and these mostly oak, though not as good as that of the prairies, will yet yield as fine a crop without any manure as can be obtained in the Eastern States with the aid of manure.

But it should be added that the character of the soil differs in the different sections of the State. The substratum is clay (this is invariably the case in Central Illinois), which precludes the idea that the fertility of the soil ever could be lost. By injudicious tillage the lands may, after years, tire, but can never be worn out. Upon the large water-courses, and in the extreme north and south, the soil is sandy, and the substratum sand and gravel, with some clay. In Central Illinois the soil is without sand; on the undulating, or rolling prairies, the soil is of a mulatto, or yellow cast; on the level lands it is black; but no difference can be discovered in the fertility of these two kinds of soil, both producing equally well all kinds of grain and grasses. The depth of the black soil is from twenty to thirty inches; the yellow from fifteen to twenty-four inches. It is the prevailing opinion that the level or table-lands stand a drought better than the rolling. The soil in Central Illinois partakes largely of limestone, without the appearance of the stone itself, therefore rendering it the more valuable and easy of cultivation, and causing it to stand a long and continued drought, with less injury to growing crops than those portions of the country where rock is interspersed through the cultivated lands.

BREAKING THE SOIL.—It is difficult to place a man in any situation where he feels more like an honest conqueror than he does when turning over the verdant turf of the prairies. His plough must have a keen edge, and cut from twenty-two to thirty-six inches wide. A thin sod of two or three inches thick is cut smooth and turned completely upside down. The bottom of the furrow and top of the reversed sod are as smooth as if sliced with a keen knife. Every green thing is turned out of sight, and nothing is visible but the fresh soil. When the prairie is broken, and the sod has time to decompose, the land is thoroughly subdued, and in a good condition for any crop—not a stump or a stone in the way, over a whole quarter section; free from weeds, rich, fresh and mellow; it is the fault of the farmer if it is not kept so.

FACILITIES OF CULTIVATION.

There is probably no state in the Union where there are greater facilities for cultivation of the soil than in this. Its great productiveness and breadth of prairie, with so little of obstruction to any kind of machine, however large, has stimulated invention upon invention, in endless variety. Our advertising columns indicate this from many of the manufacturers of plows, reapers, drilling machines, cultivators, grain separators, etc., in which great ingenuity and skill has been expended. We may truly add, that some of the most beautiful and excellent agricultural machines, are to be found manufactured in almost every large town in the State. Besides this, the public spirit of Illinois farmers induce them to buy freely every improved machine, and the encouragement thereby given to inventors, is an immense stimulent to the development of improvements which are annually introduced in considerable number, and exhibited at the annual state and verious county fairs.

THE ILLINOIS STATE AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY

Was organized by a convention of the friends of agriculture, convened for that purpose in Springfield, January 5th, 1853.

A constitution was adopted and the following officers elected to serve for the year 1853–1854: President, James N. Brown, Sangamon county; Vice Presidents, George Hascall, Winnebago county; John A. Kennicott, Cook county; J. E. McClun, McLean county; Smith Fry, Peoria county; M. Collins, Adams county; Francis Arenz, Cass county; H. C. Johns, Piatt county; C. W. Webster, Marion county; J. Mitchell, Wayne county; Recording Secretary, Paschel P. Enos, Sangamon county; Corresponding Secretary, Bronson Murray, LaSalle county; Treasurer, E. N. Powell, Peoria county.

The object of the Society is stated, in the constitution, to be "the promotion of agriculture, horticulture, manufactures, mechanics and household arts."

On February 8th, 1853, an act of the Legislature was passed and approved by the Governor, incorporating the Society, and on February 11th, an act was passed and approved, appropriating one thousand dollars per annum for two years to the Society for the promotion of the objects of its organization.

The annual exhibitions have been held as follows: 1853–1854, at Springfield; 1855, at Chicago; 1856, at Alton; 1857, at Peoria; 1858, at Centralia; 1859, at Freeport; 1860, at Jacksonville; 1861, at Chicago; 1862 was to have been held at Peoria, but the military authorities taking possession of the grounds, and converting them into camp of rendezvous no exhibition could be held; 1863, at Decatur; 1864, will be held at Decatur, commencing Sept. 12th, and continuing six days. In the main these annual exhibitions have been eminently successful.

FIELD TRIALS of implements have been held at Jacksonville, Bloomington, Dixon and Decatur, and their good results have been most plainly manifested. It is now the settled policy of the Society to award no premium to any agricultural implement or machine without first testing its merits in competition on actual trial.

Besides these shows on the fair grounds and trials on the field, the executive committee meet annually in January, at the rooms of the Society at Springfield, and award premiums on essays, farms, nurseries, gardens, orchards, field crops, dairy and vineyard products, and, in addition to all these methods of diffusing information, the society issues a quarterly journal, and publishes biennially a volume of transactions.

Correspondence is maintained with the State Horticultural Society, all the county agricultural societies in the State (some 95), with the societies of other States, and the U. S. Department of Agriculture at Washington—the most kindly relation existing with each.

Under the fostering care of the State Agricultural Society and kindred organizations, the development of the resources of Illinois has progressed with great rapidity, and she is rising with quick and certain strides to a position not second to any other in all the essential elements of a great commonwealth.

The officers of the Society at present are: Executive Committee—President, Wm. H. Van Epps, Dixon—elected in 1860; Ex-President, Lewis Ellsworth; Vice Presidents, Charles H. Rosenstiel, Freeport; A. J. Mattson, Prophetstown; R. H. Whiting, Galesburg; R. H. Holden, Bloomington; J. W. Singleton, Quincy; A. B. McConnell, Springfield; W. Kile, Paris; H. S. Ozburn, Pinckneyville.

Board of Counsellors—Ex-President, James N. Brown, Berlin; H. C. Johns, Decatur; C. W. Webster, Salem.

Treasurer, John W. Bunn, Springfield; Recording Secretary, John W. Bunn, Springfield; Corresponding Secretary, John P. Reynolds—office at the rooms of the Society, Springfield.

NATURAL RESOURCES OF ILLINOIS.

[Prepared by C. D. Wilber.]

GENERAL GEOLOGY.—The geological features of the State of Illinois are not of a complex character, and can be easily described. Thorough surveys, made by D. D. Owen, Dr. Norwood, Mr. Worthen, and the recent survey under the direction of the State Natural History Society, have made apparent the leading facts concerning the natural resources of nearly every county in our commonwealth. The whole series of rock formations may be classified and arranged as follows, beginning at the bottom of the series:

I. Lower Silurian—1. Calciferous sandstone, 100 ft. thick; 2. St. Peter's sandstone, 150 ft.; 3. Galena, or Trenton limestone, 300 ft.; 4. Hudson River group, 100 ft. II. Upper Silurian—1. Niagara limestone, 300 ft. III. Devonian—1. Oriskany sandstone, 50 ft.; 2. Hamilton group, 120 ft.; 3. Black slate, 40 ft. IV. Mountain Limestone, or Sub-Carboniferous—1. Kinderhook group, 100 feet.; 2. Burlington limestone, 200 ft.; 3. Keokuk limestone, 100 ft.; 4. St. Louis limestone, 200 ft.; 5. Ferruginous sandstone, 100 ft.; 6. Chester limestone, 250 ft. V. Carboniferous—1. Millstone grit, 300 ft.; 2. Coal measures, 900 ft. VI. Tertiary—1. Clay beds, &c., 200 ft. VII. Quaternary—1. Alluvium, 150 ft.

The entire average thickness of all the rock formations is nearly 4,000 feet. The general dip or inclination of these formations in Northern Illinois is toward the south-west, giving the Silurian divisions to this part of the State, limited by a line drawn nearly parallel with the Chicago & Rock Island Railway. Along the Mississippi River the dip is east and west, on an anticlinal axis, breaking in two parts the great western coal field.

In Southern Illinois, along that portion of the Ozark range within our limits, the inclination is nearly north and south.

The extensive and varied inclination of our geological formations, caused by these axes of elevation, cut through in all directions by our large river system, permits an easy study of ou rock, mineral and coal treasures. Thus the Mississippi River, from Dunleith to Cairo, a distance of 600 miles, falls 320 feet, cutting through inclined strata, an equivalent of over 3,000 feet in thickness.

The Silurian division, or, region of quarries, occupies Northern Illinois, and comprises an area of 17,000 square miles.

The Mountain Limestone district, called sub-carboniferous, affording also excellent quarries, occupies the western part of the State, commencing a little above Rock Island and terminating near Golconda. Its area is about 6,500 square miles.

The Carboniferous, or Coal district proper, covers the largest portion of the State. Its area is 35,000 square miles, and includes the following counties, and parts of counties, the coal boundary dividing unequally the counties bordering on the coal field:—Rock Island, Henry, Mercer, Knox, Stark, Bureau, Putnam, Marshall, LaSalle, Grundy, Livingston, Kankakee, Will, Iroquois, Ford, McLean, Woodford, Tazewell, Peoria, Fulton, McDonough, Warren, Hancock, Adams, Brown, Mason, Cass, Menard, Morgan, Scott, Sangamon, Logan, Dewitt, Macon, Piatt, Champaign, Vermilion, Edgar, Douglas, Coles, Clark, Cumberland, Shelby, Moultrie, Christian, Montgomery, Macoupin, Greene, Jersey, Madison, Bond, Fayette, Clinton, Marion, Clay, Effingham, Jasper, Crawford, Lawrence, Wabash, Richland, Edwards, Wayne, White, Hamilton, Jefferson, Franklin, Perry, Washington, St. Clair, Monroe, Randolph, Jackson, Williamson, Saline, Gallatin, Pope, Johnson and Hardin.

The general railway system of Illinois intersects or passes through different parts of the great coal field, each railroad having coal subjacent, as follows:—Illinois Central, 372 miles; Chicago & Rock Island, 166 miles; Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, 228 miles; Chicago & Alton, 200 miles; Logansport, Peoria & Burlington, 108 miles; Great Western, 192 miles; Terre Haute, Alton & St. Louis, 175 miles; Ohio & Mississippi, 140 miles.

Coal mining has just begun to assume importance. The principal mining operations have been confined to working coal in ravines, either by stripping off the upper surface, soil, clay, &c., or by drifting or driving lanes, opening laterally. The proximity of our coals to the surface, permits this mode in all parts of the State, except the interior, where, on account of drift beds, the coal strata are from 200 to 400 feet below the surface. The average depth to the first working bed of coal does not exceed 50 feet. There are four strata or beds of coal in various portions of the great coal field, only two having been worked to any considerable extent. The following section of the shaft at LaSalle, exhibits the coal beds—their thickness, distances apart, and depths from surface:

1st bed—6 feet below surface; thickness, 6 inches. 2d bed—178 feet below; thickness, 5 feet. 3d bed—235 feet below; thickness, 6 feet. 4th bed—385 feet below; thickness, 4 feet. The distances apart are respectively 172 feet, 57 feet, and 147 feet.

Since coal seams occupy a general level, like a floor, the depth at which any given seam of coal may be found, can be usually determined by the topography of the country.

The principal coal shafts are located at LaSalle, Braceville, Fairbury, Sheffield, Kewanee, Colchester, Alton, Bellville, Caseyville, Danville, Duquoin and St. Johns. Coal is also extensively mined in ravines, viz: at Morris, Canton, Bryant Station, C. B. & Q. R. R., Murphysboro, Peoria, and at various points along the Vermilion and Illinois Rivers. The The total amount raised from the mines per annum, is estimated at 650,000 tons. The demand is rapidly increasing, and judging from recent discoveries of coal in new localities, we shall soon exhume and consume 1,000,000 tons per annum. The whole amount consumed in the United States is about 20,000,000 tons. Great Britain, with a coal field one-third as large as ours, consumes each year from her own mines 80,000,000 tons. France 6,000,000 tons. Belgium 10,000,000 tons. It is easy to infer the future importance of our coal trade.

The Illinois coal field is estimated by Prof. H. D. Rogers, to contain 1,277,500,000,000 tons! The Pennsylvania coal field contains 316,400,000,000 tons! All the coal fields of North America, 4,000,000,000,000 tons! The coal fields of Great Britain contain 190,000,000,000 tons!

The economy of coal burning is obvious from the following facts:

If wood cost per cord $6, and coal, per ton, $4,50, the latter is cheaper in the ratio of 65 to 100 on passenger trains, and on freight trains, in the ratio of 71 to 100.

With a train of five cars, the expense with wood as fuel, was seven-eights of a cent per mile; with coal, one-half of a cent per mile.

In the yearly statement of the chief engineer of the Illinois Central Railroad for 1860, we find the cost of running freight engines using coal, was 17.81, and the same using wood, 26.60, or in that ratio per mile.

The cheapness of coals is, more apparent especially in manufacturing, when we consider its power to produce a large amount of heat. To illustrate, let us compare the heating power of several combustibles: seasoned wood will yield 2.567° of heat; turf, 2.732°; bituminous coal, 4.082°; anthracite coal, 4.170°; coke, 4.352.

For domestic purposes the economy of coal over wood is still greater.

In respect to quality, the Illinois coals, which are all bituminous, compare favorably with any American coals. As a general rule, preference is given to eastern coals, which undergo a thorough inspection, cleaning etc., before they are sent to market. In the Western States there is little or no care in mining, hence, our coals are said to abound in sulphur and earthy matter. The impurities referred to can be easily disposed of by selecting and screening at the mines. The complaint, however, will not pass away until we bake or coke our coals, as in France and England. This can be done in large ovens, made for the purpose, near the coal markets. The cost of making excellent coke need not exceed 30 cents per ton.

We must make the best of our coals. We can not import largely, and we cannot change or mend our coal strata, but we can make them meet every want; smelting ores, driving engines, cooking, heating, etc., by a simple and cheap process. They will serve future generations, 100,000 years, and then not be exhausted.

Very careful chemical analyses have been made of American coals, and the following results have been obtained:

These analyses show that we have a number of beds of coal in this State, which equal, in every respect, the very best coals of the Mississippi and Ohio valleys. In thickness and other requisites for cheap and profitable mining, they are not surpassed by those of any other portion of the west, and there is only needed enterprise, capital and energy, to develop a source of wealth in our State, at present scarcely thought of, and which is incalculable.

Iron is found in considerable quantity in the southern part of the State. In Hardin county large deposits have been found in a long range of hills, bearing north-east and south west. Adjacent are extensive coal beds, containing coal of excellent quality. Iron manufacture has been commenced in this region, and extensive arrangements are being made to prosecute this branch of industry.

About two and one-half miles west of the Illinois Central Railroad, and nearly four miles north of Jonesboro', on Section 34, Town 11 S. Range, 2 West of 3d P. M., there occurs a ridge bearing east of north and west of south, which rises quite abruptly to the hight of more than 200 feet above the valley. This ridge has appropriately received the name of the Iron Mountain. The base of the hill for 50 feet or more consists of fissile shale, succeeded by 80 feet of chert, intermingled with masses of hematitic iron ore, often in a state of great purity; the whole being capped by a cherty limestone, 79 feet thick.

These deposits have been slightly explored, but there is little doubt that here is stored an inexhaustible supply of very rich ores, and under circumstances which admit of their being profitably wrought. These deposits belong to the sub-carboniferous series.

The largest deposits of iron ore hitherto discovered, and of quality unsurpassed by any, are in the State of Missouri, 100 miles from St. Louis, by the Iron Mountain Railroad, and 40 miles from the nearest coal basin—Murphysboro—a few miles from the Mississippi River. They form a part of the Ozark Range of Mountains, which are exceedingly rich in Minerals, iron occupying the summits, and lead being found along the sloping sides. The principal wonder of this extensive range, however, is Pilot Knob, so called from being used as a land mark, or guide to travelers in the early settlement of the country. It is 581 feet high, with a circumference at the base of six miles. It is simply a solid iron cone, so nearly pure, that, with a blacksmith's forge, horse shoes have been made from the ore direct. It is estimated to contain 60,000,000 tons, of a quality equal to the best Russia Iron.

The Iron Mountain proper is six miles north of Pilot Knob. Its entire mass, which is a Specular Oxide, contains 1,655,280,000 cubic feet, or 230,187,375 tons! But this is only a fraction of the ore at this locality. The nature of the ore, the plutonic character of the associated rocks, and the position of the mineral beneath the level of the valley, and the sedimentary rocks at the base of the mountain, all indicate its igneous origin, and that it extends downwards indefinitely. It will yield 3,000,000 tons of iron for every foot of descent.

Shepherd Mountain, two miles distant from Pilot Knob, is both a Specular and Magnetic Oxide of Iron. The ore occurs in large dikes, running in various directions, cutting the mountain into sections. Large quantities of this ore have been sent to Pittsburg, and manufactured into steel, no other ore on the continent being of equal value for this important purpose. One can find on this mountain large masses of natural magnets of great force lying loose or projecting from the main dikes of ore. They are intimately connected with our industrial interests, because all coals for smelting these rich ores, must be taken from our State, or the ores must be carried to the coal.

The Laclede Iron Company of St. Louis have been manufacturing iron in this manner, during the past seven years, with a degree of success which indicates that St. Louis will become one of the great iron marts of the world. A similar transportation of ores, from Lake Superior to Chicago—where coal and coke from our vast coal fields can be easily and cheaply obtained, has been inaugurated, to meet the demand for iron manufacture in the States and Territories of the Northwest.

Lead has for many years been a leading article of export. The Great Lead, or Galena district occupies a portion of three States, Illinois, Wisconsin and Iowa, and extends, according to James Hall, State Geologist of New York, over an area 87 miles in length and 45 in width, containing 4,000 square miles. The amount of lead annually raised and exported from this district is about 30,000,000 lbs., the cash value being nearly $2,000,000. Although mining has been carried on during a period of fifty years, it is estimated that not more than one thousandth part of this vast lead deposit has been taken away. The ore—Galena—is always found in combination with sulphur, forming a sulphuret. It is easily reducible in a common open furnace or oven; hence the large profits realized in this branch of industry. It is found in chambers or pockets, sometimes called leads or lodes. These chambers are generally found in a direct line, east and west—a fact of great value to miners. They are also foundat various levels, the lower range or course of chambers containing the largest amounts of ore.

Associated with Galena, the ores of zinc are found in large quantities. They have until recently been regarded of but little value, on account of the cost of separating zinc from its ore, which, like Galena, is a sulphuret. With good success, experiments have been made to separate them, and several manufactories have been erected. Of these one is at LaSalle, and another at Mineral Point, Wisconsin.

Silex, or deposits of sand suitable for glass manufacture, are found in Northern and Southern Illinois. They have been caused by the disintegration of St. Peter's sandstone through aqueous and atmospheric agencies, which have also distributed these sands in the lowlands along the principal rivers. A superior quality of glass has been made from these beds of silex. The supply of sand for the glass factories of Pittsburg is derived mainly from such deposits, found below Cape Girardeau, on the Mississippi River. The question naturally suggests itself—Cannot we manufacture glass at far cheaper rates, since we have all the materials required near at hand?

Salt abounds in the south-east portion of the State, in Saline, Gallatin and Hardin counties. 50,000 bushels per annum have been manufactured, no attempts having yet been made to produce salt on a large scale. Salt water has also been found, by deep borings, in various parts of the State.

Clays, for pottery, crockery, porcelain, &c., are distributed in great abundance. In Southern Illinois we have the greatest variety of valuable clays for all purposes. An extensive deposit of pure clay occurs near Mound City, adjacent to the Grand Chain, as it is called, on the Ohio River. It has a light yellow color, and produces beautiful ware. The proprietor of the pottery works at Mound City succeeded in manufacturing a great variety of ware, and coating or lining each article with an uniform thickness of glass. This result or discovery is very desirable, especially in fruit jars, which was the leading article of the establishment.

The range of mountains running across Southern Illinois is interspersed with beds of clay, or kaolin—that is, such clays as will produce the finest qualities of crockery. We have visited many of these deposits, some tinged with delicate hues, and others almost pure white. They will prove, at no distant day, a source of great profit to the enterprising manufacturer.

A considerable number of kaolin beds have been discovered near the Illinois Central Railroad, in the vicinity of Cobden and Anna, which are eligible situations for manufactures of this new and important traffic in our State.

The manufacture of pottery from our own clays is now attracting considerable attention. Several establishments on an extensive scale are in active operation. The largest of these is located at Peoria, and is under the direction of the American Pottery Company.

A peculiar clay has been found at Utica, on the C. & R. I. R. R., which is extensively used in the manufacture of cement. It consists of a stratum several feet in thickness, occuring in the silurian series of rocks. It is burned as lime, simply to expel the volatile organic matter, water, &c. The same stratum occurs in other portions of the State, under similar conditions.

Building Stone, Quarries, &c.—The principal building material, or dimension stone, throughout the State is limestone, the finer qualities of which, susceptible of polish, are called marble. A few excellent freestone, or sandstone quarries have been opened in Morgan, Jackson and Union counties.

The strata of limestone vary in thickness from six inches to four feet, affording stone for every purpose. Nearly every county in the State, excepting a few in the interior, whose surfaces are deeply drifted with clay beds, &c., is furnished with quarries. The principal stone quarries are at Athens, Lockport, Joliet, Alton, Grafton, Quincy, Rock Island, Port

Byron, LeClaire, Freeport, Galena, Rockford, Batavia, Aurora, Kankakee, Makanda, Shawneetown, Cobden, and Rock Quarry, near Golconda.

The material for the white front, or marble buildings which have been erected in Chicago during the past ten years, has been taken from Athens, sixteen miles distant. The St. Louis quarries are situated at Grafton, near the mouth of the Illinois River.

Soils.—The most interesting chapter in the history of our natural resources justly pertains to the soil commonly called Prairie soil. It is the most ingenious contrivance for obtaining a competence ever placed in man's possession. Its construction indicates a most careful disposition of all the elements needed for the successful culture of grains and grasses.

"The most noticeable feature is the very large quantity of nitrogen which these soils contain, being nearly twice as much as the most fertile soils of Great Britain."

"Taking the soil at an average depth of ten inches, an acre of prairie will contain upwards of three tons of nitrogen, and as a heavy crop of wheat with its straw contains about fifty-two pounds of nitrogen, there is thus a natural store of ammonia in this soil sufficient for more than a hundred wheat crops. In Dr. Voelcker's words, 'it is the large amount of nitrogen, and the beautiful state of division, that impart a peculiar character to these soils, and distinguish them so favorably.' I have never before analyzed soils which contained so much nitrogen, nor do I find any record of soils richer in nitrogen than these."

Illinois has just begun to develope her natural resources. The foregoing condensed statements will serve as a means to indicate her rate of prosperity and future rank among the States of the Union, with the development of such natural facilities by a rapidly increasing and industrious population, every citizen of Illinois can look with an easy confidence and a just pride upon the advancing importance of all the interests of our great commonwealth.

NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY OF ILLINOIS.

Museum in the State Normal University at Bloomington. Number of Specimens collected, 60,000. Officers—President, George Vasey, Ringwood, McHenry county. Vice Presidents, J. W. Velie, Rock Island; B. G. Roots, Tamaroa; Geo. W. Batchelder, Bloomington. Directors, O. S. Munsell, E. R. Roe, W. H. Stennett, Bloomington, McLean county. Trustees, John P. Reynolds, James Shaw, F. Brendell, Edmund Andrews, E. M. Prince. Curator, Joseph A. Sewall, Bloomington. Treasurer, Ezra M. Prince, Bloomington. Recording Secretary, C. R. Parke, Bloomington. Corresponding Secretary, C. D. Wilber, Bloomington.

DESCRIPTION OF THE MUSEUM —(See Engraving.)

The State Normal University has been made the depository for all collections in the various departments of Natural History which may be made under the auspices of the Society, and also for such collections as may be donated. For this purpose, two large halls in the University building have been united by an arch, affording a spacious gallery one hundred feet in length and thirty-three feet wide. This hall, called the Museum of Geology and Natural History, has been fitted up in the most approved style, from plans furnished by Richard H. Holder, Esq., of Bloomington, who visited the Museums of the Philadelphia Academy of Sciences, the Boston Academy, and the Salem Museum. The following is a brief outline of the plan adopted:

Arranged along the floor, in front, near the windows, are twelve glass structures or houses, each four feet by eight feet and ten feet high, furnished with shelves and bases, for the department of Ornithology. In these structures, which are of pure French glass, the birds are arranged in families, each with its name and habitat. At present they are chiefly occupied by the birds of Illinois.

Across an aisle, four feet in width, are placed twelve structures, made also of plate glass, corresponding with the structures for birds. These are in the form of parallelograms, each three feet by twelve feet, and surmounted by a glass show-case of the same dimensions and eight inches in depth. In the lower spaces are placed specimens of our coal flora, such as Lepidodendra, Sigillaria, etc., which are too large for shelves. These, as they are all of one geological epoch, are grouped with reference to the localities whence they were taken. The glass show-cases above are devoted to carboniferous fossils and shells.

In the rear of the parallelograms is an extended bureau of drawers, divided into two sections, at the middle of the room. Each division contains four hundred and eighty drawers, and each drawer is fifteen by eighteen inches, and three inches in depth, furnished with a glass cover, and arranged in series of ten; every two series, or twenty drawers, being protected by folding doors. These are devoted to Botany and Entomology.

In the southern division of the Museum are placed the minerals of Illinois and the adjacent States, presenting a typical view of the mineral wealth of the Missssippi Valley, and designed to illustrate what is termed Economical Geology. For example: all the varieties of Iron ore, with samples of every process of its manufacture, are arranged by themselves; Lead, its ores and oxides; also, Copper; Coal, its varieties and products; Soils, with accompanying analyses, etc., etc. The corresponding northern section is occupied by a collection of crystals, arranged according to the basis of each order, viz.: Carbonates, Silicates, etc. Each specimen is accompanied with its specific name and the name of the locality, also of the person donating the same to the Society.

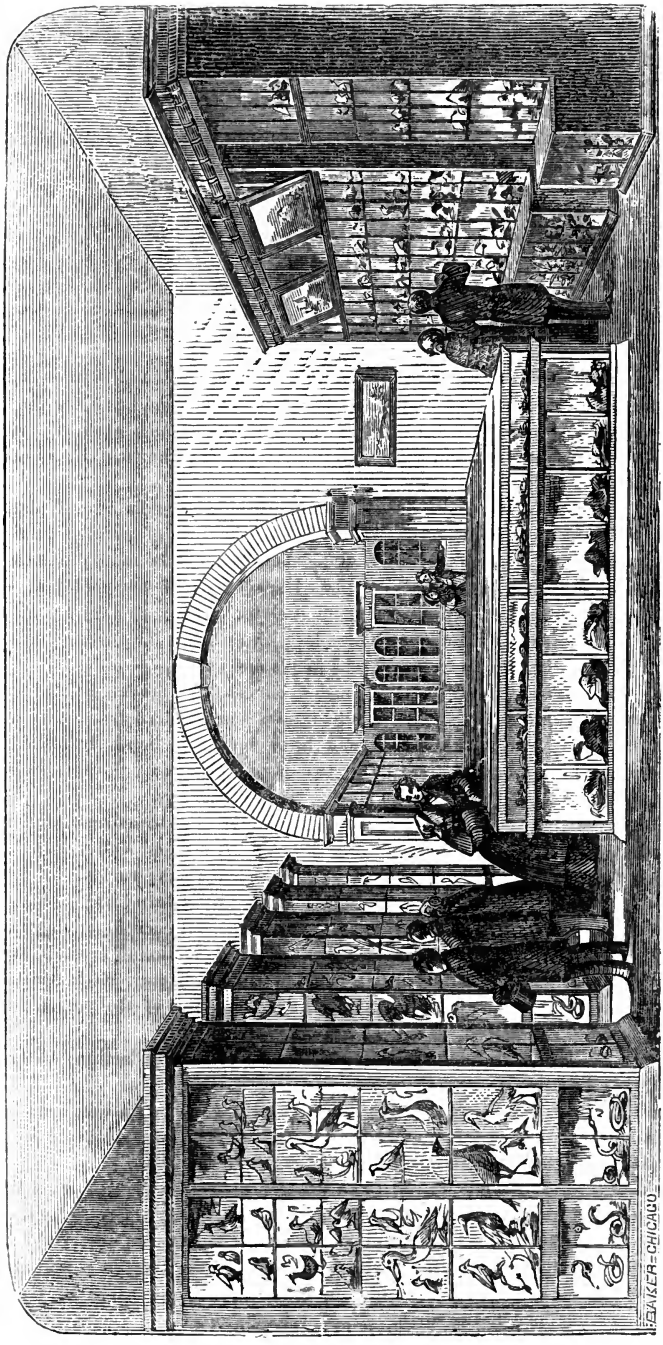
A space above these sections, in both divisions, is devoted to such collections as are preserved in alcohol, viz.: Reptiles, Fishes, Crustacea, etc.

A series of paintings, by Bryant, illustrating the principal geological epochs, are placed in line at the top of the last described sections, and, when finished, will occupy the entire length of the Museum. Of this series four are now complete.

The principal design of the Society, in regard to this general collection of Natural History, is to furnish the greatest possible number of Object Lessons in each department, and so arrange the objects or specimens that they will convey to the student or observer a correct view of the order or philosophy of Nature; in short, to make of the Museum a well arranged volume, whose illustrations, indicating the order of creation, were prepared by the Great Artist, who laid the foundations of the earth.

The following extracts are copied from the Secretary's last annual report:

The enterprise which had for its object the building of a Museum and Library of Natural



MUSEUM OF THE NATURAL HISTORY SOCIETY OF ILLINOIS,

BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS.

History of the State of Illinois, was commenced with the beginning of the financial crisis of 1858, when 'hard times' was written throughout the length and breadth of the land, and when all labor of such sort as this must be done by personal exertion, rather than be paid for at any price.

In estimating the costs, at a fair price for the labor of each individual, who has spent his time in the several departments, including, also, the real cost of the railroad and express facilities, the amount, thus far, exceeds $23,000, which must be taken as the estimate or value of the Museum.

If we might be allowed to say a word concerning our success, it would be that no collection, of equal size and value, was ever made in this country in so short a time—a result attributable to a good combination of resources, and a hearty co-operation of Naturalists; and so thoroughly has the work been done, that several departments are nearly completed, viz: Botany, Conchology, Geology and Mineralogy. It is most natural, therefore, having nearly exhausted several fields already mentioned, to look beyond our State boundaries to other portions of this great natural district, the Mississippi Valley; and with the present facilities and combinations, it is believed that one general and complete museum of this great valley could be made with less expense and toil than has pertained to the building of the present one. The great aim of such a collection as we propose is simply to present a type of all the species of existence in the various kingdoms of nature, ancient and modern, arranged in groups, according to the type or affinity of each group. It is a human attempt to represent, as far as possible, the divine idea of creation, by a real panorama of objects. And when we consider that in the two kingdoms of nature—animal and vegetable—there are four hundred thousand species, one may realize the magnitude of such a work.

It would be extravagant for us to attempt a complete collection, representing the natural history of the earth, but it is quite within our compass to obtain a collection including all the species of the Fauna and Flora of Illinois—modern and ancient.

During fifteen years past, certain persons in Illinois, interested in the encouragement of science, had endeavored to procure appropriations to do the same work which we have so well nigh completed. The Legislature was petitioned to make extensive appropriations, but without success; no one, of course, being found willing to undertake such a work without substantial guarantees from the State Treasury. Now, however, the end has been attained without cost to the people, and in such a manner that, in many portions of the State, a repetition of the work will not be required.

By the judicious use of this great collection, under proper regulations, students who attend this institution, from all parts of the State, can obtain a general survey of our material resources, and will learn one important fact at least, that our home facilities for education, by the new or reformed method of object lessons, are unequalled. Let the pupil see this fine array of the 'medals of creation;" show him the beginning of vegetable life on the planet; hold up the rude fucoid that has reared its tiny frond on the shore of the ancient ocean, and millions of years after, has been suceeeded by the mighty oak, the crown of all; let him see the dawn of animal life, as the beds of the old Silurian seas reveal it; let him trace, step by step, the rise and progress of new modes of existence, and observe the adaptation of the earth to new types of life, as they came in stately march down through the vista of the past; accompany the student through the long ages, from the chaos in the background, forward into brighter and brighter light, until the culmination of the grand plan, in the advent of the human race, and ask him, after this long survey, if the works of God do not impress him with higher conceptions of the wisdom, beneficence and accompanying presence of the great Creator?

Of this work, the late Superintendent of Public Instruction, Hon. Newton Bateman, thus remarks:

"This Museum is of inestimable value to the University, affording rich and inexhaustible materials for 'object lessons,' and exalting the conception of every student as to the amazing resources and imperial wealth of this great commonwealth. And not the least of the benefits flowing from the Museum to the University, is the strong incentive to the study of Natural Science, so wonderful, so instructive, so inspiring and glorious, afforded by the contact of the students with the strange and beautiful things of earth, air and water, which are garnered in that treasure-house of nature. Not a few, it is to be hoped, will there learn to love the study of God in His works, and be allured by the pure and simple tastes which it inspires, away from the dust and smoke of the political arena and the grosser pleasures of sense, into the sweeter and fresher fields where Goldsmith, Wordsworth, and all the brotherhood of the pure and good and gifted, have ever delighted to linger and muse and adore.

"It is to Prof. C. D. Wilber, the able and untiring Secretary of the Natural History Society, more than to any other man, that the University and the State are indebted for this munificent contribution to the scientific and educational resources of the State. Identified with the movement from its incipiency, he has toiled on with unselfish ferver and zeal, day and night, summer and winter, in evil report and good report, undismayed by opposition, unchilled by coldness and apathy, self-supported, turning aside only to recruit by public lectures his exhausted resources—until the magnificent collection stands as the trophy of his labors."

EDUCATION.

[The following excellent sketch has been furnished by S. A. Briggs, Esq., Editor of the Illinois Teacher, and will be deemed of much interest to the public on the important question of Education.]

Recognizing the just moral claim of every child to an education commensurate with the importance and dignity of his obligations and duties as an upright and loyal citizen, and the corresponding obligations of the State to make adequate provision for such an education for all, the Legislature of Illinois, in February 1855, passed "an act to establish and maintain a system of free schools." This was the first strictly free school law ever adopted in the State, and although amended in 1857, 1859, and 1861, most of its essential provisions remain unchanged.

By the provisions of this act the common school fund consists of certain monies derived from various sources, amounting at the close of 1862 to $4,973,842.74, denominated the permanent school fund, upon which the State pays an annual interest of six per cent; together with such a sum as may be produced by the annual levy and assessment of two mills upon each dollar's valuation of all the taxable property in the State.

The supervision of the common schools of the State is vested in a State Superintendent, elected biennially, whose office is at Springfield, and whose duties are those usually pertaining to such an office. Hon. N. W. Edwards, Hon. H. H. Powell, Hon. Newton Bateman, and Hon. John P. Brooks have successively filled this office, the latter being the present incumbent.

The local superintendence of each county is in the hands of a county School Commissioner, also elected biennially. His duties are to apportion the State funds, to visit, as often as practicable, the several schools in his county, and to carry out the advice and instructions of the State Superintendent. For his services in visiting he is allowed two dollars a day to the amount of one hundred days. He is also required to examine all persons desiring to teach in his county, and provision is made for issuing three grades of certificates of qualification.

Each township is placed for school purposes in the hands of three Trustees, holding office for two years. It is their duty to lay off the township into districts, so as to suit the wishes and the convenience of a majority of the inhabitants of the township, and they also apportion the school funds among the districts. Section 16, in every township, is set apart to be sold for school purposes.

Each district elects three directors, one of whom goes out of office annually, whose duty it is to establish and support free schools for six months in every year, and, by vote of the district, for such longer time as the latter may desire. No district is entitled to its share of the public money unless it has had a free school for at least six months during the year preceding the distribution. The directors also have power to improve school houses, and procure fuel, furniture, libraries and apparatus. In order to give a higher grade of schools than would otherwise be possible, a majority of the directors of several districts may unite the whole into a union district, placed under the control of three persons, appointed by them, styled "Directors of Union School."

As a public recognition of eminent qualifications and distinguished success, the State Superintendent is authorized to grant perpetual certificates to such persons as shall pass a satisfactory examination, produce evidence of success in teaching, and who have had an experience of three years, one of which was in this State. At the three examinations held previous to the close of 1862, 51 State diplomas were issued.

In the larger cities and incorporated towns, the school system depends upon a special charter, and is under the control of a board of education or other officers. Its general features, however, correspond to the State law, and these towns receive, of course, their share of the public fund.

The following table exhibits, in a condensed form, the educational statistics of tne State since the adoption of the present system:

	No. of Districts.	No. of Male Teachers.	No. of Female Teachers.	Children under 21.	Children bet. 5 and 21.	Children attending School.	Av. No. of months of School.	Av. Months Wages to male Teachers. The State Normal University, located at Bloomington, was organized by act of the Legislature in 1857, and went into operation in October of the same year. It is under the control of the State Board of Education, appointed by the Legislature. Each county in the State is entitled to send two pupils, and each representative district a number equal to the number of representatives in said district, all of whom reeeive gratuitous instruction. The building stands upon a commanding eminence, overlooking the city, and is the largest and best appointed school edifice in America. Richard Edwards, probably the most experienced and most successful Normal school teacher in the country, is at the head of a strong and well-chosen faculty of instruction, and, with an attendance in 1863, of 438 in all the departments, the institution gives promise of an extended and permanent usefulness. (For further information see Bloomington.)

The Illinois Teacher, published at Peoria, and edited by S. A. Briggs of Chicago, is the only educational journal in the State. It has an extended circulation, and is an important auxiliary to the educational interests of Illinois. It is the officiel organ of the State Superintendent, each number containing his decisions upon questions of school law submitted to him. It has contributed much to the support and development of the free school system, and is worthy to be named among the permanent educational agencies of the State.

Illinois contains numerous academies, private schools and colleges, which are doing much good, but as they are not required to make returns to the State Superintendent, no general statistics are to be had outside their own published report. The best known of these institutions are: Illinois College, Jacksonville, founded in 1830; Shurtleff College, Upper Alton, founded in 1835; McKendree College, Lebanon, founded in 1835; Female Seminary at Monticello; Knox College, Galesburg, founded in 1837; Lombard University, Galesburg; University of Chicago; University of St. Mary's of the Lake, Chicago; Female Seminary, Rockford; Clark's Seminary of Aurora; Lind's University at Lake Forest; and the Northwestern University, Evanston.

Prominent among the literary associations of Illinois, are the Historical Society, of Chicago, Rev. Wm. Barry, Secretary, founded in 1856; the Illinois Literary and Historical Society, located at Alton; and the Illinois Natural History Society, C. D. Wilber, Secretary, whose fine museum is in the Normal University building at Bloomington.

Further information concerning the private institutions of learning, and the literary associations, may be found by referring to the several towns in which they are located.

ILLINOIS INSTITUTION FOR DEAF MUTES.

[Furnished by Phillip G. Gillett, Esq., Principal.]

The law incorporating this Institution was enacted in February, 1839, at the instance of Hon. O. H. Browning, who was then representing Adams county in the State Senate. Of the twenty gentlemen who constituted the first Board of Trustees, but one, the Hon. Wm. Thomas, now President of the Board, yet remains identified with its interests, having for twenty-five years maintained an unfaltering devotion to the unfortunate class of persons for whose relief and amelioration it was designed, and often rendered the Institution itself efficient aid by his counsel and means in trying times, when both counsel and means were needed. To the constancy and unswerving determination of Judge Thomas that the expectation of its founders should not be disappointed, are the friends of the Institution largely indebted for its advanced and honorable position among similar Institutions of the United States.

In 1846, the school was opened under the superintendence of Thomas Officer, A. M., who had been appointed Principal of the Institution, and for nine years succeeding served in that capacity. In the selection of Mr. Officer for this responsible position, the Board of Trustees were exceedingly happy, and the Institution peculiarly fortunate. It would be difficult to conceive of one more admirably suited by temperament, energy and talents, both natural and acquired, with the highest Christian principle, to inaugurate and conduct an enterprise of Christian benevolence, than this gentleman, in whom these qualities were most happily combined. To the suavity of the Christian gentleman, securing for him at once public confidence and esteem, he added a rare facility in the instruction of mutes—a profession in itself separate and distinct from all others, requiring a peculiar cast of mind and no small amount of experience to secure efficiency.

The Institution is healthfully located near the town of Jacksonville, and has large, beautiful and commodious buildings, warmed with steam and lighted with gas. It is the largest establishment of the kind, supported and patronized by one State alone, in the Union. It has received since its opening six hundred and thirty pupils, of whom about two hundred and forty yet remain on its rolls. The amount of light and knowledge which have here been disseminated among the children of silence, who by their peculiar misfortune are shut out from the usual avenues of instruction, the great day alone may reveal; of one fact, however, with honest pride, we are assured, that the usefulnes of this Institution, and its relative standing among those of a similar character and purpose of our country, are fully commensurate with the honorable position of Illinois among the States of the American Union.

It has of late years received from the Legislature a support which, by the exercise of judicious economy, has been adequate to its requirements. No citizen of Illinois who has yet visited the Institution, and witnessed the order and system there prevailing, together with the proficiency, happy and grateful countenances of its pupils, has been known to complain of the small, though necessary, taxation for the support of this noble charity, which, with the other two State Institutions located near Jacksonville, constitutes a most striking exponent of the Christian sentiment of our people, and the power of our advanced civilization.

Deaf mutes resident in Illinois, between the ages of ten and thirty years, are here educated, being furnished with board, tuition, &c., free of charge.

The Institution for eight years past has been under the superintendence of Philip G. Gillett, A. M., to whom communications respecting admission of pupils, and business pertaining to the Institution, should be directed.

INTERNAL IMPROVEMENTS.

Illinois and Michigan Canal was laid out by the Canal Commissioners in the spring and summer of 1836, under authority conferred by "An act for the construction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, approved January 9, 1836."

Sec. 32 of that Act is as follows:

"The Commissioners shall examine the whole Canal route, and select such places thereon as may be eligible for town sites, and cause the same to be laid off into town lots."

In compliance with this law the Board of Canal Commissioners, then consisting of Wm. F. Thornton, Wm. B. Archer, and Gurdon S. Hubbard, proceeded to make the selections of town sites as required, as soon as the survey of the route of the Canal had progressed sufficiently to indicate the proper points for future towns. The selections were made with reference to the future business of the Canal, the accommodation of the adjacent country, and for the purpose of realizing the greatest possible amount from the sales of Canal property, and, accordingly, the Engineer was instructed to so construct the Canal through these towns as to afford the requisite business facilities. Consequently ample basin room was given in the original construction of the Canal in most of the towns laid out by the said Commissioners.

The town site for Lockport was selected because upon the plan of the Canal then adopted, (which was to make a "deep cut," so as to draw a supply of water directly from Lake Michigan,) the lake level would here run out, and the first lock or locks be located.

The Canal Commissioners, as well as many other persons of intelligence, probably at that time over-rated the advantages of this locality for a commercial manufacturing town, but it cannot be doubted that had the canal been completed on the original plan, and the net work of railroads by which the whole country has since been threaded, not been constructed, the condition of Lockport would have been widely different from what it now is. There were then no considerable towns anywhere in Northern Illinois—Chicago itself being only a village of moderate size and small business, giving but little evidence of the unprecedented growth which has since characterized it. Joliet, only five miles below the site selected for Lockport, it is true, had at that time, been laid out and established as a county seat, but it contained but few inhabitants, and the natural advantages of its position were not such as to preclude the existence of other rival towns in this region of country.

Besides the anticipated advantages of having a canal navigation from Lake Michigan to this point, of sufficient capacity to pass vessels of the average size then navigating the lakes at an ordinary stage of water in Lake Michigan, without the interruption of a lock, and of creating a very extensive hydraulic power by drawing water therefor directly from the lake, the land selected for the future town was as favorable for the purpose as could be found in the State.

All of the section except the bottom land was then covered with a fine growth of timber, nearly all of which was cut off within a few years after the commencement of improvements. Could a portion of the finest of these trees have been preserved, they would have added immensely to the beauty of the place.

The land upon which the village is built rises gently from the river to the canal some twenty feet, and the canal is from 150 to 200 feet from the foot of the main bluff so called, which here rises abruptly some 25 or 30 feet. From the main bluff the ground has a very gentle ascent to the east for the first 300 or 400 feet, and from thence rises more abruptly—but not so much so as to make it very difficult or expensive to construct streets of easy grades—to the level of the country lying immediately east of the village.

When the canal survey was made in the spring of 1836, there was no one residing on the land sub-divided into lots by the Canal Commissioners, they therefore selected the town site of Lockport, and determined to build a canal office there, it being known that the construction of the canal would require the expenditure of a large amount of money, and it was thought that the place must derive a very considerable advantage from that expenditure.

The growth of towns on the canal, as on the railroad lines, has been promoted by these means of communication. This canal has now become one of the prominent objects for the Government to enlarge and improve, as a defense of the country. Congress and a National Convention have been considering the nature of the improvement—the advantages and cost to the country, and there can be no doubt that as soon as conflicting interests can be reconciled, and opposition be removed, that the patriotism of the country will provide the means, through this canal, to bring war vessels, gunboats, &c., through from the Mississippi to the lakes, so as to become a DEFENSE AGAINST FOREIGN INVASION.

The Chicago and Alton Railroad.—Forms a through line from Chicago to St. Louis, a distance of 281 miles. Trains run between the two cities without change of cars.

The line was opened in 1854, under the name of the Chicago and Mississippi Railroad, and passed through a series of financial embarassments, from that time till the commencement of 1860, when the bond holders took possession of the property, and appointed a receiver. Since that time the line has steadily progressed, and ranks now among the most valuable railroad property in tne West.

The Capital of the Chicago and Alton Company, on January 1, 1864, was		$8,290,939
Represented by	Sinking Fund, bonds 7 per cent	585,000
	First Mortgage Bonds, 7 per cent	2,400,000
	Income Bonds, 7 per cent	1,100,000
		$4,085,000
	Preferred Stock, 7 per cent,	2,422,596
	Common Stock,	1,783,343
		$8,290,939
The Earnings in 1363, were		$1,673,706.60
Expenses,		971,840.78
	Profit,	$701,865.82

The Company, in addition to paying interest on all its bonds, pays dividends on both classes of stock.

In the later part of 1863, the Company completed a lease of the Joliet and Chicago Road, in perpetuity, at an annual cost of $145,000.

The Company has been using the St. Louis, Alton, and Terre Haute Road, between Alton and St. Louis, but it is expected they will have an independant track of their own this year. The engineers are now making the necessary surveys.

The line passes through most of the large cities and towns in the State, among them Lockport, Joliet, Wilmington, Pontiac, Bloomington, Atlanta, Lincoln, Springfield, Carlinville and Alton. The country, through which the road passes, is among the best cultivated in the State, especially the country from Bloomington to Alton.

Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad Line.—This line of road is under one management, and is composed of the following roads:

Galena & Chicago Union, between Chicago and Junction	30 miles.
Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, between Junction and Galesburg, and Peoria & Burlington	234 "
Quincy & Chicago, between Galesburg and Quincy	100 "
Making in all	364 miles.

The earnings of the line for the fiscal years ending April 30 were in—

For Freight	$1,677,263.38	$2,369,770.85
For Passengers	478,817.18	584,306.80
For Mails and Miscellaneous	90,003.61	83,294.89
Total	$2,246,084.17	$3,037,372.54
Earnings per mile	$6,170.56	$8,344.43

This line of road has been constructed under authority of acts of the Legislature, creating several distinct corporations, whose roads, when completed, have been consolidated for economical management. Its first charter was granted February 12th, 1849, to the "Aurora Branch Railroad Company," extending from the Junction to Aurora, a distance of thirteen miles. Under a subsequent charter, this road was extended to Mendota, a distance of forty three miles, and was opened for business to that point in November, 1853.

The Central Military Tract Road, extending from Mendota to Galesburg, eighty miles, was opened for business in January, 1855. The balance of the line was opened about January, 1856.

The Company are now constructing a new road from Chicago to Aurora, which will be ready for use in May, 1864, after which they will dispense with the use of the Galena road.

The country through which this road runs was, in 1854, at least three-fourths bare prairie It is now rare to find any but cultivated fields along its line.

In 1855, the Galena Company did not find it inconvenient to provide depot grounds and service for this Company, in addition to its own business. Now the depot grounds of the C., B. & Q. R. R. Co., for freight, being one and a quarter miles in length, with two grain elevators capable of storing one million, six hundred thousand bushels, and two warehouses for rolling freight, one 80 by 700 feet, the other 72 by 516 feet, are found inadequate for the accommodation of its immense and rapidly increasing freight traffic.

The following table will convey some idea of the freight traffic of the line, growing out of the rapid improvement of the district tributary to this road:

Total amount of Lumber	38,891,562 feet.
Coal	124,789,387 lbs.
Wheat	107,919,573 lbs.
Corn	488,892,269 lbs.
Provisions	32,424,456 lbs.

Sundry other products, together with the above, making one grand total over this line eastward and westward, of 1,555,471,790 lbs.

Chicago and Milwaukee Railroad.—This road traverses the shore of Lake Michigan from Chicago to Milwaukee, a distance of 85 miles, 45 of which are within Illinois. Along the line of this road, several beautiful suburban villages have been laid out within the past few years, by enterprising business and professional citizens of Chicago, where with the accumulated rewards of their daily avocation they seek to adorn and make their homes lovely and attractive. Among the places of residence, Evanston and Lake Forest, on acconnt of their excellent educational institutions, as well as their naturally beautiful scenery are considered the most desirable.

Chicago and Rock Island Railroad was opened through from Chicago to the Mississippi River February 22d, 1864. Total length of road, 228¼ miles. Along the line of this road are located Joliet, Ottawa, LaSalle, Lacon, Peoria, Genesee, Moline, Rock Island, and other places that deserve mention, which are sustained, and rapidly increasing in numbers, improvements and wealth, in the midst of a country of abundant resources.

Earnings from January 1st, to December 31, 1863, are $1,958,735,06.

For the previous fiscal year ending March 31, 1863, the amounts received were: Passengers, $433,297.33; freight, $1,034,850.29; miscellaneous, $60,993.40—total, $1,529,141.02.

Galena & Chicago Union Railroad.—This road was opened from Chicago to Harlem, on the Desplaines River, in the spring of 1849. Its length is 250 miles. To this might be added the Elgin & State Line, 32 miles in length, which is operated by the same Company, giving a total of 282 miles of road, running through a beautiful and exceedingly productive portion of the State. Among the cities and towns along this line are Belvidere, Rockford, Freeport, Cortland, Dixon, Sterling, Morrison, Fulton, &c.

Great Western Railroad.—This road crosses the State from east to west, entering at the State line about midway in Vermilion county on the east, and running west through the centre of the State to the village of Clayton, in Adams county, where one branch, the Quincy & Toledo, operated by the same Company, extends to Quincy, and another to Warsaw, opposite Keokuk, Iowa. The cities of Decatur, Springfield, Jacksonville, Quincy, and many flourishing towns, are located upon the line of this railway. The earnings for the year ending March 31, 1863, were $742,097.18. Total length in Illinois, including the Quincy & Toledo and the Keokuk Branch, about 272 miles.

THE ILLINOIS CENTRAL RAILROAD.—This road, extending through the entire length of the State, from Dunleith, its north-western terminus, and Chicago, in the north-east, to Cairo, its southern terminus—is the most important railroad in the State, and the longest in the country, being 707 miles in length. Its cost, including roadway buildings, bridges and equipments was, up to the 31st day of December, 1863, $28,610,229.23. Its nett earnings to the end of 1856, when it was opened over its entire length, and including the period from 1852 to 1856, were $1,742,930.30; in 1857, 391,473.48; 1858, 424,618.19; 1859, 492,765.00; 1860, 850,630.42; 1861, 1,150,903.50; 1862, 1,600,570.84; 1863, 2,118,847.13.

The expenses of operating the road were 76 per cent. of its gross earnings in 1857; 70 84-100 per cent. in 1858; 68 82-100 per cent. in 1859; 59 38-100 in 1860; 49 1-10 per cent. in 1861; 46 per cent. in 1862: and 46 4-10 per cent. in 1863.

By the terms of its charter, this road pays annually to the State 7 per cent. of its gross earnings. This source of revenue to the State will increase with the growth and prosperity of the road. In 1863 it amounted to $300,394.58.

The importance of the road in a national point of view may be estimated from the fact that since the commencement of the war to the close of 1863, 330,051 troops have been carried over the road, besides immense quantities of forage, ammunition and other supplies for the use of the army and navy. For the past six months the quantity of army freight delivered in Cairo over this road has been immense, frequently exceeding 100 car loads per day.

By the liberality of the Board of Directors, all sanitary supplies forwarded from Chicago or other points on the line, by directions of the Sanitary Commissioners, have been carried free of charge.

The equipment of the road is of the first class, and compares favorably with that of any road in the United States.

On the first day of January, 1864, the Company owned 117 locomotives, 62 first class passenger cars, 7 sleeping cars, 29 mail express and baggage cars, 1949 house and stock cars, 481 platform cars, 497 coal cars, 40 miscellaneous cars, and 14 snow plows. It has recently added two new sleeping cars, which for comfort, convenience and elegance, cannot be excelled

It has now under contract 14 new locomotives; has in progress in its own workshops, 4 new locomotives, 400 new freight cars, and 6 new passenger cars, to be added to the rolling stock during the present year.

Its principal workshops are located at Weldon, Carville (Chicago), Centralia and Amboy.

The Company have adopted the plan of substituting iron for wooden bridges as fast as the latter wear out, and in the past two years, have erected about 3,000 feet of iron truss and girder bridges, and are substituting substantial masonry for other wooden structures.

Land Department.—The general government granted to the State of Illinois, a large body of lands as an inducement for the building of a railroad from the northern to the southern extremity of the State. These lands were transferred to the Illinois Central Railroad Company, and consisted of 2,595,000 acres, located it along the entire length of the road, and all lying within a limit of fifteen miles from it. On the completion of the road the Company placed these lands in market, and to the present time has sold about one-half of the entire grant.

The earlier sales made were at the time when speculation was at its maximum; the low rates of interest and the long credit given, formed a great inducement for speculators, and also for actual settlers to purchase large tracts of land, which they found themselves unable either to improve or pay for. In all such cases the Company has pursued a most lenient and wise policy by releiving the actual settlers from such portions of their lands as they found in excess of their means to improve. At the time when corn commanded but ten cents a bushel, the Company received large quantities from their settlers, at a much higher price, thus enabling the farmers to weather the storm, and, at the same time, make payments on their farms. The Company has now entirely revised its plan of disposing of the lands; sales are made upon credit only for actual settlement, and, unless to parties with means, only in small tracts. The rate of interest charged is six per cent. and a large portion of the lands are sold on short credit or for cash. During the year 1862, sales were made to over two thousand purchasers of 87,599 acres for $989,376.08, and during the year 1863, of 221,578 acres for $2,411,737.03, to over thirty-four hundred purchasers. The year of 1864 opens with a still larger business. It must be borne in mind, that when this road was built, less than ten years since, the greater portion of it was through an almost uninhabited district. The population in the counties, through which the road passes, has more than quadrupled within that time, and there are now over one hundred thriving villages, towns and cities, located along its line. A large immigration from the adjoining States, south and east of Illinois, is noticed, and the Company is making large sales to farmers from Iowa, Michigan and Wisconsin.

The liberality of the Federal Government in making this grant, the wisdom of the State in appropriating it, and the good faith and enterprise of those who embarked in this great experiment have accelerated the growth of Illinois beyond all example, and it is now safe to say, that in population, wealth, and all the elements which make a State great, Illinois is half a century in advance of what the State would have been, without this grant and railroad.

Logansport, Peoria and Burlington Railroad, runs from Peoria, on the Illinois River, through a highly cultivated and beautiful portion of Illinois to the State Line, on the east into Indiana. Length in Illinois, east from Peoria, about 120 miles.

Ohio and Mississippi Railroad, extends over the southern part of the State, from Vincennes, on the Wabash River, west through the counties of Lawrence, Richland, Clay, Marion, Clinton and St. Clair, to east St. Louis, on the Mississippi. Length, 148 miles.

Terre Haute and St. Louis Railroad, crosses the State, from the south-east of Edgar county, on through Coles, Shelby, Christian, Montgomery, Macoupin and Madison counties, to the Mississippi River, opposite St. Louis. Length, with branches, 208½ miles.

In addition there are other railroads intersecting the different portions of our State, the greater number centering in Chicago, and all adding materially to the means of transportation, and the commercial wealth of Illinois.

Chicago and Northwestern Railway, extending from Chicago through the interior of Wisconsin to Green Bay, affording direct communication to all points in the Northwest. The portion within Illinois, (66 miles), was opened to the traveling public in 1855. Entire route, 242 miles. Gross earnings for the year ending December 31, 1863, $1,504,843.15.

Eastern Railroads.—Chicago terminus of the Michigan Central, Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana, Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago, and Cincinnati Air Line Railroads form the great chain of connection with the Atlantic seabord, and our far west, over lines, of which Chicago forms the central link.

In the following table are given the railroads of those States in which the length equaled or exceeded 1,000 miles in 1860. It will be observed that in 1860 Illinois ranked second in the number of miles of railroad, Ohio ranking first, New York third, &c. In 1850, Massachusetts had 1,035¾ miles; New York, 1,403 1-10; Ohio, 575¼ and Illinois, 110¼ only:

ALPHABETICAL LIST OF THE COUNTIES IN ILLINOIS.

Adams County

Is situated in the extreme western part of the State, bounded on the north by Hancock' east by Schuyler, Brown and Pike, south by Pike county, and west by the Mississippi River. Length north and south thirty miles, with an average width of twenty-four miles. It contain twenty-one townships, viz.:—North-East, Houston, Keene, Lima, Ursa, Mendon, Honey Creek' Camp Point, Clayton, Concord, Columbus, Gilmer, Lington, Melrose, Burton, Liberty, McKee' Beverly, Richfield, Payson and Fall Creek—the city of Quincy and several thriving villages.

This county was organized from Pike county in 1825; first election of officers July 2nd, same year, when forty votes were polled. Willard Keyes, Levi Wells, Peter Journey were elected county commissioners, and Henry H. Snow was appointed clerk. Justus Perigo, a soldier during the war of 1812, was the first settler, and Daniel Lile the second, in what is now Adams county. The first located on section nine, township 3 south, and 8 west of the 4th principal meridian. Bear Creek and branches, Cedar, Tyrer, Mill, Fall and Pigeon Creeks flow through the western, and the north and west forks of McKee's Creek through the eastern border. The quality of the soil and due proportion of timber and prairie rank this county second to no other in the State. The climate is good. Fruit is grown in abundance. Population in 1860, 41,323; assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, $9,217,631; estimated true value, $21,000,000. There were owned in 1861: Horses, 12,458; neat cattle, 25,878; sheep, 13,467; hogs, 66,873. Products: 5,751,760 bus. of corn · 330,820 of wheat. October 1st, 1862, there were persons between five and twenty-one, 12,604; No. of scholars, 10,454; male teachers, 167; female, 104; average No. of months schools were kept, 6.9. Amount received for all school purposes, $37,798. (See Quincy.)

Alexander County

Lies in the extreme southern portion of the State, and is bounded north by Union county, east by Pulaski, and on the south and west by the Mississippi River; length, north and south, twenty-five miles, with an average width of nine miles. It was organized from Union county in 1819, then comprising also the present County of Pulaski. It has a fertile soil, mostly covered with a heavy growth of timber, amongst which are found various kinds of oak, mostly white oak, also, walnut, poplar, cypress, hickory, etc. One-third of the county is excellent alluvial soil. Along Cash River, which flows on the eastern border, the surface is low and subject to inundation. "Bordering the Mississippi is an extensive tract of alluvial land, entirely above high water." In 1860, the population was 4,707. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, $2,735,078. Estimated true value $6,200,000. There were in 1861, 605 horses; 2,189 head of cattle; and 665 sheep. In 1860 31.161 bus. of wheat, 350.000 bus. of corn. In 1861, 875 scholars, salaries of teachers, $3,766,82. (See Cairo.)

Bond County

Was named after Shadrach Bond, first governor of Illinois. It is situated in the southwestern interior of the State, bounded on the north by Montgomery county, east by Fayette, south by Clinton, and west by Madison, which separates it from the waters of the Mississippi, save a slight indentation on the west and north sides, it is twenty miles square. The seat of justice is at Greenville. There is a due proportion of prairie and timber land. The prairie is not as undulating as in some parts of the State, yet the soil is good, and the citizens are industrious and frugal. Population in 1860, 9,815. In 1861, there were owned 5,598 horses; 11,051 cattle; 6,372 head of sheep, and 18,678 swine. In the previous year there were raised 143,478 bus. of wheat, and of corn 2,140,000 bus. Value of personal and real estate in 1863, as returned to Auditor's office, $1,742,745. Estimated true value, $4,006,600. No. of white persons, between five and twenty-one, 3,761. Scholars 3,191. Number of male teachers, 63, female teachers, 42. Average number of months school was kept 6.9. Total amount received for all school purposes, $16,240, as returned for school year, ending October 1, 1862. Bond was organized from Madison in 1817. It was then much larger than at present. Shoal Creek and branches flow through the central portion of this county. The south-east extremity is touched by the Kaskaskia River.

Boone County.

This county is the third west of Lake Michigan in the northern tier of counties in the State. In length north and south, it is twenty-four miles, and twelve miles in breadth, containing the following eight townships under township organization, viz: Belvidere, Bonus, Boone, Caledonia, Flora, Manchester, Leroy, and Spring, with a population in 1860 of 11,678. There is a fair supply of timber scattered over the county in groves and oak openings. The prairie is undulating, yielding abundant crops of wheat, corn, oats, etc. In 1861 there were owned 4,760 horses; cattle, 12,617; sheep, 5,808; and 3,844 head of swine. In 1860 there were sown 38,109 acres of wheat, yielding 762,000 bushels; 14,363 acres of corn and 16,196 acres of other field products. The whole number of acres in the county are 184,320. The number of scholars on October 1, 1862, was 4,296; number of male teachers, 57; female, 108. Total amount received for all school purposes, $16,392. The county is traversed by the Kishwaukee River and branches, affording ample mill power. The Chicago and Galena, Kenosha and Rockford and Beloit Branch Roilroads pass through the county. Boone was organized from Winnebago and McHenry counties in February, 1837. It is bounded north by Wisconsin State, east by McHenry county, south by Kane, and west by Winnebago. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, $1,560,493. Estimated true value, $3,588,000. The seat of justice is at Belvidere. (See Belvidere.)

Brown County

Is situated in the western central part of the State, bounded on the north by Schuyler county, east by part of Schuyler, Cass, and Morgan, south by Pike, and west by Adams. The Illinois River flows along the eastern and crooked creek along the north-eastern border of this county. It is also watered by McKee's Creek and branches. The soil is very productive and the country well-improved. The Quincy and Toledo Railroad enters in the south-east corner, and passes in a north-westerly direction through the county. Under township organization, it contains nine townships, viz: Ripley, Missouri, Pea Ridge, Lee, Mt. Sterling, Cooperstown, Versailles, Elkhorn, and Buckhorn, containing a population in 1860 of 9,938. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863, was $1,503,795, estimated true value, $3,456,900. There were owned in 1861, 3,992 horses, 8,630 neat cattle, 6,544 sheep, and 19,519 head of swine. In 1860 there were 5,229 acres of wheat, and 25,564 acres of corn. On October 1, 1862, there were 3,663 white persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, 3,413 of whom attended school, also 55 male and 37 female teachers. The entire amount received for all school purposes was $9,121. This is also a great fruit county, peaches being grown in great abundance. (See Mt. Sterling.)

Bureau County.

The first settlement in this county was made by Messrs. Bulbona and Henry Thomas, in 1828. During the preceding year, Mr. H. Thomas was engaged, with others, in surveying a stage route from Peoria to Galena—and while thus employed he made a claim at Bureau Grove, where he moved the following year. Others soon followed, among whom were Messrs. Ezekiel Thomas, Abram Obrist, Abram Stratton, Sylvester Brigham and J. G. Forestall. Other settlements were made soon after. C. S. Boyd located at Boyd's Grove, Joseph Smith at "Dad Joe's Grove," Jno. Hall at Hall's Settlement, Elijah Epperson on Bureau Creek, and others at various places in the county.

The first postoffice in the county was established at Bureau Grove, in 1831, and Henry Thomas was postmaster.

This county was a part of Putnam until 1837, when an act was approved creating Bureau county, it being left to the voters of the county to decide in regard to its division.

Bureau is bounded on the north by Whiteside and Lee counties; on the east by La Salle county and the Illinois river, and Putnam county at the extreme south-east corner; on the south by Putnam, Marshall and Stark counties, and on the west by Henry county. Under township organization it contains the following twenty five townships, viz.:—Arispie, Berlin, Branby, Bureau, Center, Clarion, Concord, Dover, Fairfield, Gold, Greenville, Hall, Indiantown, Lamoille, Leepertown, Macon, Manlius, Milo, Mineral, Ohio, Princeton, Selby, Walnut, Westfield and Wheatland.

When the first settlers came to this county, it was necessary for them to bring their supplies of provisions, or an abundance of money to procure them with, for at that time provisions were exceedingly high, and therefore it was with great courage and perseverance that the first settlers of this now highly cultivated and favored county came and erected dwellings, and remained here for the first few years. As soon as they could begin to cultivate the rich and yielding soil, they were blessed with abundant harvests; but although these were plentiful, markets were at so great a distance (Chicago being the nearest, over one hundred miles) that the price of produce was very low; and farmers, for several years, were obliged to carry their grain, forty bushels at a load, in wagons, this distance; and, in more than one instance, finding prices so low, they would offer their entire load to produce merchants if they would defray their expenses to and from market! Thus it is seen that the husbandman was not remunerated for his toil. And while produce was bringing so low a market price, other things were commanding very high figures, which conspired to render the times very dark and dreary.

But time gradually wore away this state of things, and about the year 1850 a new light began to dawn upon the minds of those who had "borne the toil and the heat of the day." A better day was anticipated with no little interest, hope, or anxiety. The dark cloud of "hard times" began to be dispelled by the agitation of railroad projects in different parts of the State. Truly this event ushered in bright prospects for the Prairie State; and indeed it was a new era in its history.

Produce and all kinds of stock at this time were in better demand, and as a natural consequence prices began to rise. A general interest was excited in the vast natural resources which lay buried beneath the soil of the State; and this county, in common with others, felt these influences, as immigration turned to the rich, uncultivated prairies of Illinois. Though the completion of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, the southern terminus of which is within a few miles of this county, constituted a favorable change in creating a market nearer home, yet it has been superseded by the railroad, which has brought a market, as it were, to the very doors of the citizens.

The soil is excellent—rich, deep and productive; being generally well watered, and well adapted for all kinds of grain and other agricultural staples.

The principal streams in the county are Bureau Creek, East and West Bureau Creeks, and Green River, while on the south-east we have the Illinois River.

Wood is found in abundance bordering on the streams and in groves. Any amount of coal is found in different parts of the county, particularly at Sheffield and Tiskilwa. From the former place it is shipped by railroad to Chicago and other places.

As an agricultural county, Bureau is not excelled. Years ago, when grain was carried to Chicago by the wagon load, produce merchants declared that the best of grain always came from Bureau county—and the same can still be safely said. Population of the county in 1860 was 26,426. In 1860 there were sown 82,149 acres of wheat, 84,518 acres of corn, and 21,148 acres of other field products. There were owned in 1861, 13,872 horses, 29,973 head of cattle, 3,372 sheep, and 20,674 head of swine.

Fruit is a branch of agriculture that is beginning to command attention. Experience has proved that the soil and climate are well adapted to raising fruit; and this is, we think, soon to become an item of no small importance. The peach tree grows thrifty, but is not a regular bearer. Plums, cherries and pears do well, but apples do the best, and are a superior article. Other varieties of fruit also flourish, as well as shrubs and ornamental trees. An Agricultural Society has been formed about two years, and is in a prosperous condition.

Besides Princeton, the county seat, Sheffield, Wyanet and Tiskilwa are flourishing villages, and we think that Buda, Neponset and Malden are worthy of notice. The above, with Arlington and Trenton, are railroad stations, and some of them bid fair to become places of no small importance. Lamoille, Dover and Providence are older villages, with the exception of Princeton and Tiskilwa, and are pleasantly located.

For the year ending October 1st, 1862, there were 8,848 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 7,728 scholars. Qualified male teachers, 128; female, 126. Average months school was kept, 7.2. Total amount received for all school purposes, $39,384. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $4,491,657; estimated true value, $10,329,300.

Calhoun County

Occupies a long, narrow strip of country lying between the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers, which unite at the south-east extremity of the county. The Illinois River bounds it on the east, the Mississippi on the south and west, and Pike county on the north. It is about thirty-seven miles in length, and from three to ten wide from river to river, containing about 260 square miles. The surface is broken by bluffs and ravines, and is partly subject to inundation. Several fine prairies lie on both sides of the county, at the foot of the bluffs. The bottom lands furnish fine range for stock. Corn, beef, and pork are the principal exports. Coal is found in considerable quantities along the banks of the Mississippi. Calhoun was organized from Pike county in 1825. Population in 1860, 5,144.

During the same year there were sown 5,006 acres of wheat, and 12,902 acres of corn. In 1861 there were in the county 1,575 horses, 6,236 cattle, 1,217 sheep, and 10,321 swine. In the year 1862 there were 1,459 persons between five and twenty-one, of whom 1,164 attended school. Number of qualified male teachers, 25; female, 15. Average number of months school was kept, 6.2. Total amount raised for all school purposes, $3,340. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $770,674. Estimated true value, $1,771,000.

Carroll County

Is situated in the north-western part of the State. It is bounded on the north by Jo Daviess and Stephenson counties, which separate it from the State of Wisconsin, on the east by Ogle, on the south by Whiteside counties, and on the west by the waters of the Mississippi. The surface is generally undulating, consisting of prairie, diversified with tracts of timber land. It is drained by several creeks that flow mostly in a westerly course, emptying into the Mississippi River. The Racine and Mississippi railroad crosses the northern portion of the county, from Savanna on the Mississippi River, on through Freeport, Illinois, to Beloit, Wisconsin, etc., giving direct commmunication with Chicago. This county is eighteen miles in width, with an average length of twenty-five miles. It contains the following fourteen townships under towship organization, viz: Cherry Grove, Elkhorn Grove, Fair Haven, Freedom, Lima, Mt. Carroll, Rock Creek, Salem, Savanna, Washington, Woodland, Wysox, York, and T. 25. R. 7, with a population in 1860 of 11,733. The soil is productive. The staples consist chiefly of wheat, corn, oats, pork, and butter. In 1860 there were 3,905 horses; 10,076 head of cattle; 923 sheep, and 8,954 swine; wheat 636,444 bus., and 1,630,150 bus. of corn. There were 5,213 white persons, between five and twenty one, of whom 4,654 attended school in 1862. The number of male teachers was 59, and female 89. Average number of months schools were kept 7.5. Total amount received for all school purposes, through interest of township fund, state and county fund, and by special district tax $24,085. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $2,179,953. Estimated true value, $5.011,900.

Cass County.

Cass county is situated in the western interior of the state, and is bounded on the north by Mason county; on the east by Menard—being touched on the extreme south-east by Sangamon; on the south by Morgan, and on the west by the Illinois River, which separates it from Schuyler and Brown counties. Sangamon, named on some maps Salt River, flows along the northern boundary of the county. This county has an average length of about twenty-seven miles, and a width of fourteen. The surface is undulating, being drained by several small streams, and is proportionably varied by prairies and timber. The soil is generally very excellent, consisting mostly of a rich, sandy loam. In 1861 there were 3,931 horses, 10,249 head of cattle, 3,088 sheep, and 17,783 swine. There were also, in 1860, raised 156,402 bus.

wheat, and 2,580,000 bus. corn. Cass was organized from Morgan county in 1837. The population was then estimated at 6,500; in 1860 it was 11,325. For the year ending October 1st, 1862, there were in the county 3,879 white persons between five and twenty-one, of whom 3,272 were in school. No. of male teachers, 58; female, 39. Average No. of months school was kept, 6.5. Whole amount received for school purposes, $17,572. Assessed value of personal and real estate was $2,282,530; estimated true value, $5,020,400.

Champaign County

Is situated in the eastern interior of the State. It is bounded on the north by Ford, east by Vermillion,—which also separates it from the State of Indiana,—south by Douglas, and west by Piatt and McLean counties. It is 36 miles in length north and south, and 28 in width, containing the following named sixteen townships, viz: Kerr, Pera, East Bend, Newcombe, Rantoul, Middletown, W. Urbana, Pleasant Hill, St. Joseph, Urbana, Scott, Tolono, Sadorus, Philo Sidney, and Homer, some of which are double size, being 12 miles by 6. The surface consists of extensive prairies, dotted with beautiful groves of excellent timber, of which Big Grove, at the head of Salt Fork, is most worthy of mention, Surrounding these groves, the prairies are rolling, and the soil of excellent quality. It is drained by the branches of the Vermillion, Big Vermillion, Kaskaskia, Illinois and Sangamon Rivers, meandering through the country in every direction. Champaign is in every sense of the word an agricultural county, and is well adapted to raising cattle, sheep, hogs, etc. It is also an extensive fruit county, and Mr. Dunlap well supports its fame in horticulture and floriculture. The record for 1860 gives a population of 14,629. There were produced 215.046 bushels of wheat, and 4,275,370 bushels of corn. In 1861 there were owned 6,316 horses, 13,441 cattle, 3,889 sheep, and 28,211 swine. For the year ending October, 1862, there were 5,554 persons between five and twenty-one years; scholars 4,867; 75 male teachers, 100 female. Total amount of funds received for all school purposes, $32,495. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $3,722,223. Estimated true value, $8,560,600. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad traverses the county north and south. The Great Western east and west, intersecting the Central at Tolona, in the south-western interior of the county. Champaign was organized from the attached portion of Vermillion county, in February, 1833. (See Champaign and Urbana.)

Christian County.

Christian county, situated in the southern interior of the State, is bounded north by the counties of Sangamon and Macon, east by Macon and Shelby, south by Shelby and Montgomery, and west by Montgomery and Sangamon. It is twenty-seven miles long, east and west, and twenty-one wide. In addition, there is a portion of the county extending about eleven miles north from the main body of the county, with an average width of twelve miles. The Sangamon River flows along the northern border, while the South Fork flows through the interior of the county. The surface is usually level, or partially undulating, and the soil fertile. Fruits are grown to some extent. The Illinois Central and the Terre Haute and St. Louis railroads traverse the eastern and south-eastern portions of this county, intersecting at the village of Pana. In 1860, the population was 10,492. There were 17,869 acres of wheat, and 51,374 acres of corn planted during the same year. In 1861, there were 3,508 horses; 9,946 head of cattle; 6,068 sheep, and 23,577 swine. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863, was $2,302,057. True value $5,294,600. For the year 1862, there were reported by the superintendent of public instruction, 4,577, between five and twenty-one years of age, of whom 3,760 attended school. Male teachers 66; female 42. Amount paid for teachers wages $9,636. Received for all school purposes. $16,400. (See Taylorsville.)

Clark County

Is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, bordering the State of Indiana. It is twenty-four miles long east and west, and twenty-one broad, bounded on the north by Edgar county, east by Indiana State on the Wabash River, south by Crawford, and west by Cumberland and Coles counties. The Wabash River, navigable for steamboats, flows along the south-eastern margin of the county. Several smaller streams flow through it, among which may be mentioned the North Fork of Embarras River, in the north-west. The surface is diversified with prairie and timber-land. The climate is good, and the soil is adapted to wheat, corn, oats, etc. The population in 1860 was 14,907. Products, 219,679 bushels of wheat, and 1,649.500 bushels of corn. In 1861 there were 5,699 horses, 12,785 cattle, 13,367 sheep, and 28,257 swine. The number of persons in 1862 between five and twenty-one, was 5,115. The number of scholars were 4,832. There were 83 male, and 55 female teachers, drawing a total salary of $8,828, while the average number of months school was kept was 6. The total amount received for all school purposes was $10,308. In the year 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate in this county was $1,435,376. The estimated true value being $3,311,190. Clark was formed from Crawford county in 1819. (See Marshall.)

Clay County,

Situated in the southern interior of the State, and bounded north by Effingham county, east by Richland, south by Wayne, and west by Marion. It contains 470 square miles. The surface in the east part of the county is level, and the west half is undulating, and is drained by the Little Wabash River and its tributaries. The soil is very fertile, yielding large crops of fall or winter wheat, corn, grass, sugar-cane and tobacco. Clay, in 1860, had a population of 9,336, and at this time, 1864, about 13,000. In agricultural productiveness, it ranks among the first counties of Southern Illinois. Clay is an excellent fruit growing country: peaches, apples, pears, and all other fruits common to this latitude seldom fail in yielding an abundant and profitable crop. Clay was organized in the year 1825, and the first courts were held in that year at Maysville, which village was the county seat until 1840, since which time the seat of justice is located at Louisville. Clay has the advantage of the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad running east and west, and the Chicago branch of the Illinois Central running north and south. Clay has 80 school districts, with good school houses, in which schools are taught not less than six months in the year.

The following is a list of the towns and villages: Clay City, Flora, Georgetown, Larkinsburg, Maysville, Louisville, Oskaloosa, and Henia. During the year 1860, there were produced 131,976 bus. of wheat, and 1,741,450 bus. of corn. The number of white persons over five and under twenty-one years of age in 1862, was 4,321, of whom 3,724 attended the public schools. There were 57 male and 42 female teachers, with an aggregate salary of $6,364. The total amount received for all school purposes during the same year, was $9,180. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $1,654,216. Estimated true value, $3,804,665.

Clinton County

Was formed from Washington and a portion of Bond in December, 1824. It lies in the southern interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Bond and Fayette, on the east by Marion, south by Washington, and on the west by St. Clair and Madison counties. The Ohio and Mississippi Railroad passes through this county almost directly east and west. This county is watered by the Kaskaskia River, which passes through it, and its tributaries—Crooked Shoal and Sugar Creeks. The surface is about equally proportioned between prairies and timber. The timber, where it abounds, is generally of good quality. In this and some of the adjacent counties the soil is thinner, and the surface less rolling than in the counties farther north. The population in 1860 was 10,941. There were owned in 1862 personal and real estate, to the assessed value of $2,347,936; the true value being $5,500,170. (See Carlyle.)

Coles County

Is situated in the south-eastern interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Douglas; east by Edgar and Clark; south by Cumberland, and west by Shelby and Moultrie counties. It was organized, in 1830, from Clark and Edgar counties, and at that time embraced also the present counties of Douglas and Cumberland. It was named in honor of Edward Coles, second Governor of Illinois. Coles county is twenty-seven miles long, east and west, and about nineteen wide. The surface is mostly rolling prairie, with a few groves of timber. The soil is very fertile, yielding abundant crops of Indian corn, wheat, oats, hay, etc. It is watered by the Embarras and Little Wabash, and their tributaries, that furnish excellent milling facilities. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central passes through the western, and the Terre Haute and St. Louis railroad through the Central portion of the county, affording ready access to northern, southern and eastern markets. These railroads intersect in the western part of the county, at the village of Mattoon. In 1860 the population was 14,203, In the same year there were 11,801 acres of wheat, 62,273 acres of corn, and 13,571 acres of other field products planted. In 1861 there were owned 7,136 horses, 15,509 cattle, 10,590 sheep, and 31,544 swine. The number of children between five and twenty-one in 1862 was 5,285, of whom 5,261 attended the public schools. There were 71 male, and 42 female teachers, drawing an entire salary of $11,790. Average number of months school was kept, 6.4. Total amount of funds received for all school purposes in the county during the same year was $16,198. The following are the names of the townships: East Oakland, Seven Hickories, Morgan, Humboldt, North, Okaw, Mattoon, Lafayette, Charleston, Ashmore, Hutton, Pleasant Grove and Paradise.

Cook County

Was organized January 15, 1831, and was named in honor of Daniel P. Cook, the first Attorney General of the State, through whose untiring efforts in behalf of that measure, a grant of 300,000 acres was obtained from Congress to aid in the construction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal. It is bounded on the north by Lake county, on the east by Lake Michigan, south by Will, and west by Will, Du Page and Kane counties. In length it is 48 miles, with an average width of about 20 miles. This may be considered the most important county in the State, not only on account of its magnitude and the wealth of its population, but also, as it contains the great western city of Chicago, the growth of which has become a marvel to the civilized world, but which will be more appropriately delineated in its proper place.

The county township organizations, of which Chicago has twelve, is, namely: 1st, 2d, 3rd, 4th, 5th, 6th, 7th, 8th, 9th, and 10th, wards, also, North, South and West Chicago. The remaining twenty-eight, are Barrington, Breman, Bloom, Calumet, Cicero, Elk Grove, Evanston, Hanover, Hyde Park, Jefferson, Lake, Lemont, Lyons, Leyden, Maine, New Trier, Niles, Orland, Northfield, Palos, Palastine, Proviso, Rich, Thornton, Lake View, Schaumberg, Wheeling and Worth.

The population of this county, taken from the U. S. Census of 1860, is 144,954. We are, however, perfectly satisfied that those figures were below the number, from some unknown cause. As we now write in 1864, we have reason to believe that the population of Cook County cannot be less than 180,000 souls, Chicago being roughly estimated as at least containing a population of 160,000.

In 1861, there were owned 12,530 horses; 35,324 head of cattle; 6,544 sheep; and about 10,784 swine. Assessed value of land $26,563,242. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $37,076,800. Estimated true value, $85,276,640.

The annual report of the common schools, furnished by John F. Eberhart, Esq., the school commissioner, is voluminous and interesting. We can but insert the totals of the most important items. The whole number of districts in the townships are 198. The number of schools 195. The average number of months schools have been kept is 8.1. The number of white persons, between five and twenty-one years of age, is 48,225. The average attendance of scholars, 25,761. The whole number of teachers, male 125, female 393. There are also 82 private schools, with 6,800 scholars. Number of school houses 197. The total amount received for all school purposes, $173,579. The total amount paid for teacher's salarys is $119,501. Expended for all school purposes, 170,518. Highest monthly wages to male teachers, $160; to female teachers, $50. (See Chicago.)

Crawford County

Lies in the south-east part of the State, bounded on the north by Clark county, east by the State of Indiana, south by Lawrence, and west by Jasper. It was organized in 1816, and is 24 miles long east and west, and twenty-one in width, though not entirely square since the Wabash flows meanderingly along the south-eastern border. The Embarras River intersects the south-western portion, while Racoon, Hutson, Sugar, and LaMotte Creeks flow variously through the county. There is some fine rich prairie land in this county, well adapted to growing abundant crops of corn. The population in 1860 was 11,551. During the same year there were produced 215,635 bushels of wheat, and 1,396,100 bushels of corn. In the year 1861 there were in the county 3,647 horses, 7,179 cattle, 10,676 sheep, and 16,835 swine. In 1862, of 5,491 persons between five and twenty-one, 4,498 attended the public schools. Number of male teachers, 76; female, 53, whose entire salary was $8,691. The schools were in session an average of 6 months. The total amount received for all school purposes was $11,025. The personal property and real estate of the county in 1863, had an estimated value of $2,802,547. Estimated true value, $6,072,185.

Cumberland County

Is situated in the south-eastern interior of the State, north of Jasper, and a portion of Effingham county, east of Shelby, south of Coles, and west of Clark, which also separates it from the State of Indiana. It contains the following seven organized townships, viz: Cottonwood, Crooked Creek, Greenup, Neoga, Spring Point, Uniontown, and Woodbury. Cumberland is 24 miles in length east and west, and 12 miles broad. The central and western portion is well-proportioned with prairie and timber-land. The timber is similar to that bordering on the Kaskaskia, and generally of good quality. The soil of the prairie land is very rich and productive. There are several small streams, some of which furnish excellent mill power. The Embarras River passes through the county from north to south. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central intersectsthe north-western township Neoga, and furnishes a convenient market for the producers in the western portion of the county. The population in 1860 was 8,311. Productions, wheat, 172,278 bushels; corn, 1,499,685. In 1861 there were 3,003 horses, 7,356 cattle, 7,206 sheep, and 16,904 swine. For the year ending October 1, 1862, there were in the county 3,306 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, of whom 3,210 were in school. Number of male teachers, 62; female, 56: drawing a total salary of $5,625. Average number of months school was kept, 6.1. Entire amount received for all school purposes, $6,481. In the year 1863 the assessed value of personal property and real estate, was $1,410,245, and the estimated true value was $3,243,460.

De Kalb County,

Situated in the northern part of Illinois, is bounded north by Boone and the western part of McHenry,—which also separate it from the State of Wisconsin,—east by Kane and part of Kendall, south by LaSalle, and west by Lee and Ogle counties. In form it is rectangular, being 36 miles in length from north to south, and 18 miles broad. It contains the following eighteen townships, viz: Afton, Clinton, DeKalb, Franklin, Genoa, Kingston, Malta, Mayfield, Milan, Pampas, Paw Paw, Pierce, Shebbona, Somonauk, South Grove, Squaw Creek, Sycamore Victor. The greater portion of this county is cultivated prairie, with some good timber land. The surface is undulating, and the soil of excellent quality. Immense quantities of wheat, oats, corn, beef, and butter are shipped to Chicago annually, via the Dixon Air Line Railroad, that intersects the central portion of the county east and west. The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad also passes over the south east border. This county is drained by the Sycamore, also known by the Indian name of Kishwaukee in the northern, and by Indian Creek in the southern portion.

On the 20th of May, 1832, fifteen persons belonging to the families of Messrs. Hall, Daviess and Pettigrew, were barbarously massacred by the Indians near the last mentioned stream. Two young ladies, the Misses Hall, were taken prisoners, and afterwards redeemed, and two young lads made their escape. The bodies of men, women and children were shockingly mutilated, the houses of the settlers burned, their furniture destroyed, and their cattle killed—all in daylight, within twenty miles of a large force of the militia! This was done by the Indians under the famous Black Hawk. A portion of that band were exterminated during the same season by the combined forces of the United States troops and Illinois militia, and the remainder dispersed over the prairies west of the Mississippi.

The population of DeKalb county from the census of 1860 was 19,086. In 1861 there were produced 1,282,374 bushels of wheat, 2,270,570 bushels of corn, and there were 26,921 acres of other field products planted. The number of horses owned was 10,221; cattle, 22,512; sheep, 4,514; swine, 9,788. During the year 1862, there were 7,054 children between five and twenty-one; scholars, 6,313. Of male teachers there were 103, and female, 166, receiving for their services an aggregate of $17,934. The average number of school months was 6.9. Principal of township fund, $35,764. Interest of the same received, $3,606. Total amount received for all school purposes, $30,945. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863 was $2,925,573. Estimated true value, $6,728,650.

Dewitt County.

This county was created by the legislature of 1838 and '39, by taking a strip four miles in width from the south side of McLean, and a strip twelve miles in width from the north side of Macon county. It contains about 407 square miles. In the spring of 1839 it was organized by the election of E. W. Frues, sheriff, John J. McGraw, county clerk, F. G. Paine, probate justice, and William Lowry, recorder. Its population at that time was 3,382. It was named by James Allen, Esq., then senator from McLean county, an ardent admirer of Dewitt Clinton. In 1836, Allen and Full laid out the present county seat, and called it Clinton. When the county was first formed it extended east to the range line, between range six and seven east, but in 1840 and '41, a triangular strip, six miles wide, at the north end and fifteen at the south, was taken off and attached to Piatt county. The first white settler in the county came in 1828, John Cappenaign, a well to do farmer, still living in the county, built the first house in this county. As early as the "deep snow" there were many settlers within her borders. In territory this county is among the smallest in the State, the prairies are sufficiently rolling for all the purposes of cultivation and are very fertile, but the great boast of the county is its timber, so evenly distributed along the streams, and sufficient to fence the country into forty acre lots. The timber is mostly oak, and is so plenty that, even now, the best can be purchased at $25 00 per acre, in ten, twenty and forty acre lots. Clinton, the county seat, containing a population of two thousand, is beautifully located, adjoining the timber on the south and west. Fire has twice destroyed the business part of the town. It has now fourteen good brick stores, all well filled, and one of the finest grain elevators in central Illinois, owned and operated by Messrs. J. & W. Bishop; capacity 40,000 bus. There are four flourishing villages in the county: Waynesville, Wappello, Marion and Mt. Pleasant, the two latter are particularly pleasant places. There are seven steam grist mills, eight steam saw mills and five or six water mills. The State tax in 1863, was $1,730,840. The vote in 1840 was 609; 1863, 1951. The population in 1860 was 10,814.

The Illinois Central Railroad passes over the central portion of the county. The surface is drained by several streams, among which are Salt Creek, Kickapoo, and branches of the North Fork of the Sangamon. In 1861 there were produced 316,890 bus. of wheat, and 2,618,000 bus. of corn. In the same year there were 5,313 horses; 10,893 cattle; 6,804 sheep; and 28,213 swine. There are thirteen organized townships, viz: Santa Anna, Rutledge, Wilson, Wapella, Waynesville, Barnett, Clintonia, Harp, De Witt, Nixon, Creek, Texas, and Tunbridge, with 4,002 children in 1862, between five and twenty-one. Scholars, 3,350. Average number of months school was kept, 6.8. There were 57 male and 37 female teachers, drawing a total salary of $9,421. Average per month for male, $28.15; female, $16.20. Total amount received in the county for all school purposes, $12,870. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $2,247,844. Estimated true value, $5,169,940.

Douglas County.

Is situated in the south-eastern interior of the State, and is bounded north by Champaign, east by Edgar, which separates it from the State of Indiana, south by Coles, and west by Moultrie and Piatt counties. It is twenty-seven miles long, east and west, and fourteen miles wide. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad crosses the western portion of the county. It is watered and drained by branches of the Kaskaskia River. The surface is usually alluvial prairie land, with some timber. The population in 1860 was 7,140. In 1861, the wheat crop amounted to 80,810 bushels. Corn, 2,150,665 bushels. In the same year there were in this county 3,664 horses; 7,439 cattle; 3,773 sheep; and 18,114 swine. For the year ending October 1, 1862, there were 3,785 persons between five and twenty-one, of whom 2,932 attended the public schools. There were 49 male and 38 female teachers. The number of months school was kept during the year was 6.5. Average monthly wages paid to male teachers was $24.27; to female, $18.58. Total received for all school purposes, $17,953. In 1863, the assessed value of personal property and real estate was $2,564,187. Estimated true value, $5,897,430. (See Tuscola.)

Dupage County,

Situated in the north-east part of the State, is bounded on the north and east by Cook county, south by Will, and west by Kane. It contains nine organized townships, viz Addison, Bloomingdale, Downer's Grove, Lisle, Milton, Naperville, Wayne, Winfield, and York, with a population in 1860, of 14,701. It is eighteen miles square, with an additional tract of land, about half a township in size, attacked on the south-east, bordering which flows the Des Plaines River. The Illinois and Michigan Canal and the Chicago and Alton Railroad pass in the same vicinity. The surface is mostly prairie, generally beautifully undulating, with a very productive soil. It is watered by the DuPage River, whose tributaries flow through the county in a southerly direction. There are also other streams crossing the north-eastern portion, flowing into the DesPlaines. The Chicago and Galena and the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroads intersect this county, from east to west, the former through the central and the latter through the southern tier of townships. In the year 1861, there were owned in this county 6,773 horses; 18,575 cattle; 22,060 sheep; and 7,445 swine. In the previous year there were produced 302,742 bus. of wheat, and 1,200,155 bus. of corn. In 1862, there were 5,035 children, between five and twenty-one. Attendiug school, 4,071. Number of male teachers 68, with an average salary per month, of $21.87, and 114 female teachers with an average salary of $13.79 per month. Average number of months schools were kept 7.1. Total amount received for all school purposes, $17,684. In the year 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $2,271,227. Estimated true value, $5,453,760. (See Naperville.)

Edgar County,

Named in honor of Col. John Edgar, one of the earliest settlers of Illinois, was organized from Clark, in 1823, and is bounded on the north by Vermilion, east by the State of Indiana, south by Clark, and west by Coles and Douglas counties. It is twenty-seven miles long from north to south, and twenty-three miles wide, containing the following fourteen organized townships, viz.:—America, Bruellet—formerly Brulette,—Buck, Bymmes, Edgar, Elbridge, Embarras, Grandview, Kansas, Paris, Prairie, Ross, Stratton, and Young—containing a population in 1860 of 16,925. About one-third of the county is timber, the balance fertile prairie. It is traversed by affluents of the Embarras and Bruellet Rivers. The Terre Haute & St. Louis Railroad passes through the county, giving ready access to eastern and southern markets. Edgar is a good agricultural county. In 1861, there were produced 324,072 bushels of wheat, and 3,465,455 bushels of corn. In the same year there were owned 8,184 horses, 20,888 cattle, 20,804 sheep, and 44,325 swine. For the year ending October 1st, 1862, there were 6,295 children attending the public schools, under 92 male and 93 female teachers, keeping an average of 6.3 months to each school, the male teachers at an average salary of $24.30 per month, and the females $17.38. Total amount received in the county for all school purposes, $18,827. In 1863, the personal and real estate had an assessed value of $4,560,815; estimated true value, $9,489,840.

The first settlement in the county was made in the spring of 1816, by John Stratton and William Whitley, emigrants from Kentucky. In 1817, Jonathan Mayo, Remember Blackman, Aloysius Brown and Anthony Sanders came and settled. Stratton and Mayo are still living, and reside in the county. Charlotte Stratton, daughter of John Stratton, was the first white child born in the county; she was born in June, 1817. Dr. Uel Murphy was among the first, if not the first, who died in the county.

Edwards County

Was organized from Gallatin, in 1814, and named in honor of Ninian Edwards, who served as Governor of Illinois Territory from 1809 to 1818, and was afterwards elected Governor of the State, 1826. Edwards is bounded north by Richland county, east by Wabash, south by White, and west by Wayne, and is twenty-two miles long from north to south, with an average width of ten and one-half miles. It contains five organized townships, viz.:—Albion, Dixon, French Creek, Salem and Shelby. The surface consists of small rolling prairies, surrounded with groves of heavy timber. It is watered and drained by branches of the Little Wabash, which flows along the western border, and the Bon Pas, which forms its eastern boundary. Years ago, in the early settlement of the State, an English settlement, under the supervision of Messrs. Birbeck and Flowers, located in this county. The population in 1860 was 5,454. Products in 1861—wheat, 114,624 bushels; corn, 849,365 bushels. There were owned, 2,336 horses, 5,824 cattle, 8,432 sheep, and 12,149 swine. The number of persons between five and twenty-one, according to the report of the Superintendent of Public Instruction, in 1862, was 2,516, of whom 2,274 attend school; number of male teachers, 34, with an average salary of $21.14 per month; female teachers, 36—average salary, $12.96; average number of school months, 6.1; aggregate funds received for all school purposes, $5,733. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863 was $1,064,359; estimated true value, $2,447,890.

Effingham County,

Situated in the south-eastern interior of the State, is bounded north by Shelby, and a corner of Cumberland counties, east by Jasper, south by Clay, and west and south-west by Fayette. It was laid out from Fayette county by the Legislature in 1831, but did not become organized by the election of officers, and in possession of county privileges till the spring of 1833. It is twenty-four miles long, east and west, and twenty-one broad, containing thirteen organized townships, viz: Bishop Creek, Douglas, Jackson, Liberty, Lucas, Mason, Mound, O'Mockinson, St. Francis, Summit, Union, Watson, and West, with a population in 1860, of 7,816. This county is drained by the Little Wabash and its tributaries. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad passes through the county. In 1861 there were in Effingham county 2,605 horses, 9,004 cattle, 5,663 sheep, and 16,793 swine. There were also produced 97,784 bushels wheat, and 1,202,795 bushels of corn. For the year ending October 1, 1862, there were 2,240 scholars; 46 male, and 22 female teachers. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $6,982. Average number of months school was kept is 6.7. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $1,266,937. Estimated true value, $2,745,030.

Fayette County.

Was organized from Bond, Edwards, Crawford and Clark, in 1821, embracing at that time a wide extent of territory, but has since been divided into several counties. It is situated in the southern interior of the State, and contains fourteen organized townships, viz: Avena, Bowling Green, Hurricane, Kaskaskia, LaClede, Loudon, Otego, Ramsey, Sefton, Seminary, Sharon, Vandalia, Wheatland and Wilberton, containing in 1860 a population of 11,189. The Kaskaskia River flows in a south-westerly direction through the entire county. The surface is also drained by Hurricane Fork, Big Hickory and several other creeks. There is an abundance of excellent timber land in this county, especially along the banks of the Kaskaskia River and Hurricane Fork, and this in addition to the good water power of the several streams makes it a first-rate locality for manufacturing establishments. There are several small lakes in the interior and western portion of the county. In 1861 the products were 254,590 bushels of wheat, and 1,817,640 bushels of corn. There were also in the county 5,198 horses, 14,793 cattle, 10,077 sheep, and 28,844 swine. In 1862 there were 4,803 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one. Scholars, 4,600. The number of male teachers was 90, female, 47 Average number of months school was kept, 6.5. Total amount expended for all school purpases, $12,916. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863 was $2,003,781. Estimated true value, $4,441,525. (See Vandalia.)

Ford County

Is situated in the eastern interior of the State, and is of a very peculiar form. The body of the county is eighteen miles in length east and west, and fifteen north and south; in addition to this, the eastern tier of counties extends north from the northern line of Ford proper, a distance of twenty-six miles, and the southern tier extends east a distance of ten miles, containing in all about 486 square miles. There are in this county three organized townships, viz: Drummer Grove, Paxton and Stockton, with a population, in 1860, of 1,979. In the interior of the county are found several small lakes, the largest of which occupies about four square miles. This county is drained by affluents of the Sangamon and Spring Creeks. The Chicago branch of the Illinois Central Railroad passes through the eastern, and the Logansport, Peoria and Burlington Railroad, through the northern portion of the county. In 1861, there were 987 horses; 2,670 cattle; 156 sheep; and 2,326 swine, per assessors returns. Products: wheat, 53,496 bus., corn, 680,625 bus. In 1862, there were 733 persons between five and twenty-one years of age, and 697 attending the public schools. Number of male teachers 11, with $25 average monthly wages, and 21 female teachers, whose average monthly wages were $17. Average number of months schools were in session, 7.3. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $6,285. The assessed value of personal and real estate in in 1863, was $823,293. Estimated true value, $1,783,801. (See Paxton.)

Franklin County,

Situated in the southern part of the State, is bounded north by Jefferson, east by Hamilton and a corner of Saline, south by Williamson, and west by Jackson and Perry counties. It was formed from portions of Gallatin, White, and an attached part of Jackson county in 1818. It is twenty-four miles long, east and west, and eighteen miles wide. The surface is level or slightly undulating; the prairie small, timber in abundance and good, and the soil rather sandy, but rich and productive. The staples are corn, wheat and oats; cotton and tobacco are cultivated to some extent. This county is watered by the Big Muddy and its branches. The Illinois Central passes near the western borders.

In 1861 there were 2,323 horses, 8,777 cattle, 8,813 sheep, and 21,182 swine. And during the same year there were 157,675 bushels of wheat, and 787,050 bushels of corn raised, together with crops of oats, potatoes, etc. In 1862 there were 4,278 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, while the number of children in the public schools was 2,689. Number of male teachers, 51, with an average salary of $23.45 per month; and 12 female teachers, whose average monthly salary was $18.75. Average number of months school was kept was 6. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $6,605. Franklin county contains ten organized townships, viz: Benton, Cave, Eastern, Ewing, Four Mile, Frankfort, Horse Prairie, Northern, Osage, and Spring Settlement, with a population in 1860 of 9,393.

Fulton County

Is situated in the western interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Knox and a part of Peoria, east by Peoria county and the Illinois river, which also separates it from Tazewell and Mason counties, south by the Illinois River and a corner of Schuyler, and on the west by Schuyler, McDonough and Warren counties. It is from nine to thirty-six miles long, north and south, and from fourteen to thirty miles east and west. Fulton was formed from Pike county in 1825, and now contains twenty-six organized townships, viz: Astoria, Banner, Bernadotte, Buckhart, Canton, Cass, Deerfield, Ellisville, Fairview, Farmington, Farmers, Harris, Isabel, Joshua, Kenton, Lee, Lewiston, Liverpool, Orion, Pleasant, Putnam, Union, Vermont, Waterford, Woodland, and Young Hickory, with a population in 1860 of 33,338. This is one of the finest counties in the State. Its surface consists of undulating and highly cultivated prairies, diversified with excellent timber. It is estimated that at least one-third of the county is heavily timbered. The Illinois River flows along the eastern border, Spoon River in a south and south-easterly course through the interior. In addition, there are several smaller streams, as Copperas Creek in the north-east, and Otter Creek in the south. The greater portion of the streams flow over gravelly beds, and furnish good milling facilities. The Lewiston Branch of the C. B. & Q. R. R. passes through from the north as far south as Lewiston, its present terminus. The main line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad also intersects the north-west corner of the county. There is an abundant supply of coal, particularly in the vicinity of Canton. In many places it is found just beneath the surface, where, with pick and shovel, it is quite easily obtained. In 1861 the products were: of wheat, 673,740 bushels; corn, 4,293,700 bushels; besides some 23,967 acres of other field products. There were in the county also, 12,747 horses; 27,868 cattle; 18,630 sheep; and 74,409 swine. In 1862 there were 13,451 persons between the ages of five and twenty one—scholars, 12,982. Number of male teachers, 151, whose average monthly wages were $25; and 146 female teachers—average monthly wages, $14. Average number months school was kept, 6.5. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $33,938. Received $37,214. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $4,890,797. Estimated true value, $10,596,726. (See Canton and Lewiston.)

Gallatin County

Was organized in 1812. It is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by White county, east by the Wabash, separating it from Indiana. The Ohio River separates it from the State of Kentucky—on the south by Hardin county and west by Saline. The greater portion of the county consists of timber land; sand predominates in the soil, which is fertile and generally under cultivation. Salt and coal abound. The surface is drained principally by Saline River, and its affluents flowing through the interior and south-western portion of the county. It is twenty-one miles long, north and south, and from twelve to eighteen in width, and contains nine townships, viz; Bear Creek, Eagle, Equality, New Haven, North Fork, Saline, Shawneetown, Wabash and White Oak, with a population, in 1860, of 8,055. In 1861, there were 2,195 horses; 6,363 cattle; 4,180 sheep; and 16,330 swine, in the county. During the same year there were 61,557 bus. of wheat, 1,059,450 bus. of corn, and 850 acres of hay, oats, cotton, tobacco, etc., produced. In 1862, the number of children attending school was 2,413. Number of male teachers, 33, with an average salary of $26 per month. Number of female teachers 14, whose average salary was $17 per month. Average number of months school was in session, 6.9. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $9,049. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $1,421,087. Estimated true value, $3,078,998.

Greene County

Was formed from Madison, in January, 1821. It is bounded on the north by Scott county, east by Macoupin, south by Jersey, and west by the Illinois River, which separates it from Calhoun and Pike counties. It contains thirteen organized townships, viz: Bluff Dale, Carrollton, Eastern, Fayette, Greenfield, Kane, Mineral Spring, Mountary, New Providence, Northwestern, Walkerville, White Hall, and Woodville, with a population, in 1860, of 16,093. In length, east and west, it is about 24 miles, and from 18 to 27 miles wide. The surface is somewhat undulating, with a large portion of timber land and upland prairies. The soil is of excellent quality. Corn, wheat, oats and hay are the principal productions. Fruit is cultivated to some extent. Apple Creek and its branches flow through the interior. The southern portion is watered by the affluents of Macoupin Creek. The western portion of the county borders on the Illinois River, along which are found several small lakes, the principal of which is Grand Pass. Along the western limits run a chain of bluffs, consisting mostly of a horizontal strata of lime and sand-stone, sometimes receding several miles east of the river, leaving a low, fertile alluvion, which is usually timber land, along the banks of the river, and a prairie surface toward the bluffs. Bituminous coal abounds. In 1861, there were 7,295 horses; 13,262 cattle; 8,876 sheep; and 28,555 swine. The agricultural productions amounted to 395,573 bus. of wheat, 2,546,650 bus. of corn, and 8,604 acres of other field products. In 1862 there were 5,360 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one. The number of scholars was 4,262. Number of male teachers 68, with an average monthly salary of $27.12. Female teachers 40, average monthly salary $17.19. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $15,259. Amount received $18,566. The value of personal and real estate in 1863, was assessed at $3,055,612. Estimated true value, $6,620,492.

Grundy County.

This county is situated in the east-north-eastern interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Kendall county, on the east by Will and Kankakee counties, on the south by Livingston, and west by LaSalle county. It is twenty-four miles long, north and south, and eighteen east and west, containing twelve organized townships, viz.:—AuSable, Braceville, Felix, Greenfield, Goodfarm, Highland, Mazon, Morris, Nettle Creek, Norman, Saratoga and Vienna, with a population of 10,379 in 1860. This county is intersected through the northern interior by the Illinois River, which is formed by the confluence of the Kankakee and Des Plaines Rivers in the north-eastern township, AuSable. The Illinois & Michigan Canal and the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad also pass through the same portion, and in about the same direction. The Chicago & Alton Railroad intersects the south-east corner. The surface is nearly level, though in some places quite undulating. The southern portion is watered b Mazon Creek and its branches. The soil is fertile. In 1861, there were produced 139,828 bushels of wheat, 2,696,980 bushels of corn, and good crops of oats, hay, etc. In the same year, there were owned in the county 4,871 horses, 13,182 cattle, and 4,346 swine. According to the school commissioner's report for 1862, there were 3,899 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,890 children attending the public schools. Number of male teachers, 48; female, 77; average salary of male teachers per month was $22.82, and of the female teachers $15.49; average number of months the schools were in session was 6.7. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $13,537; total received, $14,902. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $2,314,331; estimated true value $5,014,383.

Hamilton County.

This county is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Wayne, east by White, south by Saline, and west by Franklin and Jefferson counties. It was organized from White, in 1821, and is at present twenty-four miles in length, north and south, and eighteen east and west. Hamilton contains the following named eight townships, viz.:—Beaver Creek, Crouch, Flanegan, Knight's Prairie, Lasater, McLeansboro, Mayberry and Shelton, with a population in 1860 of 9,915. It is watered by Saline Creek and the Skillet Fork of Little Wabash and their branches. There is considerable timber land in this county, and a tract of swamp in the north part. In 1861, there were 2,838 horses, 7,627 cattle, 6,992 sheep, and 15,536 swine in the county. The products were, of wheat, 152,592 bushels: corn, 1,105,550 bushels, and 4,746 acres of oats, hay, potatoes, &c. In 1862, there were fifty-seven schools, and 2,975 scholars attending. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $7,860; total received, $7,598. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863 was $1,294,371; estimated true value, $2,804,503.

Hancock County

Is situated in the extreme western portion of the State, with Henderson county on the north, McDonough and a portion of Schuyler east, and Adams on the south, while the Mississippi River flows along the western borders. It was formed from Pike county in 1825, and is at present thirty miles in length north and south, with an average width of about twenty-five miles, containing twenty-two organized townships, viz: Appanese, Augusta, Bear Creek, Carthage, Chili, Durham, Fountain Green, Hancock, Harmony, LaHarpe, Monte Bello, Pilot Grove, Pontoosac, Prairie, Rock Creek, Rocky Run, St. Albans, St. Mary's, Sonora, Walker, Wilcox and Wythe, with a population in 1860 of 29,061. Hancock Prairie, from twelve to twenty miles in width, runs from south to north through this county. On the east it is watered by Crooked Creek; on the south west by Bear, and on the north-west by Camp Creek. Though the timber is not as abundant in this as in some counties of the State, there is some along the banks of Bear Creek, and strips line the Mississippi—in some places of considerable width and good quality. The surface is rolling, and the soil exceedingly rich, producing fine crops of corn, wheat, oats, broom corn, etc.

In 1861 the products were 503,410 bushels of wheat; 5,624,190 bushels corn, and 27,028 acres of oats, hay, etc. In the county there were 10,100 horses, 26,186 cattle, 6,984 sheep, and 48,491 swine. In 1862 there were 168 public schools, with 9,167 scholars. The number of persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, was 11,743. Number of male teachers, 134; their average salary was $24.46 per month. Female teachers, 127, with an average salary of $15.69 per month. Average number of months the schools were in session was 7. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $32,944. Total received, $37,289. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $4,590,635. Estimated true value, $9,946,375. In the north-western part of this county is situated the once famous city of Nauvoo, of Mormon notoriety. There are several flourishing towns in this county, among which are Carthage, Plymouth, Augusta, LaHarpe and Warsaw, (which see.)

Hardin County,

Situated in the extreme south-eastern part of the State, is bounded on the north by Gallatin, east and south by the Ohio River—which separates it from the State of Kentucky—and on the west by Pope county. This is one of the smallest counties in the State, having an average length of about sixteen miles, and an average width of ten miles, containing five townships, viz: Cave-in-Rock, McFarlan, Monroe, Rock Creek, and Rosi Clair. Population in 1860, 3,759. In 1861 there were 899 horses, 3,068 cattle, 2,589 sheep, and 9,501 swine. Products, 49,589 bushels of wheat; corn, 513,850 bushels. In 1862 there were 1,488 children between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 1,276 attending the district schools. Teachers, 28. Twenty-three male, with an average salary of $28.28 per month. Five female, whose average salary was $21.77 per month. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $3,487. Total received, $3,660. Average number of months the schools were in session was 6. The assessed value of personal and real estate in this county in 1863 was $538,640. Estimated true value, $1,167,053.

CAVE-IN-ROCK.—This natural curiosity, long known to all navigators of the Ohio, is situated on the north bank of that river, in the southern part of this county. "Such caves and piles of Rock were called by the Indians Mon-e-to, spelled Man-i-teau by the French, and by others sometimes Mon-it-to. It signifies 'The residence of a spirit,' either good or bad. There are several Mon-e-toes in Illinois, Missouri, and other western States. One is at the precipices of the Mississippi, adjoining Lower Alton. The Indians used to relate some wild and extravagant legends of the freaks of these imaginary beings at their 'residences,' and strove to propitiate the favor of the Mon-e-to, by liberal offerings, and the firing of guns, as they passed by his habitation. The one known to Americans by the name of Cave-in-Rock, was long the rendezvous of a class of beings far more formidable and dangerous to the whites than the Indian Mon-e-toes. In 1797 it was the place of resort and security to Mason and his gang of robbers, who plundered and murdered the crews of boats, while descending the Ohio."

Henderson County.

This county formed a part of Warren until 1841. It is situated in the west-north western part of the State, with Mercer county on the north, Warren east, McDonough and Hancock counties on the north, and the Mississippi River flowing along the western borders. It contains the following named eleven townships, viz.:—Bald Bluff, Bedford, Biggsville, Greenville, Honey Creek, Olena, Oquawka, South Henderson, Terre Haute, Walnut Grove and Warren, with a population in 1860 of 9,501. It is thirty miles in length, north and south, and from eight to eighteen wide. Henderson Creek traverses the northern, Ellison's Creek the central, and Honey Creek the southern portion of the county. Along these streams are several good mill seats. In the eastern portion of the county the land is usually undulating, and where timber exists it is of good quality. "Much of the land that lies along the river is low, subject to inundation, and has a series of sand ridges back of it, with bold and pointed bluffs further in the rear." The Burlington branch of the C., B. & Q. R. R. passes through the interior of the county, east and west. The productions for 1861 were, 368,135 bushels of wheat, 2,619,375 bushels of corn, and proportionate crops of oats, hay, sorghum, etc. There were in the county 3,940 horses, 12,074 cattle, 2,527 sheep, and 25,347 swine. In 1862, there were 3,895 persons between the ages of five and twenty one, and 3,290 attending the public schools. Number of male teachers, 62, with an average salary of $25 per month, and 58 female teachers, with a salary of $16.50 per month. Average number of months schools were in session, 6.6. Total amount paid for all school purposes, $12,166. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $1,922,184; estimated true value, $4,164,732.

Henry County

Is situated in the north-western interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Rock Island and Whiteside counties, east by Bureau and a corner of Stark, south by Stark and Knox, and on the west by Mercer and Rock Island counties. It was formed in 1825, but not organized for judicial purposes until about ten years after. In size it is thirty miles square, save a portion of land equal to twelve miles by six in the north-west, dissected by the course of Rock River. In the southern and eastern portions of this county the surface is undulating, but in the northern part it is frequently quite level, and in some places wet and swampy. It is drained by Edward's Creek, some of the head waters of Spoon River, Rock and Green Rivers. This county contains twenty-three organized townships, viz.:—Alba, Andover, Annawan, Atkinson, Burns, Cambridge, Clover, Colona, Cornwell, Edford, Galva, Geneseo, Kewanee, Loraine, Lynn, Munson, Oscow, Oxford, Phœnix, Weller, Western, Wetherfield and Yorktown, with a population in 1860 of 20,660. In 1862, there were 156 public schools in this county, and 7,444 scholars. The number of those between the ages of five and twenty-one was 7,895. Number of male teachers 101, with an average salary of $27 per month; female, 153, whose salary averaged $17 per month. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $34,889; total received, $44,988. Average number of months the schools were in session, 7.5. In 1861, there were in the county 10,176 horses, 22,930 cattle, 2,871 sheep, and 19,483 swine. The products were, in wheat, 1,120,986 bushels; corn, 3,779,850 bushels, and over 22,000 acres of oats, hay, etc. The value of assessed personal property and real estate was $3,553,079; estimated true value, $7,698,337. (See Andover, Geneseo and Kewanee.)

Iroquois County,

Situated in the eastern part of the State, has Kankakee county on the north, the State of Indiana east, Vermillion county on the south, and Ford and Livingston counties on the west. It was laid off by the Legislature of 1833, and is at present thirty-five miles long north and south, and about thirty-one wide. It contains sixteen organized townships, viz: Ash Grove, Ashkum, Beaver, Bellmont, Chebanse, Concord, Crab Apple, Douglas, Iroquois, Lodi, Martinton, Middleport, Milford, Onarga, Papineau and Prairie Green, with a population in 1860 of 12,325. A large proportion of this county is prairie; the timber is in groves along the streams. It is watered by the Iroquois River and its branches—Spring, Sugar, and several other creeks. The Iroquois flows in a northerly direction, uniting with the Kankakee River in the northern portion of the county. It received its name from the circumstance of a party of Iroquois Indians being surprised and massacred on its banks by the Illinois nation. In 1861 there were 6,486 horses, 16,778 cattle, 7,770 sheep, and 15,223 swine in the county, and in addition to over 11,000 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, potatoes, etc., there were produced 156,502 bushels of wheat, and 2,824,100 bushels of corn. During the year 1862 there were 2,720 children attending the district schools, and 83 male teachers, whose salary averaged $25 per month, also 114 female teachers with an average salary of $16 per month. Number of persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, 3,415. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $10,294. Total received, $10,598. Average number of months the schools were in session, 6.6. In 1863 the assessed value of personal and real estate was $3,920,776. Estimated true value, $7,841,552. The Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central and the Great Western Railroads pass through this county, the former north and south through the western portion, and the latter east and west through the interior.

Jackson County.

This county is situated in the southern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Perry county, east by Franklin and Williamson, south by Union, and West by the Mississippi River and Randolph county. It was organized from Randolph and Johnson in 1816. At present it is from nineteen to twenty-nine miles east and west, and twenty-four miles north and south, containing the following named eleven townships, viz: Beaucoup, Big Hill, Buncombe, Carbondale, DeSoto, DeGognia, Elk Prairie, Kincaid, Princeton, Ridge and Town, with a population in 1860 of 9,589. The larger portion of this county consists of timber land, except in the north eastern part, where there are some fine prairies. The Big Muddy River traverses the interior of the county. There is an abundance of coal; and salt is obtained in considerable quantities in the vicinity of the Big Muddy. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the eastern portion of the county. In 1861 there 16,010 acres of wheat, 21,998 acres of corn, and 2,776 acres of other products were planted. There were owned in the county, 3,749 horses, 9,541 cattle, 4,589 sheep, and 24,017 swine. According to the report of the State Superintendent, there were in 1862 3,415 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,720 attending the district schools. The schools were in session an average of 6.6. months. Number of male teachers, 44, with an average of $26 per month. Female teachers, 24, with an average salary per month of $20. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $10,294. Total received, $10,598. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $1,182,631. Estimated true value, $2,562,367.

Fountain Bluff also known as the Big Hill, is situated on the Mississippi River, six miles above the mouth of the Big Muddy, in the south-western part of this county. It is of an oval shape, eight miles in circumference, with an elevation of over three hundred feet.

Jasper County

Was organized from Crawford and small portions of Lawrence and Clay, in 1831. It is situated in the south-east part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Cumberland and a corner of Clark, east by Crawford, south by Richland and a corner of Clay, and west by Effingham and a corner of Clay. It is twenty-two miles square, containing nine organized townships, viz:—Crooked Creek, Grandville, Grove, North Muddy, Saint Marie, Smallwood, South Muddy, Wade and Willow Hill, with a population in 1860 of 8,364. The Embarras river traverses the central, and the Muddy Fork of the Little Wabash the south-western part of the county. In 1861, there were 2,785 horses, 7,389 cattle, 8,342 sheep, and 14,947 swine owned in the county, and during the same year there were 4,333 acres of wheat, 19,673 acres of corn, and 3,246 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, &c., cultivated. In 1862, there were 3,623 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,948 attending the district schools. The number of male teachers employed was 64, at an average salary of $22 per month; female, 46—average salary $16 per month. The schools were in session an average of 6.3 months. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $8,235; total received, $8,780. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $1,053,495; estimated true value, $2,282,572.

Jefferson County

Was organized from Edwards and White counties, in 1818. It is situated in the southern interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Marion, east by Wayne and Hamilton, south by Franklin, and west by Perry and Washington counties. In size it is twenty-four miles square, containing the following named thirteen townships, viz.:—Blissville, Elk Prairie, Grand Prairie, Horse Creek, Horse Prairie, Jackson, Knob Prairie, Lynchburg, Moore's Prairie, Mount Prairie, Prairie Long, Rome and Spring Garden, with a population in 1860 of 12,965. The soil of this county is generally fertile, being about one-third prairie, and the balance timber lands. All the lands of the county are well adapted to the growth of corn, wheat, oats, grass and tobacco. The elevated timber and barren lands are eminently fitted for the production of fruits. In the production of apples and peaches, Jefferson county stands unrivalled among the counties of Southern Illinois. While the peculiar character of the soil of the timber lands insures a rapid and vigorous growth of the trees, the elevated position of most of these lands insures against a failure of the fruit crop. The chief exports of the county are live stock, wheat, tobacco and fruits. The castor bean has been exported quite largely for many years. This county is watered by the head waters of the Big Muddy, several of which have their source in this county. The Illinois Central Railroad passes near its western borders. In 1861, there were 4,291 horses, 16,425 cattle, 13,432 sheep, and 30,263 swine owned in the county. Also, 9,539 acres of wheat, 24,757 acres of corn, and 5,262 acres of oats, hay, etc., were cultivated. In 1862, there were 94 public schools, with 4,321 scholars. The number of children in the county between the ages of five and twenty-one was 5,473. The number of teachers employed was 112—male, 68; female, 44—the former with an average salary of $21, and the latter of $15 per month. The schools were in session an average of 6.6 months during the year. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $8,901; total received, $10,602. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,639,603; estimated true value, $3,552,473. Among the towns of this county are Mount Vernon, Lynchburg and Spring Garden. The first settlers in what is now Jefferson county were — Moore, Daniel Granger, Barton Atchison, William Carey, Isaac Carey, Dempsey Hood, William Hines and Thomas Jordan, who emigrated to the State of Illinois in 1816 and 1817. The chief portion of the population for the first twenty years was composed of emigrants from Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee and North Carolina. Since that time a considerable portion of the immigrant population has been from the States of Ohio and Indiana. The first death was that of Rhoda Allen, in 1819. The first white child born within the bounds of this county was Abraham Carey. The first county court was held in July, 1819, by county commissioners, Zadoc Carey, Joseph Jordan and Fleming Greenwood; Joel Pace, clerk, and Lewis Walkins, sheriff. The first circuit court was held in Mount Vernon, in October, 1819, Judge William Wilson presiding, and Joel Pace acting as clerk.

Jersey County.

This county is situated in the west-south-west part of the State, at the confluence of the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers; and has Greene county on the north, Macoupin on the east, while the Mississippi River flows along its southern and the Illinois along its western borders. It contains six organized townships, viz: Delhi, Fidelity, Fielding, Illinois, Jersey, and Missippi, with a population, in 1860, of 12,051. The country consists of woodland interspersed with prairie. The soil consists principally of a light, sandy loam, and is watered by the branches of Macoupin Creek, which flows along its northern borders, and by several small streams that flow into the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers. The Chicago and Alton railroad intersects the south-east corner. In 1861, there were 381,575 bus. of wheat; 1,404,400 bus. of corn, besides over 4,000 acres of oats, hay, etc., produced. There were 4,344 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, in 1862, and 3,203 attending the district schools.

There were 54 male and 49 female teachers employed in the former at a salary of $28, and the latter at $18 per month. The schools were in session, during the year, an average of 7.9 months. The total amount expended during the year for all school purposes was $12,250. Total amount received, $14,233. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863, was $2,332,562. Estimated true value, $5,053,884. (See Jersyville.)

Jo Daviess County.

Jo Daviess county was formed in 1827. It is situated in the extreme north-west corner of the State, and is bounded on the north by the State of Wisconsin, east by Stephenson county, south by Carroll county, and west by the Mississippi River. It is from twenty-one to thirty-three miles in length, east and west, and about twenty-one miles wide. It contains twenty-one organized townships, viz: Apple River, Berriman, Council Hill, Courtland, Derinda, East Galena, Elizabeth, Guilford, Hanover, Menomonee, Nona, Pleasant Valley, Rice, Rush, Scales Mound, Stockton, Thompson, Vinegar Hill, Ward Grove, West Galena, and Woodbine, with a population, in 1860, of 27,325. It is watered by Galena (formerly Fever) River, Apple River, and several other smaller streams. This county is rich, both for agricultural and mining purposes; lead is in abundance here. The surface is undulating, in some places partially hilly and well watered both with springs and mill streams. The soil is generally good. In 1861, there were 535,007 bus. of wheat; 1,827,750 bus. of corn, and over 27,000 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, etc., produced; and there were owned in the county, 7,059 horses; 21,691 cattle; 2,926 sheep; and 19.331 swine. In 1862, there were 14,856 persons, between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 7,042 attending the public schools, which were in session during the year an average of 7.6 months. There were 82 male and 114 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $28, and the latter $16 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $30,153. Total expended, $29,908. The value of personal and real estate, assessed in 1863, was $2,119,605. Estimated true value, $6,348,815. (See Galena.)

Johnson County

Was organized from Randolph county, in 1812. It is situated in the southern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Williamson county, east by Pope, south by Massac and a portion of Pulaski, and on the west by Union. In size it is eighteen miles square, with an addition on the south-west of a tract about eight miles by two, containing the following nine townships, viz.:—Atley, Bluff, Cache, Elvira, Flat Lick, Saline, Simpson, Sulphur Springs and Vienna, with a population in 1860 of 9,342. The interior of the county is watered by Cash (sometimes written Cache) River and Big Bay Creek. Between these two, and ten or twelve miles from the Ohio River, which washes its southern boundary, is a line of ponds, interspersed with ridges and islands of rich land. Johnson contains considerable quantities of good land, tolerable level, well timbered, and of a somewhat sandy soil The principal timber in this region is cypress, sugar maple, oaks of various species, hickory, sweet gum, with some poplar, elm, walnut and cedar. In 1861, there were owned in this county 2,002 horses, 4,938 cattle, 4,472 sheep, and 11,600 swine. In 1862, there were 4,010 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 3,075 attending the district schools, which were in session during the year an average of 5.8 months, under the care of 44 male and 11 female teachers, the former at an average salary of $29, and the latter $23 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $8,396; total amount expended, $6,913. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $967,892; estimated true value, $2,097,099.

Kane County.

Kane county is situated in the north-eastern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by McHenry county, east by Cook and DuPage, south by Kendal and west by DeKalb. It was organized from the attached portion of LaSalle county, in January, 1836, and is at present thirty miles, in length, north and south, and eighteen east and west. This county contains sixteen organized townships, viz.:—Aurora, Batavia, Blackberry, Big Rock, Burlington, Campton, Dundee, Elgin, Geneva, Hampshire, Kaneville, Plato, Rutland, St. Charles, Sugar Grove and Virgil, with a population in 1860 of 30,062. The surface consists of the most beautiful undulating prairies, diversified with some fine groves of timber. The soil is of excellent quality, producing fine crops of wheat, corn, hay, oats, etc. In 1861, the products were 637,826 bushels of wheat, 1,615,120 bushels of corn, besides 26,000 acres of oats, hay, &c. There were in the county, per assessor's returns, in the same year, 9,287 horses, 27,578 cattle, 15,581 sheep, and 8,410 swine. The Fox River flows through this county from north to south. It is also watered by affluents of the Kishwaukee, Big Rock, and several other streams. There is also a beautiful sheet of water a few miles south-west of Geneva, known as Nelson's Lake—named after Mr. John Nelson, the first settler in a place also called Nelson's Grove. This county is intersected in different sections by the C., B. & Q. R. R., the Dixon Air Line, Galena & Chicago, and the Fox River Valley Railroads. In naturally picturesque scenery, especially in the vicinity of Fox River, this county ranks second to no other in the State. In 1862, there were 9,043 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 9,448 attending the public schools. There were 91 male, and 232 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $26, and the latter $13 per month. The schools were in session an average of 7.3 months. Total amount received for all school purposes, $39,577; total expended, $37,020. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $3,775,010; estimated true value, $8,379,188. (See Aurora, Elgin and Geneva.)

Kankakee County.

This county is situated in the east-north-east part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Will county, east by the State of Indiana, south by Iroquois, and west by Livingston and Grundy counties. It is thirty-six miles long, east and west, and from the Indiana State Line, twenty-four miles west, twenty miles wide, and the remaining portion, fourteen miles. This county contains sixteen organized townships, viz: Aroma, Bourbonais, Essex, Ganier, Kankakee, Lime Stone, Manteno, Momence, Norton, Otto, Pilot, Rockville, St. Anne, Salina, Sumner, and Yellow Head, with a population, in 1860, of 15,412. The surface is generally fertile prairie. It is watered by the Kankakee River, and its affluents, which flows through the entire extent of the county. This river has a swift current, over a limestone bed. The prairie country, through which it passes, is principally of excellent soil and generally undulating. This river was discovered by the French at a very early period, and was one of the principal routes to the Illinois country. Its aboriginal name was Theakiki, or as pronounced in French, Te-aw-kee-kee, which, by the fatality attendant upon aboriginal names carried through French into English, has become fixed in the sound and orthography of Kankakee. In 1861, there were owned 6,199 horses; 15,745 cattle; 3,597 sheep; and 8,316 swine. Products: wheat, 375,282 bus., corn, 2,757,000 bus., with over 17,000 acres of oats, hay, potatoes, etc. In 1862, there were 6,357 children attending the district schools. There were sixty-two male and one hundred and twenty female teachers. The former at an average of $25, and the latter at $15 per month. The schools were in session an average of 7 months during the year. The total amount received for all school purposes was $16,983. Total expended, $14,491. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was, $2,348,055. Estimated true value, $5,087,452.

Kendall County

Is situated in the north-eastern interior of the State, bounded on the north by Kane, on the south by Grundy, on the east by Will, and on the west by part of LaSalle and DeKalb counties. Kendall is eighteen miles square, and contains the following nine townships, viz.: Little Rock, Bristol, Oswego, Fox, Kendall, Na-au-say, Big Grove, Lisbon and Seward. The population of the county numbers 13,073 persons, of whom, in 1862, being white, and between the ages of five and twenty-one years, were 4,733; attending school, 3,600, under the charge of 63 male, and 84 female teachers, at an average salary of $23 per month for the male teachers, and $15 per month for the female teachers. The average number of months school was in session was 7.4. Total amount received for all school purposes was $17,008, and expended, $13,312. The general appearance of the county is that of a rich farming country, prairie lands, with some timber, corn being the staple, wheat, oats, &c. The C., B. & Q. R. R. runs through the north west corner of the county, while the Fox River, a beautiful stream, affords excellent milling power. The earliest settlers of this county were Zenus McEwen, Wm. Noble Davis, H. A. Clark, L. B. Judson, Levi F. Arnold, Henry Sherrile, Elisha Doud and Col. William Cowdrey. It is said the seat of justice is soon to be removed to Yorkville; at present it is at Oswego. There are several affluents of the Fox River watering this county, such as Big Rock, &c.; also, AuSable, and others. There were also in 1861, horses, 6,825; 13,466 head of cattle, 5,291 sheep, and 7,413 swine. There were raised in the county 296,888 bushels of wheat, 2,669,260 bushels of corn, and 12,400 acres of other field products. In 1863, the assessed value of real and personal estate was $1,754,772; estimated true value, $3,802,006.

Knox County,

Situated in the west-north-west interior of the State, is bounded north by Henry, east by Stark and Peoria, south by Fulton, and west by Warren and Mercer counties. "It was laid off by the legislature in a general distribution of counties on the military tract, in January, 1825, though not organized for judical purposes until about five years after." In length, north and south, it is thirty miles, and twenty-four, east and west. Knox county contains twenty organized townships, viz: Cedar, Chestnut, Copley, Elba, Galesburgh, Haw Creek, Henderson, Indian Point, Knox, Lynn, Maynon, Ontario, Orange, Persifer, Rio, Salem, Sparta, Truro, Victoria, and Walnut Grove; and had a population, according to the census, 1860, of 28,663. The prairies in this county are usually large, and the soil of the first quality. The surface generally undulating, is drained and watered by Spoon River, Henderson Creek, and their tributaries. There are several large and excellent tracts of timber along the water courses. The Chicago, Burlington, and Quincy Railroad passes through the county, from the north-east to the south-west, intersected by the Peoria and Oquawka at Galesburg. In 1861, there were produced 809,766 bus. of wheat, and 6,125,075 bus. of corn. There were 24,451 acres of other field products cultivated. There were owned, in the same year, 12,994 horses; 25,641 cattle; 6,726 sheep; and 52,085 swine. Large quantities of hay are annually shipped, generally to the southern markets. In 1862, there were 11,166 persons between the ages of five and twenty; and the number of scholars in the public schools was 9,265. The number of male teachers was 134, with an average salary of $26 per month. Female teachers 209, with an average salary of $16 per month. Average number of months school was kept was 6.8. Rate of tuiton per scholar, $2.39. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $31,884. Total received, $33,293. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863, was $6,202,238. Estimated true value, $13,437,015. For number and real worth of educational institutions, this county is excelled by no other in the State. The following are located within its limits: Lombard University, Knox Collage, Knox Female Seminary, Ewing University, (female,) Abingdon College, Hedding Seminary, and several fine graded and other English and classical schools of lesser note. (See Abingdon, Galesburg and Knoxville.)

Lake County,

Situated in the extreme north-east of the State, is bounded on the north by Wisconsin on the east by Lake Michigan, south by Cook county, and west by McHenry county. It contains from 480 to 500 square miles. The surface is rolling prairie, interspersed with groves of white, burr and black oak, and in the western portion diversified with numerous small lakes, drained by Fox River and its tributaries. The O'Plaines River flows southwardly through the county. Large crops of wheat, corn and oats are raised. In 1861, the wheat crop amounted to 471,366 bushels · corn, 841,005. There were owned 6,493 horses, 20,619 cattle, and in 1863, the number of sheep, as estimated from reliable data, amounted, in round numbers, to 60,000. The products of the dairy in this county form one of the principal exports; cheese of the very best quality is made, shipped, and sold in Chicago as readily, and at the same price as veritable Hamburg; there are about 40,000 pounds of cheese and 250,000 pounds of butter exported annually. In 1863, there were 10,555 children under twenty-one. Those attending the public schools numbered 7,029; there were in addition ten private schools. We have not the number of teachers for 1863, but for 1862, there were 87 male, and 140 female teachers; average wages of male teachers, $24 per month, and of female teachers, $13. Average number of months school was kept in 1862, 7.5; rate of tuition per scholar, $2.39. The principal of the township fund in 1863 was $38,205. Total amount received for all school purposes, $19,349. Value of personal and real estate, per census of 1860, was $9,536,382.

Lake county was first settled—then part of Cook county—in 1834. The Indian title to the soil was extinguished in 1835. It was organized from part of McHenry county by act of Legislature, March 1st, 1839. The population in 1845 was 2,634. The first school in the county was taught by Laura B. Sprague, in 1836. On March 4th, 1845, the "Little Fort Porcupine and Democrat Banner" was established, being the first paper published in the county. This county contains fifteen organized townships, viz.:—Antioch, Avon, Benton, Cuba, Deerfield, Ela, Fremont, Goodale, Libertyville, Newport, Shields, Vernon, Warren, Wauconda and Waukegan, with a population in 1860 of 18,300. (See Waukegan and Lake Forest.

LaSalle County.

This county was formed in 1831. It is bounded on the north by Lee and DeKalb, on the south by Marshall and Livingston, on the east by Kendall and Grundy, and on the west by Putnam and Bureau, and is situated in the northern central portion of the State. It is thirty-six miles long, north and south, thirty miles east and west, and has in it thirty-one organized townships, viz.:—Adams, Brookfield, Bruce, Dayton, Deer Park, Dimmick, Eagle, Earl, Eden, Farm Ridge, Freedom, Grand Rapids, Groveland, Hope, LaSalle, Manlius. Mendota, Meriden, Mission, Northville, Ophir, Ottawa, Ottawa South, Osage, Peru, Rutland, Serena, Troy Grove, Utica, Vermilion and Waltham. This county is one of the most important in the State, by reason of its size, having an area of 1,050 square miles, and also by its population, which amounted in 1860 to 48,332 persons. The wealth of the county is of great extent, and the industrial pursuits of its people have raised in every part homesteads, and cultivated farms. The county is intersected by the Illinois River, flowing from east to west, and navigable for large vessels from the Mississippi River to Peru. It is also drained by the Fox and Vermilion Rivers, and by Indian Creek. The soil is exceedingly rich and well cultivated. The products were, in 1861, of wheat, 1,228,437 bushels; corn, 8,510,535 bushels, aud of all others, oats, hay, sorghum, &c., 39,910 acres under cultivation. The Illinois & Michigan Canal passes through this county, and also the Rock Island Railroad from east to west, which is crossed at LaSalle by the Illinois Central Railroad. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad also crosses the northern portion of this county. This county derives its name from M. LaSalle, one of the first explorers of Illinois, the capital being situated at Ottawa. The county abounds in coal mines, the principal of which are at LaSalle, where it is stated about 300 tons are raised daily. In 1861, there were owned 18,250 horses, 36,927 head of cattle, 3,900 sheep, and 20,934 swine. There were between the ages of five and twenty-one years 15,039 persons, and 13,447 attending school. School in session during the year, 6.9 months. The number of teachers was 191 male, 208 female. Average salary of male teachers $26, and of female teachers $15 per month. The receipts for all school purposes were $55,100; expended, $51,619. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $7,139,376; estimated true value is $15,468,648. In this county is situated the celebrated perpendicular mass of limestone, called "Starved Rock," near the foot of the Rapids and on the right bank of the Illinois River. Tradition says that after the Illinois Indians had killed Pontiac, the French Governor at Detroit, the northern Indians made war upon them. A band of the Illinois, in attempting to escape, took shelter on this rock, which they soon made inaccessible to their enemies, and where they were closely besieged. They had secured provisions, but their only resource for water was by letting down vessels with bark ropes to the river. The wiley besiegers contrived to come in canoes under the rock and cut off their buckets, by which means the unfortunate Illinois were starved to death. Many years after their bones were whitening on this summit. (See Ottawa, Peru and LaSalle.)

Lawrence County

Is situated in the south-east part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Crawford county, and on the east by the Wabash River, which separates it from Indiana, south by Wabash county, and west by Richland county. It was organized as a county in 1821, from a part of Edwards and Crawford counties. In size, it is twenty miles north and south, and from fourteen to twenty-two miles east and west; containing eight organized townships, viz: Allison, Bond, Christy, Denison, Lawrence, Lukin, Petty, and Russell, with a population, in 1860, of 9,214. This county contains about an equal proportion of timber and prairie, some of which is inferior land, and other portions of an excellent quality. It is watered by the Embarras River and other affluents of the Wabash. The Ohio and Mississippi Railroad passes through the county, east and west. Vincennes, Indiana, is situated about opposite the central part of the county. In 1861, there were 3,635 horses; 8,430 cattle; 7,446 sheep; and 15,220 swine. During the same year there were 13,116 acres of wheat, 25,104 acres of corn, and 3,670 acres of oats, hay, etc., cultivated in the county. In 1862, there were 61 public schools in this county, and 2,992 children in attendance. The number of teachers employed was sixty-two male and twenty-six female, the former at an average salary of $23, and the latter at $15 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 6.5 months. The total amount expended for all school purposes was $7,380. Total received, $8,198. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $1,487,520. Estimated true value, $3,222,960. Lawrenceville is the capital.

Lee County.

This county is situated in the northern interior of the State, between Ogle on the north, and LaSalle and Bureau on the south, DeKalb county on the east, and Whiteside on the west. It is thirty-six miles long, east and west, and twenty-one miles wide, inclucing the western four tiers of townships—the remaining portion on the east being eighteen miles wide. There are in this county nineteen organized townships, viz.:—Alton, Amboy, Bradford, Brooklyn, China, Dixon, Hamilton, Harmon, Lee Center, Marion, May, Nelson, Ogle, Palmyra, Reynolds, Sublette, Viola, Willow Creek and Wyoming, with a population in 1860 of 17,651. Rock River flows through the north-western part of the county; it is also watered by Green River, Five Mile Branch, and other streams. The Dixon Air Line Railroad and the Illinois Central pass through this county, intersecting at Dixon, the capital of the county, situated on the Rock River. The surface is principally prairie land, though interspersed with some groves of timber. The soil is excellent, producing abundant crops of corn, wheat, oats, etc. In 1861, the products were 981,566 bushels of wheat, 2,024,300 bushels of corn, and over 18,000 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc. There were in the county 7,605 horses, 17,285 cattle, 2,237 sheep, and 9,218 swine. According to the report of the State Superintendent for 1862, there were in this county 6,145 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 6,112 attending 125 public schools. There were 86 male, and 137 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $27, and the latter $18 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 7 months. The total receipts for all school purposes were $26,900; total expenditures, $32,273. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $2,966,913; estimated true value, $6,438,311. (See Dixon.)

Livingston County.

This county was formed from LaSalle, McLean and an attached portion of Vermilion counties, in February, 1837. It is bounded on the north by LaSalle and Grundy counties, east by Iroquois and Ford, south by Ford and McLean, and west by McLean, Woodford and LaSalle. It is thirty-six miles long, east and west, by twenty-four north and south, with an addition of a tract eighteen miles east and west, and about nine and one-half north and south., adjoining and forming the southern extremity of the three eastern tiers of townships. Under township organization, it contains twenty-five townships, viz.:—Amity, Avoca, Belle Prairie, Broughton, Chatsworth, Dwight, Eppard's Point, Esmen, Forestville, Indian Grove, Long Point, Nebraska, Nevada, New Town, Odell, Owego, Pike, Pleasant Ridge, Pontiac, Reading, Rook's Creek, Round Grove, Saunemin, Sunbury and Waldo, with a population in 1860 of 11,637. This county contains some considerable tracts of timber and a large quantity of fine, rich undulating prairie. It is watered by the Vermilion River of the Illinois and its affluents; also, by Mason Creek, and other streams. Coal abounds; also, sand and limestone furnish abundant building material. The Chicago & Alton and the Logansport, Peoria & Burlington Railroads pass through this county, the former through the interior, and the latter through the south-eastern portion. In 1861, the products were, wheat, 381,616 bushels; corn, 2,743,435 bushels, besides over 10,000 acres of oats, rye, hay. etc. In the same year there were owned in the county 6,395 horses, 12,884 cattle, 1,779 sheep, and 10,938 swine. In 1862, there were 4,606 scholars attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.2 months during the year. There were 67 male, and 107 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $24, and the latter $19 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $24,462; total amount expended, $23,981. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $3,202,195; estimated true value, $7,104,756. (See Pontiac.)

Logan County.

This county is located in the central portion of the State. It was formed out of portions of the counties of Sangamon, Tazewell, McLean, and DeWitt, and was organized in the year 1839. It is bounded on the north by Tazewell, north-east by McLean, east by DeWitt and Macon, south by Sangamon, and on the east by Menard and Mason counties. Its increase in population, since that time, has been gratifying' and the rapidity with which its improvements have been advancing has been surpassed by few counties, if any, in the State. The expansive timber-fringed prairies, upon which herds of deer fed and gamboled unmolested, have yielded to the influence of the husbandman. And, now, you behold the undulating prairie lands transformed into fruitful fields, with a soil unsurpassed for fertility. Being peculiarly adapted to agriculture in all its branches, as well as stock raising, the attention of the people have turned in that direction, and their efforts crowned with marked success—their industry richly rewarded. Fine water courses, to wit: Prairie Creek, Sugar Creek, Kickapoo, Deer Creek, and Salt Creek, with their branches, all skirted with timber, thread their way through different portions of the county, thus bringing within a reasonable distance of all, both water and timber. Through the center of the county runs the St. Louis, Alton, and Chicago Railroad, which is the principal means of transportation of grain and stock exported from the county, and merchandise, agricultural implements, etc., imported. This county is twenty-eight miles long, north and south, and twenty-four miles wide; in computing the area, however, a deduction should be made for the indentation of Sangamon and Menard counties, on the south-west, occupying a space of about six miles square, and a smaller one of McLean, on the north-east, of six miles by three. It contains the following nine townships, viz: Atlanta, Elkhart, Eminence, Lincoln, Middletown, Mount Pulaski, Prairie Creek, Salt Creek, and Sugar Creek, with a population in 1860, of 14,272. There are also flourishing villages of the same names. The Decatur, Lincoln and Pekin Railroads, which has lately been chartered by the legislature, passes through the county, intersecting the Chicago and Alton Railroad at Lincoln. In 1861, there were 7,046 horses; 13,016 cattle; 9,693 sheep; and 30,338 swine. The products were, in wheat, 425,272 bus. corn, 3,938,600 bus., besides over 9,500 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, etc. According to the State Superintendents report, in 1862, there then were 4,547 persons, between the ages of five and twenty-one; and 4,288 scholars attending the public schools. There were ninety-one male and forty-seven female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $27, and the latter $19 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 7 months. Total amount received for all school purposes, $24,062. Total expended, $19,844. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $4,164,359. Estimated true value, $8,328,718. (See Lincoln.)

McDonough County,

Situated in the western part of the State, in the centre of the Military Tract, is bounded on the north by Henderson and Warren counties, east by Fulton, south by Schuyler, and west by Hancock. It was formed from Pike county, in 1825, but not organized till 1829. It is twenty-four miles square, containing sixteen organized townships, viz.:—Bethel, Blandinville. Chalmers, Eldorado, Emmett, Hire, Industry, Lamoine, Macomb, Mound, New Salem, Prairie City, Sciota, Scotland, Tennessee and Walnut Grove, with a population in 1860 of 20,069. Prairie City, Bushnell, Colchester, and other thriving villages in this county, that have sprung up as if by magic within the last few years, in constant growth of numbers, size and improvements, keep pace with the rapid developments of the rich, productive country around them. Crooked Creek and its branches, Spring Creek in the western, Drowning Fork in the north-eastern, and Troublesome, Grindstone and Camp Creeks in the southern portions, water most of this tract. Sugar Creek flows through the extreme south-east. The eastern side of this county, for eight or ten miles, is mostly undulating prairie; the remainder is suitably proportioned into timber and prairie of the richest quality. The greater portion of this county is not excelled for agricultural purposes by any part of the Mississippi Valley. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad passes through the county, from north-east to south-west, about equi-distant between the Mississippi and Illinois Rivers. In 1861, there were 8,196 horses, 17,683 cattle, 9,358 sheep, and 47,483 swine. That McDonongh is, in every sense of the word, an agricultural county will be seen from the following productions for 1861: Wheat, 640,602 bushels; corn, 4,341,975 bushels. In addition, there were large crops of oats, hay, potatoes, sorghum, etc., amounting to 15,585 acres. In 1862, there were 7,281 children attending the public schools. Number of male teachers, 117, whose average monthly wages were $24; female teachers, 88—average wages, $14 per month. The schools were in session an average of 6.7 months. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $20,626; received, $24,057. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $4,215,880; estimated true value, $9,134,425. (See Macomb.)

McHenry County

Was formed from Cook county, in January, 1836. It is situated in the north-east part of the State, and is bounded on the north by the State of Wisconsin, east by Lake county, south by Kane and a corner of DeKalb, and west by Boone. It is twenty-seven miles long, east and west, and twenty-four miles wide, containing seventeen organized townships, viz: Alden, Algonquin, Burton, Chemung, Coral, Dorr, Dunham, Grafton, Greenwood, Hartland, Hebron, McHenry, Marengo, Nunda, Richmond, Riley, and Seneca, with a population in 1860, of 22,089. The surface is principally prairie, with a rich, productive soil, and is watered by Fox and Kishwaukee Rivers and their affluents. Along the bank of these streams there are some fine groves of timber. In the eastern portion of this county are found several small lakes, some of which have limpid water, gravelly beds, with ridges of sand and pebbles around them. From one of these, known as Crystal Lake, ice of an excellent quality is obtained and furnished to the citizens of Chicago. This county is intersected in different sections by the Chicago and Galena, Chicago and Northwestern, Fox River Valley, and the Kenosha and Rockford Railroads. In 1861, there were owned in this county, 8,862 horses; 26,540 cattle; 9,353 sheep; and 10,081 swine. Products: wheat, 917,167 bus.; corn 1,462,000 bus.; together with over 25,000 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc. In 1862, there were 8,401 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one; and 7,320 attending the public schools. There were one hundred and eight male, and one hundred and eighty-six female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $21, and the latter at $11 per month. The schools were in session an average of 8.5 months. The total expenditures for all school purposes, was $30,777. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $3,343,802. Estimated true value, $7,244,904. (See Woodstock.)

McLean County

Is situated in the central portion of the State, with Woodford and Livingston counties on the north, a portion of Livingston, Ford and Champaign counties on the east, Piatt, DeWitt and a corner of Logan on the south, and Tazewell and a part of Woodford on the west. It contains twenty-eight organized townships, viz: Arrow Smith, Bell Flower, Bloomington, Blue Mound, Cheney's Grove, Chenoa, Cropsey, Dale, Danvers, Downes, Dry Grove, Empire, Funks Grove, Gridley, Hudson, Lawn Dale, Lexington, Martin, Money Creek, Mosquito Grove, Mount Hope, Normal, Old Town, Padua, Randolph, Towanda, West, and White Oaks, with a population, in 1860, of 28,772. In length the county is from twenty-one to forty-two miles, east and west, and from twenty-two to thirty-three miles, north and south, containing about eleven hundred square miles. The surface is mostly elevated prairie, moderately undulating, and of rich soil. There are some fine tracts of timber, generally arranged in beautiful groves of various shapes and sizes, probably constituting one-tenth of the county. It is watered by the Kickapoo, Sugar and Salt Creeks, all of which take their rise in the prairies of this county. The heads of the Vermillion river of the Illinois, are found in the north-eastern corner, and those of Sangamon, in the eastern limits. The residents of McLean county are largely engaged in raising and fattening stock, especially cattle. The assessors returns for 1863, show a total of 41,126 neat cattle. According to the best estimates, about 12,000 were fattened and sold during the year ending March, 1864. The same returns give a total of 17,206 horses and mules; 27,926 sheep; and 62,075 swine. An immense amount of corn—the staple crop—is raised, and also wheat, oats, and other grain. The products of 1861 were, 944,146 bus. of wheat, also 6,718,360 bus. of corn, and over 19,000 acres of rye, oats, flax and other products. From the estimates of grain buyers, there were about 950,000 bus. of grain sold during the year ending March 1864. Over 800,000 bus. were known to have been sold in Bloomington alone. Flax has become an important article of culture, over a thousand tons having been raised during the past year. Tobacco is also cultivated. Within the past few years considerable attention has been given to nursery and fruit growing. The Chicago, Alton and St. Louis, and the Illinois Central Railroads pass through the county, intersecting at Normal, two miles north of Bloomington. In 1862, there were 8,739 children, between the ages of five and twenty-one. The number of scholars attending the public schools, was 8,460. There were 146 male and 151 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $25 and the latter $16 per month. The schools were in session an average of 6.7 months. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $33,485. Received, $37,991.

This county was organized under an act of the Legislature about the years 1829 or 1830, as the county seat was located at Bloomington in the year 1830. It embraced part of DeWitt, Woodford, Logan and Livingstone counties, and was itself formerly a part of Tazewell county. The first settlers in the county were John W. Dawson, Ebenezer Rhodes and sons, Wm. Lucus, John Hendrix, Wm. Thomas, —— Cox, John Benson, Wm. Hodge, James Letta, Wm. Orendorff, Thomas Orendorff, Wm. Walker, (who was in the celebrated battle of New Orleans,) Henry Little, Bailey Harbord, Matthew Harbord, Mosby Harbord, Peter McCullough and a few others, who settled in the territory now known as the County of McLean, it being named after John McLean, who was senator of the State from Shaneetown,

The first sale of government lands for this and adjoining counties was in October 1829, and the town plat of Bloomington was laid out and sold in July 1831; the site was originally called Keg Grove, by John W. Dawson, on account of the shape of the grove of trees; it was broadly pronounced Cag Grove. Then it was changed to Blooming Grove, on account of the numberless beautiful prairie flowers, until it has, in due course become Bloomingtown or Bloomington.

Numerous other growing towns and villages have sprung up, among which may be named LeRoy, Lexington, Pleasant Hill, Hudson, McLean, Concord, Wilkesborough, and a few others In 1863, the assessed value of real and personal estate was 7,140,820 dollars; the estimated true value is 15,471,760 dollars. (See Bloomington.)

Macon County

Is situated in the central part of the State, bounded on the north by DeWitt, on the east by Piatt and Moultrie, south by Moultrie, Shelby and Christian, and on the west by Christian, Sangamon and Logan counties. It was organized from an attached part of Shelby county, in 1829. It is twenty-seven miles long, north and south, and twenty-seven wide, containing fourteen organized townships, viz.:—Austin, Decatur, Friend, Harrisburg, Hickory, Long Creek, Maroa, Mound, Mount Zion, Niantic, Oakley, South Macon, Wheatland and Whitmore, with a population of 13,738 in 1860. The surface consists of excellent prairie land, diversified with several small tracts of timber. There is much good land in this county. The Illinois Central and Great Western Railways pass through this county, intersecting at Decatur. In 1861, there were 5,694 horses, 12,210 cattle, 4,086 sheep, and 24,921 swine owned in this county. Products: Wheat, 402,407 bushels; corn, 3,096,250, and 11,282 acres of oats, hay, etc. In 1862, there were 4,646 scholars attending the public schools. There were sixty-five male, and fifty-three female teachers engaged, the former at an average salary of $28, and the latter $20 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 6.6 months. The total amount of receipts for all school purposes was $25,352; total expenditures, $21,903. The assessed value of personal property and real estate in 1863 was $3,852.985; estimated true value, $7,348,134. (See Decatur.)

Macoupin County,

Situated in the south-western interior of the State, has Morgan and Sangamon counties on the north, Montgomery on the east, Madison on the south, and Jersey and Greene on the west. It was organized from the attached portion of Greene county, in 1829. In early days, the county bore the name of Black Hawk Hunting Ground. This county is thirty-six miles long, north and south, and twenty-four wide, containing twenty-three townships, viz.:—Barr's Store, Brighton, Bunker Hill, Carlinville, Chesterfield, Clyde, Cummington, Gillespie, Girard, Lake Fork, Nilwood, Otter Creek, Piasa, Plainview, Rhodes Point, Scottville, Shaw's Point, Shipman, South Otter Creek, Staunton, Virden, Western Mound and Woodburn, with a population in 1860 of 24,602. The greater portion of this county is fertile prairie. About one-third is timber land. It is watered by Macoupin Creek and its branches, which thread their channels through almost every portion of the county. Affluents of the Cahokia water the southern, and some other streams the northern sections. The Chicago & Alton and Terre Haute & St. Louis Railroads pass, the former through the interior, from north-east to south-west, and the latter through the south-east. In 1861, there were 10,309 horses, 20,525 cattle, 9,045 sheep, and 32,914 swine owned in the county. Products: Wheat, 227,182 bushels; corn, 3,994,485 bushels, and 17,317 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc. In 1862, there were 7,816 children attending the public schools. Number of male teachers, 136, at an average salary of $27, and 87 female teachers, whose average salary was $18 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 6.2 months. The receipts for all school purposes for that year were $29,437; expended, $27,654. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $4,671,003; estimated true value, $10,120,506.

Macoupin is aboriginal, and in the French authors spelled Ma-qua-pin, but has become legalized on the statute books of the State as spelled above. This word is said to be the Indian name of a vegetable with a large round leaf, growing in the lakes and ponds of Illinois, called by some "splatter dock," and found plentifully near this stream. The large roots of this plant, if eaten raw, are very deleterious. The Indians, in early times, dug holes in the earth, which they walled with stone, and after heating them with large fires, put in the roots, covered them with earth, and in two days the rank, poisonous taste was gone. They were then put on poles and dried for food. In this form they were eaten by the natives. (See Carlinville.)

Madison County.

This county is situated in the south-western part of the State, on the Mississippi, opposite the mouth of the Missouri River. St. Louis is situated opposite the south-west corner of the county. Madison is bounded on the north by Macoupin and portions of Jersey and Montgomery counties, east by Bond and Clinton, and south by Clinton and St. Clair counties, while the Mississippi flows along its western borders. It was organized from St. Clair county in 1812, and at that time embraced a large portion of the State. It is at present from twenty-eight to thirty-four miles long, east and west, and twenty-four miles wide. There are within its limits the following named sixteen townships, viz: Alhambra, Alton, Collinsville, Edwardsville, Highland, Looking Glass, Madison, Marine, Monticello, Omph Ghent, Saline, Silver-Creek, Six Mile, Troy, Upper Alton, and White Rock, with a population in 1860 of 31,251. Settlements were formed in this county as early as 1802. A portion of the county lies in the American Bottom, but a large part of it is high undulating land, and duly proportioned into timber and prairie. The prairies are finely located for agricultural purposes. It is watered by Silver and Cahokia Creeks and Wood River and their branches. Coal and building-stone are abundant in the vicinity of Alton. Along Wood River and Cahokia Creek excellent timber is found.

In 1861 the products were of wheat, 629,689 bushels; corn, 3,652,715 bushels; and several thousand acres of oats, hay, sorghum, etc. There were owned in this county, 9,243 horses, 24,270 cattle, 4,570 sheep, and 29,042 swine. In 1862 there were 122 public schools, attended by 7,335 scholars. There were 118 male and 60 female teachers employed during the year, the former at an average of $32, and the latter $21.45 per month. The schools were in session an average of 7 months. The total amount of expenditures for all school purposes were $40,767. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $8,623,252. Estimated true value, $18,683,712.

Monk's Hill is situated on the American bottom, in the borders of Madison county, about eight miles north-east from St. Louis. At the base the circumference is about 600 yards, and its height about 90 feet. On the south side about half way down, is a broad step, or apron, about fifteen feet wide. This hill or mount was the residence, for several years, of the monks of the order of LaTrappe, the most rigid and austere of all the monkish orders. Their monastery was originally situated in the district of Perche, in France, in one of the most lonely spots that could be chosen. They fled from the commotions of that kingdom to America, lived for a time in Kentucky, and came to Illinois in 1806 or 1807, and settled on this mound. They cultivated a garden, repaired watches, and traded with the people. They were extremely severe in their discipline and penances. In 1813, they sold off their personal property, and left the country for France. (See Alton, Edwardsville, and Monticello.)

Marion County.

The county of Marion is situated in the southern part of the State, equi-distant from the Great Wabash and Mississippi Rivers, being about sixty-three miles due east from the latter, and seventy miles due west from the former river. It is on the line of the great traveled route from Vincennes to St. Louis. It contains sixteen townships, and is compactly laid out in a square, containing 576 square miles. It is bounded on the north by Fayette, east by Clay and Wayne counties, on the south by Jefferson county, and on the the west by Clinton county. The land is well divided into prairie and timbered, the latter rather predominating. It abounds with rock and a good quality of bituminous coal. Marion county is remarkably well situated for the culture of fruit, and apple, peach and grape crops are invariably successful. The peach crop rarely fails, and the apple never. The surface of the county is undulating, and some of the finest prairie lands in the State are to be found here. One distinctive feature of this county is its means of inter-communication, it being traversed near the southern boundary by the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad, running from east to west entirely through the length of the county. The Main, and also the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad traverse the county, the former from north to south, the latter from north-east to south-west, uniting in the south-western portion of the county, at Central City. The educational advantages of Marion are quite important. In the town of Salem, the capital of the county, there is a female seminary, devoted to the higher and subordinate branches of education, under the auspices of the Southern Illinois Methodist Conference. There is also a fine edifice occupied as a public school, under control of competent teachers. Salem, Centralia, Central City, Kinmundy, Odin, Middleton and Sandoval are among the most flourishing towns in this county. Marion contains twelve organized townships, viz.:—Centralia, Eagan, McGuire, Meacham, North Fork, Omega, Patoka, Raccoon, Romine, Salem, Sandoval and Walnut, with a population in 1861 of 12,739. In 1861, there were 4,785 horses, 11,946 cattle, 8,313 sheep, and 20,130 swine. Products: 165,780 bushels of wheat, 2,206,325 bushels of corn, together with good crops of oats, hay, etc. In 1862, there were 5,735 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, while there were 5,009 attending the public schools. Male teachers 72, whose average monthly wages were $22; female teachers 55, with an average of $15 per month. Average number of months school was kept, 6.2. Rate of tuition in the county per scholar, $2.17. Amount expended for all school purposes, $12,768; received, $13,826. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $2,287,597; estimated true value, $4,956,460. Marion county was formed from Jefferson and Fayette counties, in 1823. It is drained by the East Fork of Kaskaskia River and other streams in the west, and Skillet Fork in the east. (See Salem and Centralia.)

Marshall County

Is situated in the northern central part of the State, bounded on the north by Putnam and Bureau, on the south by Peoria and Woodford, on the east by Livingston, and on the west by Stark counties. It is about thirty-one miles long from east to west, and twelve miles wide from north to south, having twelve organized townships, namely:—Bell Plain, Bennington, Evans, Henry, Hopewell, Lacon, La Prairie, Richland, Roberts, Saratoga, Steuben and Whitefield. The population of this county in 1860 was 13,437, of whom 4,041 were between five and twenty-one years; attended school, 3,440, under the charge of 66 male and 70 female teachers, at an average salary of $30 per month to the male, and $17 per month to the female teachers. The whole amount received for school purposes in that year was $20,409, and expended, $19,443. The schools were in session an average of 6.7 months. This county is watered by the Illinois River flowing through the interior, and the affluents of that river. The Bureau Valley Railway runs down the western bank of the Illinois River. The Illinois Central passes along its eastern border. The products of the county were, of wheat, 647,853 bushels, and of corn, 2,334,750 bushels, and 11,840 acres of other field products. In 1861, there were owned 6,374 horses, 11,050 cattle, 1,759 sheep, and 12,490 swine. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $1,988,387; estimated true value, $4,308,172. There are several fine educational institutions in the county, among which are North Illinois Institute and Henry Female Seminary. The surface of this county is diversified of prairie and wood lands, and is very productive to the industrious tiller of the soil. (See Lacon.)

Mason County

Is situated in the western central part of the State, with Tazewell county on the north, Tazewell and Logan east, Menard and Cass on the south, and Schuyler and Fulton counties on the west. It is from twelve to thirty-six miles in length, from east to west, and from twelve to twenty-one miles wide. Containing eleven organized townshipi, viz: Allen's Grove, Bath, Crane Creek, Havana, Lynchburgh, Manito, Mason City, Mason Plaines, Pensylvania, Quiver, and Salt Creek, with a population in 1860, of 10,931. The soil of this county is very fertile. Coal is found in abundance. The Illinois River flows along the north-western, and the Sangamon along its southern boundaries. Crane Lake is situated in the central, and is drained by Crane Creek, an affluent of the Sangamon. The Illinois River Railroad passes through the western portion; and the Tonica and Petersburgh Railroad, when complete, will pass through the eastern portion of the county. In 1861, there were 3,034 horses; 7,305 cattle; 1 480 sheep; and 11,884 swine in this county. Product in 1860: wheat, 429,930 bus., corn, 2,720,630 bus., and 7,336 acres of oats, hay, rye, potatoes, etc. In 1862, there were 3,443 persons, between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 3,114 attending the district schools. There were forty-nine male and fifty-one female teachers engaged, the former at $29, and the latter at $18 per month. The schools were in session an average of 6.3 months during the year. Total amount expended for all school purposes $14,152. (See Bath and Havana.

Massac County

Is one of the extreme southern counties in the State, south of Johnson and Pope, west of the southern part of Pope, east by Pulaski, while the Ohio River flows along the southern boundary. It contains the following named five townships, viz: George's Creek, Hillerman, Jackson, Metropolis and Washington, with a population of 6,213 in 1860. A large portion of this county is covered with fine forests of timber. The soil of the river bottom lands is very rich. In 1861 there were 6,951 acres of wheat, 11,012 acres of corn, and 1,548 acres of oats, potatoes, tobacco, etc., cultivated. There were owned in the county 1,416 horses, 4,786 cattle, 2,622 sheep, and 12,005 swine. During the year 1862 there were 1,706 children attending the district schools. There were 32 male and 12 female teachers engaged—the former at an average of $27, and the latter $21 per month. The schools were in session an average of 5.7 months during the year. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $6,757. Total value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $1,180,863. Estimated true value, $2,558,536.

Fort Massac, formerly a military post, is situated on the north bank of the Ohio River, in this county. A fort was erected here by the French when in possession of the county. The Indians, then at war with them, laid a curious stratagem to take it. A number of them appeared in the daytime on the opposite side of the river, each of whom was covered with a bear skin, and walking on all fours. Supposing them to be bears, a party of the French crossed the river in pursuit of them. The remainder of the troops left their quarters to see the sport. In the meantime a large body of warriors, who were concealed in the woods near by, came silently behind the fort, entered without opposition, and very few of the French escaped the massacre. They afterwards built another fort on the same ground, and called it Massac, in memory of this disastrous event. In 1750 they abondoned the position. After the revolutionary war, the Americans repaired or rebuilt it, and kept a garrison here for several years.

Menard County.

This county is situated in the western central part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Mason county, east by Logan, south by Sangamon, and west by Cass. It is twenty-two miles long, east and west, and an average of sixteen miles wide. In computing the area, a deduction should be made for an indentation of Sangamon county on the south-east, embracing about thirty-six square miles. It contains the following seven townships, viz.:—Athens, Indian Creek, Petersburg, Rock Creek, Sandridge, Sugar Grove and Tallula, with a population in 1860 of 9,584. This county is watered by the Sangamon River, flowing through from south to north; also, by its branches, Indian, Rock, and several other streams. The Tonica & Petersburg Railroad passes through the interior from the south-west corner in a north-western course. In 1861, there were owned in this county 4,969 horses, 8,879 cattle; sheep, 7,949, and 23,835 swine. During the same year, 9,477 acres of wheat, 50,417 acres of corn, and 9,047 acres of hay, oats, potatoes, etc., were cultivated. In 1862, according to the State Superintendent's report, there were 3,981 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,978 attending the public schools. There were fifty-five male, and thirty-one female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $28, and the latter $20 per month. The schools were in session during the year an average of 6.3 months. The total amount expended for all school purposes was $12,842; total received, $15,883. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $2,761,880; estimated true value, $5,523,760.

Mercer County

Is situated in the west-north-western part of the State, south of Rock Island county, west of Henry and the northern portion of Knox, and north of Warren and Henderson counties, while its western borders are washed by the Mississippi River. It is from twenty-six to thirty-three miles long, east and west, and eighteen miles wide, containing fifteen organized townships, viz.:—Abingdon, Duncan, Eliza, Greene, Keithsburg, Mercer, Millersburg, New Boston, North Henderson, Ohio Grove, Perryton, Pre-emption, Richland Grove, Rivoli and Suez, with a population in 1860 of 15,042. In the interior and eastern portion of this county there are some extensive tracts of prairie. The surface is beautifully undulating, and the soil rich. It is watered by Edwards, Pike and North Henderson Creeks, and some other streams, along which are some fine tracts of timber. There is a good supply of coal. In 1860, the products were, wheat, 591,260 bushels; corn, 2,807,350 bushels, and 12,261 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc. There were in the county in 1861, horses, 7,888; cattle, 17,824; sheep, 2,479, and 36,177 swine. In 1862, there were 5,667 scholars attending the public schools, which were in session during the year 7.1 months. There were 69 male, and 94 female teachers employed, the former at an average of $33, and the latter $16 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $22,693; total expended, $20,473. The assessed value of real and personal estate for 1863 was $2,826,749; estimated true value, $6,124,622.

Monroe County

Was organized from Randolph and St. Clair counties, in 1816, and is situated in the south-west part of the State, bounded on the north by St. Clair, south by Randolph, east by Washington and Perry counties, and west by the Mississippi River, which takes a circular course along its western borders. It has an average length, north and south, of about twenty miles, with an average width of fifteen miles, containing the following named eight townships: Bluff, Eagle, Fountain, Harrisonville, Mitchie, Moredock, New Design and Renault. Population in 1860 was 12,832. The American bottom, which is noted for its rich alluvial soil, runs through the county adjacent to the Mississippi, and is divided into timber and prairie. Around Waterloo and New Design, and on the eastern border of the county, is considerable good land, and a mixture of timber and prairie. It is watered by Horse Prairie de Long and Eagle Creeks. In 1861, there were 3,480 horses, 7,623 cattle, 1,406 sheep, and 10,596 swine. There were 19,583 acres of wheat, 18,106 acres of corn, and 14,638 acres of rye, oats, hay, potatoes, &c., cultivated. In 1862, according to the Report of the State Superintendent of Public Instruction, there were 4,321 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,944 children attending the public schools, which were in session during the year an average of 6.8 months. There were fifty-nine male and twelve female teachers employed, the former at an average of $27, and the latter $22 per month. The total expenditure for school purposes was $12,739. In the year 1863, the assessed value of personal property and real estate was $1,988,201; estimated true value, $4,307,768.

Montgomery County.

This county is situated in the south-west central part of the State, and is bounded north by Sangamon and Christian counties, east by Shelby and Fayette, south by Bond and portions of Madison and Fayette, and on the west by Macoupin. It was organized from Bond in 1821. It contains twelve townships named as follows, viz: Audubon, Bear Creek, Bois D'Arc, Butler, East Fork, Hillsboro, Hurricane, Irving, Litchfield, Nokomis, Walshville, and Zanesville, with a population of 13,979. The surface is generally high and undulating. It is watered by Shoal Creek, its east and west branches, and other smaller streams. The Terre Haute, Alton and St. Louis railroad passes through the interior of the county.

In 1861 there were 6,744 horses, 12,250 cattle, 8,843 sheep, and 14,154 swine, while the products were, in wheat 293,794 bushels; corn, 905,300 bushels, in addition to 14,638 acres of oats, rye, hay, etc. According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862 there were 4,817 children attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.5 months during the year. There were eighty one male and sixty-seven female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $26, the latter, $17 per month. The total amount of receipts for all school purposes during that year were $16,394. Total expenditures, $15,789. The value of personal and real estate, per assessment of 1863, was $2,263,055. Estimated true value, $4,916,285. (See Hillsboro.)

Morgan County.

This is another of Illinois' finest counties, situated in the south-western part of the State, south of Cass, west of Sangamon, north of Macoupin, Greene and Scott, and east of Scott, Pike and Brown counties. It was formed from the attached part of Greene county in 1823. The general slope of the country is toward the west. It is well proportioned into timber and prairie. The soil is mostly of a rich sandy loam, deep and highly productive, yielding excellent crops of corn, wheat, rye, hay, oats, etc. Apples, peaches, and other fruits grow abundantly. The Illinois River washes the north-western border of this county. Indian, Apple, Mauvaise-Terre, Sandy, and several smaller streams flow through its different sections, and furnish many fine mill seats. Morgan is from 20 to 30 miles in length east and west, and from 6 to 24 miles wide, containing the townships of Arcadia, Bethel, Concord, Franklin, Jacksonville, Lynnville, Mauvaise-Terre, Meredosia, Sulphur Springs, Waverly, and Yatesville, with a population in 1860 of 22,112. In 1861 there were 7,542 horses, 14,318 cattle, 6,633 sheep, and 31,210 swine. There were ninety-nine male, and sixty female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $31, and the latter $21 per month. Total receipts in the county for all school purposes was $32,355. Total expenditures for same, was $28,784. The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $6,742,231. Estimated true value, $14,608,167.

Within the boundary of this county will be found all the great benevolent institutions of this State—such as the Deaf and Dumb Asylum, the Institution for the blind, the Hospital for the Insane, and an Orphan Asylum, wnich has been originated by a benevolent lady, of the name of Mrs. Ayers, whose efforts to care for the orphan children, will deservedly hand her name down to posterity with unfading honor. These are all located at Jacksonville, besides three other educational institutions, rendering the place famous for intelligent benevolence. See Jacksonville.)

Moultrie County

Lies in the south-eastern central part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Piatt, east by Douglas and Coles, south by Shelby, and west by Shelby and Macon counties. It is of an irregular shape, and contains an area of about eighteen miles square. Its townships are Lovington, Marrow Bone, Sullivan, Taylor, and Whitley Creek, with a population in 1860 of 6,385. The surface of the land consists of rich prairie, interspersed with strips of timber lying along the Kaskaskia and Okaw Rivers, which flow through the centre of the county. The Terre Haute & St. Louis Railroad passes through the south-eastern corner, and the Great Western near its northern, and the Chicago Branch near its eastern boundaries. In 1861, there were 3,231 horses, 7,250 cattle, 7,288 sheep, and 19,420 swine. The products were 85,765 bushels of wheat, 2,016,950 bushels of corn, and 4,745 acres of hay, oats, sorghum, etc. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 1,977 children attending the public schools. 31 male, and 15 female teachers employed, the former receiving an average salary of $23, and the latter $17 per month. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $1,205,963; estimated true value, $2,612,919. (See Sullivan.)

Ogle County

Was formed from Jo Daviess and a part of the attached portion of LaSalle, in January, 1836. It is situated in the northern interior of the State, with Stephenson and Winnebago counties on the north, DeKalb on the east, Lee on the south, and Carroll on the west. It is 38 miles long, east and west, with an average width of 20 miles; containing twenty-two organized townships, viz: Brookville, Buffalo, Byron, Dement, Flagg, Foreston, Grand Detour, Lafayette, Leaf River, Lynn Village, Marion, Maryland, Monroe, Mount Morris, Nashua, Oregon, Pine Creek, Pine Rock, Rock Vale, Scott, Taylor, and White Rock, with a population in 1860 of 22,888. Rock River runs through the interior of the country, taking a south-westerly course; it is also watered by Kite River, Leaf River, and other small streams. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the western portion, and the Dixon Air Line through the south-eastern. Much of the surface is undulating, the soil deep and rich. Timber is usually found, in groves of different shapes and sizes.

In 1863 there were produced 1,247,250 bushels of wheat, 3,221,550 bushels of corn, besides over 30,000 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc. In 1861 there were 12,109 horses, 26,548 cattle, 3,195 sheep, and 19,329 swine. There were 144 male, and 160 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $25, and the latter at $13 per month. The total receipts for all school purposes were $34,770. Total expenditure, $34,233. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $3,187,960. Estimated true value, $6,907,246.

Stillman Creek, flowing through the north-western portion of this county into Rock River, passes through a valley of the same name, in the vicinity of which a battalion of militia, consisting of about 275 men, under command of Major Isaiah Stillman, of Fulton county, were attacked, defeated, and eleven of their number killed—on the 14th of May, 1832, by a portion of the Indian army under the celebrated Black Hawk. (See Oregon City.)

Peoria County

Is situated in the north-western centre of the State, on the west side of the Illinois River, about two hundred miles by water, and one hundred and fifty by land, above the junction of the Mississippi, and contains considerable tracts of excellent land, the area being 648 square miles. The county is twenty-four miles long, east and west, and about twenty-six miles north and south. It is bounded on the north by Stark and Marshall, on the south by Tazewell and Fulton, on the east by Woodford and Tazewell, and on the west by Fulton and Knox counties, and divided into twenty organized townships, namely:—Acron, Brunfield, Chillicothe, Elmwood, Hillock, Holles, Jubilee, Kickapoo, Limestone, Logan, Medina, Millbrook, Peoria, Princeville, Radnor, Rome Farms, Rosefield, Timber and Trivoli, with a population in 1860 of 36,601 persons.

The surface of the land is moderately rolling. On the Kickapoo it degenerates into bluffs and ravines. In the interior and north-western portion there is a scarcity of timber. Between Peoria and LaSalle Prairie, is heavy timber from two to five miles in width, and in places beyond the bluffs. In the bottom land adjoining the lake are spots that overflow, but in general it is fit for cultivation. The bottom timber consists of oaks of various species, white and black walnut, ash, hickory, and also buckeye, coffee-nut and grape vines. This county is watered by the Kickapoo, the heads of Spoon River, Copperas Creek, and the Senatchwine. On the Kickapoo, and on the shores of Peoria Lake, for several miles, the timber is good, but prairie predominates.

The number of persons in 1862 between the ages of five and twenty-one years were 11,255, of whom 7,818 attended the public schools, under the charge of 104 male teachers, and 165 female, at an average salary to the former of $29, and to the latter $16 per month. School in session, 7.1 months. Total receipts for all school purposes, $49,929, and expended, $46,375. The railroads passing through the interior of the county are the Peoria & Oquawka and the Peoria Branch of the Rock Island Railroad, which runs along the bank of the Illinois River. There are other western lines laid out, but not yet completed. The products of this county in 1861 were 724,030 bushels of wheat, 5,419,200 bushels of corn, and 17,380 acres of rye, oats, and other field products. There were also owned 9,965 horses, 19,431 cattle, 2,678 sheep, and 30,104 swine. The assessed value of real and personal estate was, in 1863, $8,277,191; the estimated true value being $17,933,914. (See Peoria.)

Perry County

Was organized from Randolph and Jackson counties, situated in the south-western interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Washington, east by Jefferson and Franklin, west by Randolph, and south by Jackson counties. It is twenty-four miles long, east and west, and 18 miles long north and south, containing six townships, viz: Beaucoup, Duquoin, Lost Prairie, Pinckneyville, South Western, and Tamaroa, with a population in 1860 of 9,552. The Big Beaucoup and its tributaries run through the middle of this county, from north to south, and the Little Muddy touches its eastern borders. About one third of Perry county is prairie, tolerably level, good soil, and susceptible of immediate cultivation. Its productions are corn, beef cattle, pork, tobacco, and some cotton. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the eastern part of the county.

In 1861 there were produced 241,572 bushels of wheat, 1,186,900 bushels of corn, also 5,568 acres of rye, hay, oats, cotton, etc. There were also 4,485 horses, 10,368 cattle 6,919 sheep, and 13,837 swine. According to the report of the State Superintendent for 1862, there were in this county 3,132 children attending the public schools. There were 53 male and 23 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $24, and the latter at $19 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes were $9,199. Expenditures, $9,173. The number of months schools were in session during the year was 6. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,471,441. Estimated true value, $3,188,122. (See Pinckneyville.)

Piatt County

Is situated in the eastern central part of the State, bounded north by DeWitt and McLean, east by Champaign and a corner of Douglas, south by Moultrie, and west by Macon and DeWitt counties. It contains eight organized townships, viz.:—Bement, Blue Ridge, Cerro Gordo, Goose Creek, Monticello, Sangamon, Unity and Willow Branch, with a population in 1860 of 6,127.

The surface consists mostly of level prairie, with a rich soil. There are, however, some strips of timber along the streams. The North Fork of the Sangamon River flows through the interior, from the north-east to the south-west. Coal mines abound.

In 1861, there were 3,404 horses, 7,873 cattle, 3,548 sheep, and 16,687 swine owned in this county. Products: 139,842 bushels wheat, 2,724,650 bushels corn, and 5,613 acres of hay, oats, potatoes, &c.

The report of the State Superintendent for 1862 gives 2,451 persons in the county between five and twenty-one years of age, and 2,126 attending the district schools, which were in session 5.3 months during the year. There were fifty-three male, and twenty-three female teachers employed, the former at an average of $24, and the latter $19 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $9,199; total expended, $9,173. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $2,236,549; estimated true value, $4,573,098. (See Monticello.)

Pike County,

Situated in the western part of the State, is the oldest county on the Military Tract, and was erected from Madison and other counties, in 1821. It then embraced the whole country north and west of the Illinois River, but by the formation of new counties is now reduced to ordinary size, containing about 800 square miles, and divided into twenty-one organized townships, namely:—Atlas, Barry, Chambersburgh, Derry, Detroit, Fairmount, Flint, Griggsville, Hadley, Hardin, Kinderhook, Martinsburgh, Montezuma, Newburgh, New Salem, Pearl, Perry, Pittsfield, Pleasant Hill, Pleasant Vale and Spring Creek. The county is from sixteen to thirty-seven miles from east to west, and twenty-four to thirty miles from north to south. It is bounded on the north by Adams and Brown counties, on the south by Calhoun and the Mississippi River, on the east by Morgan, Scott and Green counties, and on the west by the Mississippi.

The population of Pike county in 1860 was 27,249. In 1862, the number of those between the ages of five and twenty-one years was 10,256; attended school, 10,592, under the care of 130 male teachers, at an average salary of $27 per month, and 118 female teachers, at an average salary of $15 per month. School in session during the year, 7 months. Received for all school purposes, $36,933, and expended, $31,785.

Besides the Mississsppi and Illinois Rivers, which wash two sides of this county, it has the Snycartee Slough running the whole length of its western border, which affords steamboat navigation to Atlas at a full stage of water. Pike county is watered by the Pigeon, Hadley, Keys, Black, Dutch, Church, Six-mile and Bay Creeks, which enter the Illinois. Good mill seats are furnished by these streams. The land is various. The section of country, or rather island, between the Snycartee Slough and the Mississippi is a sandy soil, but mostly inundated land at the spring floods. There is considerable prairie, and great summer and winter range for stock, with heavy bottom timber along the streams. Along the bluffs, and for two or three miles back, the land is chiefly timbered, but cut up with ravines and quite rolling.

In 1861, there were owned in this county 10,035 horses, 20,656 cattle, 11,278 sheep, and 49,453 swine. The products of the county have never been reported; put the pastoral condition being so large, and the growth of peaches so extensively cultivated, may be a reason why the returns may have been small, and neglected to report upon. The assessed value of real and personal estate for 1862 was $4,300,301; estimated true value is $9,317,318. —(See Pittsfield.)

Pope County

Was organized in 1816, by the Territorial government, and is situated in the south part of the State, bounded on the north by Saline, east by Hardin and the Ohio River, south by the Ohio River and Massac, and on the west by Massac and Johnson counties. The average length of this county, north and south, is twenty-one miles; width, east and west, sixteen miles. It contains the following ten townships, viz.:—Alexander, Golconda, Grand Pierre, Jackson, Jefferson, Monroe, Polk, Union, Washington and Webster. The population in 1860 was 6,742 persons. The Ohio makes a bend so as to wash its southern side, and projects into the interior. Big Bay Creek rises towards its north-western corner, and, after entering Johnson county, turns again into Pope, and runs a south eastern course to the Ohio. In 1861, there were in this county 6,979 horses, 6,600 cattle, 3,548 sheep, and 15,777 swine. Products:

wheat. 84,388 bushels; corn, 891,500 bushels; also, 1,842 acres of hay, oats, rye, cotton etc. According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 2,932 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one The number of children attending the public schools (which were in session an average of 5.8 months during the year) was 2,849. There were forty-nine male, and eight female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $28, and the latter $23 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes were $4,734; expenditure, $4,604. (See Golconda.)

Pulaski County.

The location of this county is in the extreme southern part of the State, with Union, Johnson and Pope counties on the north, Pope on the east, Alexander on the west, while the Ohio flows in a circuitous course along its southern borders, giving the county the form of a new moon, with its points reaching southward. Its extreme length is about forty-two miles; average width about nine miles. It is divided into twelve townships, viz.:—Burkville, Cache, Georges Creek, Grand Chain, Hillerman, Jackson, Metropolis, Ohio, Pulaski, Ullin, Washington and Wetaug. The population in 1860 was 3,943. In 1862, there were 1,328 persons between five and twenty-one years of age, and the number of scholars 1,174. The number of male teachers was 25, at an average salary of $31 per month, and 9 female teachers, at $25 per month. Schools in session, 6.2 months. The total amount expended for school purposes during the year was $6,736.

The county is watered by sundry small streams flowing into the Ohio River, namely: Massac and Seven-mile Creeks, with others. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the western portion of the county. The general aspect of the county is somewhat barren, but there is considerable fertile soil and growth of timber. In 1861, there were 692 horses, 1,900 cattle, 784 sheep and 6,323 swine. The capital of the county is Metropolis, situated on the north bank of the Ohio River.

Putnam County

Was formed from Pike county, in 1825, but not organized for judicial purposes till 1831. It is of much smaller dimensions now than at that time.. It is situated on both sides of the Illinois River, about three-fourths being on the east side, and is bounded on the north by Bureau, on the south by Marshall, on the east by LaSalle, and on the west by Bureau. It is a small county, about fourteen miles long, from north to south, and an average width of about nine miles, east and west, with an addition of one township on the west side of the river. There are four organized townships, viz.:—Granville, Hennepin, Magnolia and Senatchwine, with a population in 1860 of 5,587 persons. The number of those between five and twenty-one years is 1,884; attended school, 1,722. Number of male teachers, 31, with an average salary of $27, and 44 female teachers, with an average salary of $17. Amount collected from all sources for school purposes, $9,037, and expended, $7,478. Schools in session during the year an average of seven months.

The Illinois River enters this county and flows round the northern and through part of its western boundary, making a large bend. The soil is excellent, and some varieties of timber, oak of several species, black and white walnut, sugar maple, ash, elm, and others. Limestone, sandstone, freestone and bituminous coal are abundant. The products of the county were, in 1861, of wheat, 176,426 bushels; corn, 967,500 bushels, and 5,973 acres of hay, oats, sorghum, &c. There were also 3,387 horses, 5,713 cattle, 1,446 sheep, and 6,040 swine. The Bureau Valley Railroad runs through its western township, and the Illinois Central passes within about five miles of its eastern border. In 1863, the assessed value of the real and personal estate was $1,022,587; the estimated true value, $2,215,605.

Randolph County.

Randolph county was formed before the organization of the territory of Illinois, and is the oldest county, except St. Clair, in the State, and is bounded on the north by Monroe, St. Clair, and Washington counties; east by Perry; south by the Mississippi River, and a corner of Jackson county, and west by the Mississippi. Its medium length and breadth is about twenty-four miles, though from curvitures of the Mississippi, it contains but about 540 square miles. This county has 12 townships, viz : Burnett, Central, Chester, Evansville, Georgetown, Kaskaskia, Liberty, Mary's River, Mill Creek, Prairie du Rocher, Sparta and Union, containing a population in 1860 of 17,205 persons. It is watered by the Kaskaskia River, and St. Mary, Horse, and some smaller creeks. The soil is of various kinds, much of it excellent, and has a diversity of surface, from the low alluvial and the undulating prairie, to the rugged bluffs and abrupt precipices.

In 1861 there were 7,426 horses, 14,490 cattle, 5,637 sheep, and 18,707 swine. Products, wheat, 495,463 bushels; corn, 1,416,000 bushels; also, 7,702 acres of hay, rye, oats, cotton, etc.. There were in 1862, 5,178 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, during the year there were 4,399 children attending the public schools, which were in session 6.7 months, there were 78 male teachers at an average salary of $27; and 42 female teachers, at $17 per month. Total expenditure for all school purposes, $12,552.

Fort Chartres was a large stone fort, built by the French, while in possession of Illinois It is situated half a mile from the Mississippi, and three miles from Prairie du Rocher, in the north-western part of Randolph county. It was orininally built by the French in 1720, to defend themselves against the Spaniards, who were then taking possession of the country on the Mississippi. It was rebuilt in 1756. The circumstances, character, form and history of this fort are interesting, but we have not space sufficient here to give them. Once it was a most formidable piece of masonry, the materials of which were brought three or four miles from the bluffs. It was originally an irregular quadrangle, the exterior sides of which were 490 feet in circumference. Within the walls were the commandant's and commissary's houses, a magazine for stores, barracks, powder magazine, bake-house, guard house, and prison. The prodigious military work is now a heap of ruins Many of the hewn stones have been removed by the people to Kaskaskia. A slough from the Mississippi approached and undermined the wall on one side in 1772. (See Chester.)

Richland County.

This county is situated in the east-north-east portion of the State, south of Jasper county, west of Lawrence, north of Edwards and Wayne, and east of Clay, having an area of eighteen miles square, and contains the following organized townships, viz: Bonpas, Clermont, Decker, Denver, German, Madison, Noble, Olney, and Preston. The population in 1860 was was 9,711 persons. The larger portion of this county is rich, undulating prairie, which is drained by Fox River, Bonpas Creek, and several other small streams—the Little Wabash, flowing along its western limits. In 1861, there were 3,141 horses, 7,720 cattle, 6,865 sheep, and 12,981 swine. The products were 178,976 bushels of wheat, 1,072,150 bushels of corn, with 4,408 acres of hay, oats. rye, etc.

According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 4,139 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one yeaas, and the number of children attending the public schools was 3,992, schools being in session at an average of 6.3 months. There were 77 male and 49 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $21, and the latter $14 per month. The total amount expended for all school purposes during the year was $10,654.

The assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863, was $1,588,577. Its estimated true value, being $3,177,154. (See Olney.)

Rock Island County.

The conformation of this county is somewhat irregularly shaped, formed from portions of Mercer and Jo Daviess counties in 1831, but subsequently organized by the Judge of the Fifth Judicial Circuit. The boundries of this county, as defined by law, begin "at the middle of the main channel of the Mississippi, where the north line of township 15 north, intersects the same; thence east, to the fourth principal meredian; thence north with said meredian, to the middle of the main channel of Rock River; thence up said channel to the confluece of the Marais d'Ogee slough or creek; thence along said slough to the middle of the Mississippi River, and down that channel to the place of beginning." It contains about four hundred square miles. The boundary of this county on the north and west is by a sweep of the Mississippi River; on the south by Mercer, and on the east by Whiteside and Henry.

The county is divided into eleven organized townships, namely: Bowling, Buffalo, Camden, Coal Valley, Cordova, Drury, Edgington, Fremont, Hampton, Moline, and Zume. The population in 1860 was 21,005. This county is watered by Rock River and some minor streams. Rock Island, on the Mississippi, is included in this county. The soil along the Mississippi for twenty-five miles is alluvion, sandy and rich, includiug the site of the old Sauk village. There is much good land in the interior of the county, between the rivers. The railroads are the Coal Valley Road, and the Rock Island Railroad. At this point we have the Rock Island Railroad Bridge, uniting Illinois and Iowa, and about which considerable litigation has already taken place, from a desire on the part of St. Louis to get it removed; hitherto without success. There is no doubt this bridge is of great benefit to Illinois, and as an improvement in transportation east and west; is of too much importance to the State to allow of its removal. In 1861 there were in this county 5,662 horses, 16,776 cattle, 1,412 sheep, and 20,959 swine. The products were—of wheat, 480,930 bushels, corn, 1,730,950 bushels, and 8,891 acres of hay, oats, sorghum, &c.

In 1862 there were 7,776 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years, and 5,868 attended school. Schools were in session an average of 6.7 months. The number of teachers employed were—male, 78, at an average of $31 per month, and 96 female, at an average of $18 per month. Total received for school purposes, $33,171; expended, $31,698. The assessed value of real and personal estate in 1863 was $3,027,622. Estimated true value, $6,559,847.

St. Clair County.

This is the oldest county in the State, and was named after General Arthur St. Clair. It was formed by the Legislature of the Northwestern Territory in 1794 or '95, and then included all the settlements on the eastern side of the Mississippi. It now lies on that river, opposite St. Louis, and is bounded north by Madison county, east by Clinton and Washington, and south by Randolph and Monroe counties, containing an area of 1,030 square miles. The organized townships of this county are Belleville, Cahokia, Caseyville, Centerville, Fayetteville, French Village, Illinois Town, Lebanon, Macoutah, Richland, Ridge Prairie, Shiloh and Summerfield. The population in 1860 was 37.694.

The soil of this county varies, much of it is good, and proportionably divided into timber, prairie and barrens. The streams are Cahokia, Prairie du Pont, Ogle's Creek, Silver Creek, Richland Creek, Prairie de Long and the Kaskaskia River. Its timber comprises the usual varieties found on the western side of the State. Extensive coal banks exist in this county, along the bluffs, from which St. Louis is partially supplied with fuel. The seat of justice is at Belleville. The people are a mixture of Americans, French and Germans. In 1861, there were 6,138 horses, 8,709 cattle, 2,476 sheep, and 17,543 swine. The products in 1860 were, of wheat, 946,050 bushels; corn, 2,155,350 bushels, and 19,354 acres of oats, hay and other field products.

The railroads passing through this county are the Alton & St. Louis and the Terre Haute & St. Louis Roads. The Chicago & Alton are also building a continuation of their line from Alton to St. Louis. The Ohio & Mississippi passes through the northern portion of the county. There is also a short line from Illinois Town to Belleville. In 1862, there were 11,865 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years; scholars, 7,251. Schools in session eight months. The number of male teachers were 180, at an average salary of $34, and female teachers 40, at an average of $14 per month. Total receipts for school purposes, $45,179, and expended, $43,868. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $7,730,830, and the estimated real value $16,750,131.

"Cahokias, one of the tribes of the great nation of Illini, (after which the village of Cahokia was named, being ten miles north of west from Belleville), had made this a resting place for a long time previous to the discovery of the Mississippi. This name is sometimes spelled Caoquias. Charlevoix, who visited that place in 1721, expresses his astonishment that his countrymen had pitched upon so inconvenient a station, being 'half a league' from the river. He says, however, the people told him that the Mississippi once washed the foot of the village, but that in three years it had receded half a league, and that the people were talking of removing to a more eligible situation. In 1776, it contained forty families; and at the commencement of the revolutionary war they had increased to fifty. It was once the seat of a considerable fur trade." (See Belleville.)

Saline County

Is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, bounded on the north by Hamilton, east by Gallatin, south by Pope, and west by Williamson counties. Its entire length north and south is twenty-one miles, width east and west eighteen miles, and contains the ten following townships, viz: Brushy, Cottage Grove, Douglas, El Dorado, Harrisburg, Independence, Plain View, Raleigh, Saline and Somerset, with a population in 1860 of 9,331 persons. This county is well timbered, and the land fertile, and is watered by the Saline River and other streams, which flow through different parts of the country. In 1860 there were 2,195 horses, 6,627 cattle, 4,427 sheep, and 13,153 swine. The products were 95,965 bushels of wheat, 1,047,600 bushels of corn, with 3,650 acres of oats, hay, rye, cotton, tobacco, etc. There are also large quantities of salt produced in this county. In 1862 there were 4,491 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,825 attended the public schools, which were in session during the year 6 months. The total number of teachers employed was 48 male, at an average salary of $24, and 18 female teachers at $17 per month. The total receipts for all school purposes was $7,704. Total expended, $6,825.

Sangamon County.

The first settlement on the waters of the Sangamon was made in 1819. The county was organized in 1821, at that time embracing a tract of country one hundred and twenty-five miles long by seventy-five miles wide.

The public lands were first offered for sale in November, 1823, by which time farms of considerable size had been brought under cultivation.

It is situated in the south-west central part of the State, with Menard and Logan counties adjoining on the north, Logan, Macon and Christian on the east, Christian, Montgomery and Macoupin on the south, and Morgan, with a corner of Cass, on the west.

The county is divided into twenty-two organized townships, viz.:—Auburn, Ball, Buffalo Heart, Campbell, Cartwright, Clear Creek, Cooper, Cotton Hill, Curran, Falkington, Fancy Creek, Gardner, Illiopolis, Island Grove, Loami, Mechanicsburg, Pawnee, Rochester, Sackett, Springfield, Williams and Woodside, with a population in 1860 of 32,274.

The size of the prairies in Sangamon county is seized upon as an objection by persons unaccustomed to a prairie country; but were the timber a little more equally distributed, with prairie surface, its supply would be abundant for each locality. The prairies vary in width from one to eight or ten miles, and somewhat indefinite in length, being connected at the heads of the streams.

Much of the soil in this county is of the richest quality, being a calcareous loam, from one to three feet deep, intermixed with fine sand. The point of land that lies between the Sangamon and the Illinois Rivers, which is chiefly prairie, is divided between inundated land, dry prairie and sand ridges. A stranger to observations upon the surface of Illinois, upon first sight, would pronounce most parts of Sangamon county a level, or plane. It is not so. With the exception of creek bottoms and the interior of large prairies, it has an undulating surface, quite sufficient to render it one of the finest agricultural districts in the United States.

These remarks are not meant exclusively for Sangamon. They apply with equal propriety to many other counties on both sides of the Illinois River.

Sangamon county is watered by the Sangamon River and its numerous branches, Prairie, Spring, Lick, Sugar, Horse and Brush Creeks: on the south side are Cantrill's, Fancy, Wolf and Clear Creeks, which enter from the opposite side. These streams not only furnish this county with an abundance of excellent water, and a number of good mill sites, but are lined with extensive tracts of firstrate timbered land. The Chicago & Alton and the Great Western Railways pass through the interior, intersecting at Springfield, which is the capital of the State, situate in the northern central of the county.

In 1861, there were, per assessor's returns, 14,283 horses, 26,343 neat cattle, 42,194 sheep, and 71,804 swine. Products: Wheat, 465,545 bushels; corn, 3,499,505 bushels, and 28,965 acres of hay, oats, potatoes, sorghum, &c. According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 10,074 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 9,333 attending the public schools, which were in session 8.1 months during the year. One hundred and fifty three male, and ninety two female teachers were employed, the former at an average salary of $31, and the latter $20 per month. The total receipts for all school purposes were $58,957, and total expenses $54,535. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $10,904,571; estimated true value, $23,626,570. (See Springfield.)

Schuyler County.

This county was formed from Pike, in 1825, and is bounded on the north by McDonough, east by a corner of Fulton county and the Illinois River, south by Illinois River and Brown, and west by portions of Adams and Hancock counties. Its average length, north and south, is about twenty four miles; width, east and west, eighteen miles, and contains the following thirteen townships, viz.:—Bainbridge, Brooklyn, Browning, Buena Vista, Camden, Frederick, Hickory, Huntsville, Littleton, Oakland, Rushville, Woodstock and Township 3, north 4, west of the 4th principal meridian, with a population in 1860 of 14,684 persons. The middle and northern portions of this county are divided into timber and prairie of an exellent quality. Along Crooked Creek is an extensive body of fine timber. Sugar Creek also furnishes another body of timber, eight or ten miles wide. The land is well watered by Crooked Creek (which flows through the interior of the county), Crane Creek, and other small streams. The Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad passes near its western borders, and the Quincy & Toledo Railway passes within a few miles of the south-western border. The Illinois River, which is navigable for steamboats, flows along its south eastern limits. There were owned in 1861, 5,589 horses, 4,616 cattle, 8,044 sheep, and 30,661 swine. Products:—Wheat, 99,439 bushels; corn, 1,695,450 bushels; also, 11,275 acres of oats, hay, potatoes, etc. Apples, peaches and other fruit are grown in great abundance in this county. From the State Superintendent's report for the year ending October 1, 1862, there were 6,038 persons between five and twenty-one, and 5,126 children attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 7.5 months during the year. Seventy-eight male and seventy-one female teachers, were employed, the former at an average salary of $28, and the latter $14 per month. The total amount received for all school purposes was $17,318, the total expenditure being $16,322. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1861 was $2,273,435; estimated true value, $4,922,442. (See Rushville.)

Scott County.

This is rather a small county, having an area of about 260 square miles. It is, however, rich in its quality of land, notwithstanding the French settlers, by a singular misnomer, in exploring the Illinois River, called it "Mauvaiseterre"—poor land. It is watered by the Plum, Sandy, and Mauvaiseterre Creeks. Bounded on the west by the Illinois River, on the north and east by Morgan county, and on the south by Greene. The surface is level, with occasional forests of timber. Water power for milling purposes supplied by Sandy Creek. The county is divided into nine townships, namely: Bloomfield, Exter, Glasgow, Manchester, Naples, Oxville, Sandy, Union, and Winchester. The population of the county in 1860 was 9,069. The Great Western Railroad from Toledo to Quincy, passes through its most northern township, and the Tonica and Petersburg through the south-east township.

In 1861 the products of this county were—of wheat, 74,664 bushels; corn, 1,923,295 bushels; also 2,798 acres of rye, oats, potatoes, &c. There were 3,630 horses, 6,356 cattle, 3,750 sheep, and 18,155 swine. The report of the State Superintendent shows there were 3,142 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years. Scholars, 2,655, in the charge of 36 male teachers, at an average salary of $32, and 12 female teachers, at an average salary of $21 per month. Schools were in session 6.3 months. Total received for school purposes, $11,993; expended, $8,050. In 1863 the assessed value of real and personal estate was $1,630,295, and the estimated true value, $3,532,305.

Shelby County.

This county was organized, in 1827, from Fayette, and is situated in the south-east part of the State, bounded on the north by Macon and Moultrie, east by Coles and Cumberland, south by Effingham and Fayette, and west by Christian and Montgomery counties. Shelby county is about thirty miles square, but in computing the area a deduction should be made for an indentation of Moultrie, on the north-east corner, occupying a tract of about four and a half townships. It is divided into eighteen organized townships, viz.:—Ash Grove, Big Spring, Cold Spring, Dry Point, Flat Branch, Holland, Moweka, Oconee, Okaw, Pickaway, Prairie, Rural, Rose, Ridge Grove, Richland, Shelby, Tower Hill and Windsor, containing a population in 1860 of 14,613 persons. Shelby contains a large amount of excellent land, both timber and prairie, and is one of the best inland agricultural counties in the State. The Great Western Railway passes east and west through the interior of the county. The Illinois Central Railroad also passes through a portion of its western borders, and the Chicago Branch of the same road intersects the south-eastern part. It is watered by the Kaskaskia, Okaw, Little Wabash Rivers, and their tributaries; also, Richland Creek, Mitchell's Creek, Brush Creek, and several other small streams. In 1861, there were owned 7,582 horses, 16,962 cattle, 28,525 sheep, and 48,025 swine. Products were, wheat, 225,760 bushels; corn, 3,170,475 bushels; also, 14,169 acres of oats, hay, potatoes, &c. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 5,271 scholars attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.1 months during the year, employing 106 male teachers, at an average salary of $22, and 43 female teachers, at $14.80 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $14,314; total expenditure, $12,509. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1861 was $2,984,231; estimated true value, $6,465.833. (See Shelbyville.)

Stark County

Is situated in the north-east interior of the State, and is bounded on the north by Henry and Bureau, east by Bureau and Marshall, south by Peoria, and west by Knox and Henry counties, containing eight townships, each six miles square, viz: Elmira, Essex, Goshen, Jersey, Osceola, Penn, Toulon, and Valley. The population in 1860 was 9,004 persons. The county is divided between prairie and timber land, and has a rich and fertile soil, which is drained by Spoon River and its tributaries. The Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad passes near the north-eastern limits of the county.

In 1861 there were owned 5,243 horses, 9,284 cattle, 1,762 sheep, and 13,112 swine. Products were 623,050 bushels of wheat, 1,912,900 bushels of corn, also 7,992 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, etc. According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 2,806 children attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.9 months during the year. Number of teachers employed were 56 male, at an average salary of $27, and 79 female teachers, at an an average of $15 per month. Total receipts of the year for all school purposes, was $14,314. Total expenditure, $12,509. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,335,890. Estimated true value, $2,894.428. (See Toulon.)

Stephenson County

Was formed from Jo Daviess and Winnebago counties in February, 1837, and is bounded on the north by Wisconsin State, south by Carroll and Ogle counties, on the east by Winnebago, and on the west by Jo Daviess county. It is 27 miles long, and 21 miles wide, containing about 560 square miles; and is watered by the Pecatonica and its tributaries on the north, and through the interior, also the heads of the Plum River and smaller streams on the south-western part. The prairies are generally undulating and the soil rich, with tracks of hilly barrens and oak openings. The timber is mostly in groves. This is one of the most flourishing counties of the State, its geographical position rendering it more than usually productive. The population in 1860 was 25,112 persons. The county is divided into fifteen organized townships, viz: Buckeye, Erin, Florence, Harlem, Kent, Lancaster, Loran, Oneco, Ridott, Rock Grove, Rock Run, Silver Creek, West Adams, West Point, and Winslow. These are great farming districts, raising an enormous quantity of all kinds of grain. Good spring water is abundant, and the surface undulating sufficiently to make it picturesque and healthy. The facilities of railroads are extensive. The Illinois Central Main Line, and the Galena and Chicago Union pass through this county. The Racine and Mississippi, and Northern Illinois also traverse this county, Freeport being the grand centre of all these roads.

The products of the county in 1861 were—of wheat, 1,168,138 bushels; corn, 2,048,100 bushels; and 21,828 acres of rye, oats, sorghum, and other field products. There were also 9,107 horses, 22,142 head of cattle, 6,055 sheep, and 24,124 swine. In 1862 the number of persons between the ages of five and twenty-one were 8,484. Scholars, 8,298; in charge of 126 male teachers, at an average of $28, and 133 female teachers, at an average of $16 per month. Schools in session 7.4 months. Total receipts for school purposes, $36,173, and expended $32,572. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $3,418,866. The estimated true value being $7,407,343. (See Freeport.)

Tazewell County.

The county of Tazewell was formed from Peoria, in 1827. It is situated in the western central part of the State, bounded by Peoria and Woodford on the north, by Logan and Mason on the south, by Woodford and McLean on the east, and by Mason and the Illinois River on the west. This county is from eighteen to thirty miles long, north and south, and twenty-four miles wide from east to west. It is divided into nineteen organized townships, viz.:—Boynton, Cincinnati, Deer Creek, Delavan, Dillon, Elm Grove, Fond-du-lac, Groveland, Hittle, Hope Dale, Little Mackinaw, Melone, Mackinaw, Morton, Pekin, Sand Prairie, Spring Lake, Fremont and Washington, the population of which, in 1860, was 21,470 persons.

The Illinois River waters this county, which extends the whole length of its north-western side, the Mackinaw and its branches, Ten-mile Farm and Blue Creeks, all of which enter the Illinois, with some of the head branches of the Sangamon. On the bluffs of the Mackinaw and the other streams the land is broken and the timber chiefly oak; in other portions of the county it has an undulating appearance, and has much good land. Below Pekin and towards Havana are swamps, ponds and sand ridges. Sugar Creek and its branches water the south-eastern portion of the county. This is a rich agricultural county. Pleasant Grove and the adjacent country is delightful. The Logansport, Peoria & Burlington Railway passes through the northern portion, and the Illinois River Railway through the western portion of the county. Another railroad is planned to pass through the centre of the county, from Peoria to Bloomington.

In 1861, there were in this county 10,319 horses, 17,187 cattle, 5,619 sheep, and 31,557 swine. The products were, of wheat, 523,719 bushels; corn, 4.881,200 bushels; also, 21,339 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, and other field products. In 1862, there were 8,008 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years; attended school, 5,867, under the charge of 99 male teachers and 107 female, at an average salary of $28 per month for the male, and $20 for the female teachers. Schools in session, 7.3 months. Total amount expended for all school purposes, $27,288. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $6,001,705, and the estimated true value is $13,003,694. (See Pekin.)

Union County

Was formed in 1818 from Johnson county, and is situated in the southern part of the State, bounded on the north by Jackson and a corner of Williamson, east by Johnson, south by Alexander and Pulaski, east by the Mississippi River, which flows along its western borders, with an average length east and west, of about twenty-two miles; width, north and south, eighteen miles.

Union county contains the nine following townships, viz: Casper, Dongola, Jones, Misenheimer, Preston, Rich, Ridge, Stokes, and Union, with a population in 1860 of about 11,181 persons.

This county is watered by Clear Creek, some of the south branches of Big Muddy, and the heads of Cash River. A large bend of the Big Muddy projects a few miles into the county, towards its north-western portion, and some sloughs and ponds are found on the Mississippi bottom. A great portion of this county is high rolling timber land. Here are found oaks of various kinds, hickory, white and black walnut, poplar, some beech, and other species of timber common to the country. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through its interior.

In 1861 there were owned 3,022 horses, 7,329 cattle, 5,507 sheep, and 21,421 swine. Products were, wheat, 262,875 bushels; corn, 931,850 bushels; also 3,233 acres of oats, hay, cotton, tobacco, etc. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 4,472 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 3,546 children attended the public schools, which were in session an average of 6 months during the year. There were 57 male and 10 female teachers employed, at an average monthly salary of $30 male, and $21 female. The total receipts for all school purposes was $12,092. Total expended, $11,556.

In 1863 the assessed value of all real and personal estate was $1,474,478. The estimated true value being $3.194,702. (See Jonesboro.)

Vermilion County.

This county was organized from Edgar in 1826, and is situated in the eastern part of the State, bounded on the north by Iroquois, east by Indiana, south by Edgar, and west by Champaign and a corner of Ford counties.

Length north and south, forty-two miles; width, east and west, twenty-one miles, it also contains eleven organized townships, viz: Blount, Carroll, Catlin, Danville, Elwood, Georgetown, Middle Prairie, Newell, Pilot, Rose, and Vance. The population in 1860 consisted of 19,800 persons.

The county is well watered by the Big and Little Vermillion Rivers and tributaries, and contains a large amount of excellent land. In the eastern part of the county the timber predominates, amongst which is the poplar and beech. Along the streams are oaks of various species, hickory, walnut, linden, ash, elm, and others common to Illinois. The soil of the prairie is a calcareous loam, from one to three feet deep, the surface being generally dry and undulating. Coal of a very superior quality, is also found in this county, the mines are very extensive in the vicinity of Danville. The Great Western Railway passes through the southern interior, east and west. There were owned in 1861, 12,271, horses, 22,548 cattle, 22,268 sheep, and 46,278 swine. The products were—of wheat, 220,796 bushels; corn, 4,457,850 bushels; and 10,512 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, potatoes, &c., being in fact one of our most productive counties.

On referring to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, we find that 6,727 children, attended the public schools, which were in session an average of 6 months during the year. There were one hundred and twenty four male, and one hundred and sixteen female teachers employed, at an average salary of $26 per month to the former, and $17 to the latter. Total receipts for the year for all school purposes was $27,774. The total expenditure being $21,701. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $5,471,964. Estimated true value, $12,855,922. (See Danville.)

Wabash County

Was organized in 1824, from Edwards county, and is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, bounded on the north by Lawrence county, east and south by Wabash River, and west by Edwards county. It has an average length, north and south, of about fifteen miles; width, east and west, twelve miles, and contains seven townships, viz.:—Bonpas, Friendsville, Lancaster, Mt. Carmel, Pleasant Hill, Rochester and Wabash. The population in 1860 was 7,313. Wabash county is watered by the Wabash and Bonpas Rivers, the latter flowing along its western borders. It contains considerable good land, both timber and prairie.

In 1861, there were owned 2,445 horses, 4,640 cattle, 4,729 sheep, and 8,748 swine. Its products were, of wheat, 136,255 bushels; corn, 844,250 bushels; also, 2,832 acres of oats, hay, potatoes, &c. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 2,760 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 2,459 children attended the public schools, which were in session 5.9 months during the year. The number of teachers employed was twenty-nine male, at an average salary of $24, and forty-four female teachers, at $12 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $6,824; total expended, $6,530. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,008,980; estimated true value, $2,186,123. (See Mt. Carmel.)

Warren County.

This county was formed from Pike, in 1825, but not organized until 1830. It is situated in the west-north-western part of the State, south of Mercer county, west of Knox, north of McDonough, and east of Henderson. It contains fifteen organized townships, viz.:—Berwick, Cold Brook, Ellison, Floyd, Greenbush, Hale, Kelly, Lenox, Monmouth, Point Pleasant, Roseville, Spring Grove, Sumner, Swan and Tompkins, with a population in 1860 of 18,836

The larger portion of this county is prairie, although along the streams some fine strips of timber are to be found. This county is excelled by no other in the State, neither in beautiful prairie scenery, nor in the rich productiveness of its soil. It is watered by Henderson River, Ellison, Cedar, Swan and some other smaller creeks. Coal abounds in different parts of the county; also, limestone. The Burlington branch of C., B. & Q. R. R. passes through the central portion, and the Quincy branch along its eastern limits. There are seven flour mills; also, nineteen coal mines in the county.

According to the assessors returns for 1863, there were owned in the county 10,369 horses, 23,068 cattle, 7,813 sheep, and 50,731 swine. There were under cultivation 34,046 acres of wheat, 80,727 acres of corn, and 13,234 acres of other field products, producing about 578,000 bushels of wheat, and 4,036,000 bushels of corn.

In 1862, from the State Superintendent's report, we learn that there were 8,534 children attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.5 months during the year, under the care of one hundred male, and one hundred and twenty-seven female teachers, the former at $25, the latter at $15 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $29.663; total expended, $22.908. Assessed value of personal and real estate in 1863 was $3,820,483; estimated true value, $8,277,379. (See Monmouth.)

Washington County.

Washington county was formed from St. Clair, in January, 1818, and is situated in the south-western part of the State, bounded on the north by Clinton, east by Jefferson, south by Perry, and a corner of Randolph, and west by St. Clair counties. It is thirty miles long and from fifteen to twenty miles wide, and contains the eleven following townships, viz: Ashley, Bridgeport, Covington, Dubois, Elkton, Grand Point, Lively Grove, Nashville, Pilot Knob, Richland, and Venedy. The population was in 1860—13,731 persons.

This county is well watered. The Kaskaskia River runs along the north-western side for eighteen miles, Elkhorn Creek waters its western, Beaucoup and Little Muddy its south-eastern, and Crooked Creek, and some smaller streams its northern portions. Considerable prairie, especially the southern points of the Grand Prairie is found in this county. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the eastern portion of the county.

In 1861 there were 6,088 horses, 16,003 cattle, 5,801 sheep, and 20,841 swine. The products were—of wheat, 347,769 bushels; corn, 2,914,600 bushels; and 11,163 acres of oats, hay, sorghum, potatoes, etc. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862 there were 3,799 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one. 2,328 children attended the public schools, which were in session 6.4 months during the year. There were forty-three male teachers, and nineteen female employed, the former at an average salary of $26, and the latter $16 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $7,927. Total expenditures, $7,820. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $3,159,695. Estimated true value, $6,846,005. (See Nashville.)

Wayne County.

Wayne county was formed from Edwards, in 1819, and is situated in the south-eastern part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Clay, east by Edwards, south by Hamilton, and a corner of White, and west by Jefferson and Marion. It is thirty miles long, east and west, and twenty-four miles wide, and contains 720 square miles. The Little Wabash passes through its eastern part, and Elm River and Skillet Fork water the northern portions of the county. It is proportionably interspersed with prairie and wood land, generally of a second quality.

Wayne county contains the following sixteen townships, viz: Arrington, Barn Hill, Bedford, Big Mound, Brush Creek, Elm, Four Mill, Hickory Hill, Indian Prairie, Jasper, Lamarce, Middleton, Mount Erie, New Massillion, Wabash, and Zif. With a population in 1860 of 12,223 persons. In 1861 there were 4,116 horses, 13,357 cattle, 11,619 sheep, and 20,029 swine. The products were—of wheat, 189,930 bushels; corn, 1,293,120 bushels; and 4,986 acres of oats, hay, and other field products.

It appears from the report of the State Superintendent, that there were 5,446 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 4,486 children attended the public schools, which were in session an average of 6 months during the year. There were ninety-one male and forty-one female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $19, and the latter $13 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $13,965. Total expended, $13,019. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,602,906. Estimated true value, $3,472,963. (See Fairfield.)

White County.

White county was organized from Gallatin county, in 1815. It is situated in the south-eastern side of the State. Length, north and south, twenty-four miles; width, east and west, twenty-two miles. It is bounded on the north by Edwards and Wayne counties, east by the Big Wabash River, south by Gallatin, and west by Hamilton counties.

The eastern side of this county is washed by the Big Wabash, along which is a low bottom, subject to inundation. The interior is watered by the Little Wabash and its tributaries. The banks of these streams are heavily timbered, among which are oak of several species, hickory, walnut, elm, ash and poplar. Between the streams are fine prairies, most of which are cultivated; the principal are the Big, Burnt and Seven-mile.

White county contains eight townships, viz.:—"Burr Prairie," Carmi, Fox River, Grayville, Herald's Prairie, Indian Creek, Prairie and Seven-mile. Population in 1860 was 12,403 persons. In 1861, there were 3,993 horses, 9,835 cattle, 9,575 sheep, and 27,763 swine. Products were, wheat, 128,820 bushels; corn, 1,009,100 bushels, and 4,433 acres, of hay, oats, cotton, &c.

According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 4,995 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 4,030 children attended the public schools, which were in session an average of six months during the year, under the care of seventy-seven male, and fourteen female teachers, the former at an average salary of $26, and the latter $17 per month. Total receipts for all school purposes, $10,591; total expenditure, $9,902. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $1,465,471; estimated true value, $3,175,187. (See Carmi.)

Whiteside County

Was organized from Jo Daviess county, in 1836, and is situated in the north-western part of the State, bounded on the north by Carroll, east by Lee, south by Bureau and Henry, and west by Rock Island county and the Mississippi River. It has an average length of about twenty-nine miles, east and west, and twenty-four miles wide from north to south. There are twenty-two organized townships, viz.:—Albany, Clyde, Coloma, Erie, Fenton, Fulton, Garden Plain, Genesee, Hahnaman, Hopkins, Hume, Jordan, Lyndon, Montmorency, Mount Pleasant, Newton, Portland, Prophets' Town, Sterling, Tampico, Union Grove and Ustick, having a population in 1860 of 18,737 persons.

This county is watered by Rock River, which passes diagonally through it; Little Rock; also, Marais d'Ogee Lake, and swamps that divide it from Rock Island county, and several other small streams. It has some tracts of heavy timber along Rock River and Little Rock, besides some groves, copses and brushy swamps. Some of its prairie land is flat, while other portions are beautifully undulating and rich. The Dixon Air Line Railroad, operated by the Galena & Chicago Company, passes through the north central part of the county.

In 1861, there were 7,154 horses, 20,618 head of cattle, 1,480 sheep, and 16,887 swine; while the products were, of wheat, 949,230 bushels; corn, 2,594,700 bushels; besides 16,961 acres of oats, rye, hay, and other field products. In 1862, there were 6,827 scholars attending school; the schools in session an average of seven months during the year. The number of teachers were, male, 76, at an average salary of $29 per month, and 129 female, at an average of $15. The total received for all school purposes was $35,489, and the total expended, $34,326. The assessed value of real and personal estate was $3,049,510; the estimated true value being $6,615,523.

Will County.

This county is situated in the north-east part of the State, with DuPage and Cook counties adjoining on the north, Cook county and Indiana on the east, Kankakee south, and Grundy and Kendall on the west. It is 38 miles long, east and west, and from 12 to 36 miles wide, containing about 900 square miles. Will county is divided into twenty-three organized townships, viz: Carey, Channahon, Crete, DuPage, Florence, Frankfort, Green Garden, Homer, Jackson, Joliet, Lockport, Manhattan, Monee, New Lenox, Peotone, Plainfield, Reed, Troy, Washington, Wesley, Will, Wilmington, and Wilton, with a population in 1860 of 29,321.

This county was organized under an act of the Legislature passed at the session of 1835–6. It embraced all the country south of the present boundaries of Cook and Dupage lying north of the Kankakee River, and so much of the country south of Kankakee as lies north of the north line of township thirty-one (31); it was previously a part of the county of Cook. Mr. William R. Rice, of Hickory Creek, was among the first, if not the first settler in the county, afterwards organized as the county of Will. Two or three years later, emigration commenced coming to the northern part of the State from the east by way of the lakes, meeting a tide of emigration from Kentucky, Ohio, Indiana, Virginia, and Tennessee, most of which came by land. At the close of the Sauk war, which ended in 1833, the country commenced filling up rapidly with settlers; about this time Joel A. Matteson, afterwards Governor of the State, settled on the Au Sable River, near the county line, but afterwards removed to Joliet. The first land sale of Government lands in northern Illinois, was held in Chicago in June, 1835, from which time to the present the country has rapidly filled with emigrants.

Numerous growing towns and villages have sprung up in the county within a few years, among which are Joliet, the county seat, Lockport, which has a fine water power, and Wilmington on the Kankakee River. The last mentioned has one of the finest water-powers in the State, much of which is improved, for milling and manufacturing purposes.

The county of Will has within its limits ninety miles of railroad completed and in operation, with other railroads in process of construction. The Illinois Central, Chicago and Rock Island, Joliet Cut-off, St. Louis, Alton and Chicago, and Joliet and Chicago Railroads, all pass through the county or terminate in it, and are in successful operation. This county is well watered, and has a good supply of timber, with abundance of as good prairie land as exists anywhere. The Kankakee River, a large rapid stream one-fourth of a mile broad, runs through the southern part of the county, connecting with the Des Plaines River on the west side of the county, forming the well-known Illinois River. The Des Plaines River passes nearly through the county from north to south—a large rapid stream with abundance of water power; both of these rivers, as well as the Du Page River, which runs through the western border of the county, flow over rock bottoms, and afford ample water power, with good stone quarries along their banks.

The first court held in the county, was held in Joliet in the spring of 1837. Judge Thomas Ford, afterwards Governor of Illinois, presided. Among the members of the bar, were J. M. Wilson, since Judge of the Court of Common Pleas of the city of Chicago; Uri Osgood, then a lawyer of Will county, several years a member of the State Senate; Colonel J. M. Strode, since of McHenry county, distinguished for his services in the Sauk war, and many years a member of the State Senate from northern Illinois. Also General James Turney, formerly Attorney General of the State. Since its first organization, the county of Will has rapidly increased in population and wealth. It has a good farming population, whose annual fairs will compare favorably with any in the State. Its towns are noted for the spirit of enterprise and progress, and the time is close at hand, when it will be among the richest and most populous counties in the State.

In 1861, there were 12,262 horses, 36,225 cattle, 8,389 sheep, and 11,181 swine owned in the county. Products—wheat, 497,335 bushels; corn 3,805,050 bushels; besides 4,140 acres of hay, oats, rye, potatoes, &c. According to the State Superintendent's report for 1862, there were 8,244 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one, and 8,111 scholars attending the public schools, which were in session an average of 7.3 months during the year. There were 108 male, and 190 female teachers employed, the former at an average salary of $24; and the latter $15 per month. The total receipts for all school purposes were $41,069. Total expended, $34,279. In 1863, the assessed value of personal and real estate was $5,134,477. Estimated true value, $11,124,690. (See Joliet.)

Williamson County

Is situated in the south part of the State, and is bounded on the north by Franklin, east by Saline, south by Johnson and a corner of Union, and west by Jackson counties. It is twenty-four miles long, east and west, and eighteen miles wide. It contains the twelve following townships, viz.:—Bainbridge, Crab Orchard, Eight-mile, Grassy, Herring's Prairie, Lake Creek, Marion, Northern, Rock Creek, Saline, Southern and Union, with a population in 1860 of 12,205 persons.

The Big Muddy River traverses the north-western corner of this county, while the Crab Orchard Creek (an affluent of the Big Muddy) waters the interior, and the South Fork of the Saline runs through the south-eastern portion. The Illinois Central Railroad passes within a few miles of its western limits.

In 1861, there were 3,021 horses, 7,801 cattle, 9,458 sheep, and 22,960 swine. The products were 187,050 bushels of wheat, 929,120 bushels of corn, and 1,897 acres of oats, hay, cotton, &c.

From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, we find that there were 5,588 persons between five and twenty-one years of age, 2,966 of whom attended the public schools, which were in session an average of 5.9 months during the year. There were fifty-two male and twenty female teachers employed, at an average salary of $26 per month to the former, and $20 to the latter. The total expended for all school purposes was $7,089. Assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863, $1,104,499; estimated true value, $2,393,081. (See Marion.)

Winnebago County

Was formed from Jo Daviess and the attached portion of LaSalle county, in January, 1836, from which parts of Stephenson and Boone counties have since been detached. It is bounded north by Wisconsin State, east by Boone, south by Ogle, and west by Stephenson, being twenty-four miles long and twenty-one miles wide, having an area of 504 square miles. Rock River runs through it from north to south; the Pecatonica comes in on its western border, and enters Rock River; Kishwaukee waters its south-eastern part, and enters Rock River. There are also other small streams. There is much excellent land in this county. The timber is in groves and detached portions, and the prairies are undulating and abundantly rich. Rock River furnishes immense water power, especially at Rockford, and all the streams abound in good mill sites.

Winnebago county contains sixteen organized townships, viz.:—Burnitt, Cherry Valley, Guilford, Harlem, Harrison, Howard, Laona, Lysander, New Milford, Owen, Rockford, Rockton, Roscoe, Seward, Shirlan and Winnebago. The population in 1860 was 24,491 persons. The Galena & Chicago Union and Kenosha & Rockford Railroads traverse the south and south-eastern portions of the county, intersecting at Rockford. The Racine, Mississippi, Beloit and Madison Roads pass through the north and north-western portions.

In 1861, there were in this county 8,694 horses, 17,489 cattle, 4,560 sheep, and 10,891 swine. From the State Superintendent's report for 1862, we learn that there were 7,895 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one years; scholars attending public schools, 7,372, under the care of 87 male, and 186 female teachers, receiving an average salary per month of $27 to the former, and $13 to the latter. Total receipts for school purposes, $24,156; total amount expended, $23,510. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $4,027,077; estimated true value, $8,725,333. (See Rockford.)

Woodford County

Is situated in the north central part of the State, bounded on the north by Marshall, east by Livingston and McLean, south by Tazewell, and on the west by the Illinois River or the Peoria Lake. It is an irregularly shaped country, about thirty miles in length east and west, and an average width of fifteen miles. It is divided into the following fifteen organized townships, viz: Cazanova, Clayton, Greene, Kansas, Lynn, Metamora, Minonk, Montgomery, Olio, Palestine, Panola, Partridge, Roanoke, Spring Bay, and Worth, containing a population in 1860 of 13,282 persons.

The surface is slightly undulating, and consists chiefly of prairies. The soil is fertile, and is watered by the Mackinaw and Crow Creeks, while the Peoria Lake (an expansion of the Illinois River) flows along its western borders. The Illinois Central Railroad passes through the eastern, and the Logansport, Peoria and Burlington Railroad through the southern part of the county, intersecting at El Paso.

In 1861, there were 7,196 horses, 13,217 cattle, 2,429 sheep, and 22,561 swine. Products, wheat, 504,050 bushels; corn, 2,886,620 bushels; and 15,598 acres of oats, hay, rye, etc., etc.

From the report of the State Superintendent for 1862, there were 4,140 persons between the ages of five and twenty-one; and 4,187 scholars attended the public schools, which were in session an average of 6.7 months during the year. There were seventy-eight male, and sixty-two female teachers employed—the former at a salary of $25, and the latter $17 per month. Total expenditure for all school purposes, $17,719. The assessed value of personal and real estate for 1863 was $2,517,665. Estimated true value, $5,554,940. (See Metamora.)

CONSTITUTION OF THE STATE OF ILLINOIS,

PREAMBLE.

WE, the people of the State of Illinois, grateful to ALMIGHTY GOD for the civil, political, and religious liberty, which HE hath so long permitted us to enjoy, and looking to HIM for a blessing upon our endeavors to secure and transmit the same unimpaired to succeeding generations, in order to form a more perfect government, establish justice, insure domestic tranquility, provide for the common defense, promote the general welfare, and secure the blessings of liberty to ourselves and our posterity, do ordain and establish this constitution for the State of Illinois.

ARTICLE I.

SECTION 1. The boundaries and jurisdiction of the state shall be as follows, to-wit: Beginning at the mouth of the Wabash river; thence up the same, and with the line of Indiana, to the north-west corner of the State; thence east, with the line of the same State, to the middle of Lake Michigan; thence north, along the middle of said Lake, to north latitude forty-two degrees and thirty minutes; thence west to the middle of the Mississippi river, and thence down, along the middle of that river, to its confluence with the Ohio river; and thence up the latter river, along its north-western shore, to the place of beginning: Provided, that this State shall exercise such jurisdiction upon the Ohio river as she is now entitled to, or such as may hereafter be agreed upon by this State and the State of Kentucky.

ARTICLE II.

SECTION 1. The powers of the government of the State of Illinois shall be divided into three distinct departments, and each of them be confided to a separate body of magistracy, to-wit: Those which are legislative, to one; those which are executive, to another; and those which are judicial, to another.

SEC. 2. No person, or collection of persons, being one of these departments, shall exercise any power properly belonging to either of the others, except as hereinafter expressly directed or permitted; and all acts in contravention of this section shall be void.

ARTICLE III.

SECTION 1. The legislative authority of this State shall be vested in a general assembly; which shall consist of a senate and house of representatives, both to be elected by the people.

SEC. 2. The first election for senators and representatives shall be held on the Tuesday after the first Monday in November, one thousand eight hundred and forty eight; and thereafter, election for members of the general assembly shall be held once in two years, on the Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, in each and every county, at such places therein as may be provided by law.

SEC. 3. No person shall be a representative who shall not have attained the age of twenty-five years; who shall not be a citizen of the United States, and three years an inhabitant of this State; who shall not have resided within the limits of the county or district in which he shall be chosen twelve months next preceding his election, if such county or district shall have been so long erected; but if not, then within the limits of the county or counties, district or districts, out of which the same shall have been taken, unless he shall have been absent on the public business of the United States, or of this State; and who, moreover, shall not have paid a state or county tax.

SEC. 4. No person shall be a senator who shall not have attained the age of thirty years; who shall not be a citizen of the United States, five years an inhabitant of this State, and one year in the county or district in which he shall be chosen immediately preceding his election, if such county or district shall have been so long erected; but if not, then within the limits of the county or counties, district or districts, out of which the same shall have been taken, unless he shall have been absent on the public business of the United States, or of this State, and shall not, moreover, have paid a state or county tax.

SEC. 5. The senators at their first session herein provided for shall be divided by lot, as near as can be, into two classes. The seats of the first class shall be vacated at the expiration of the second year, and those of the second class at the expiration of the fourth year; so that one-half thereof, as near as possible, may be biennially chosen for ever thereafter.

SEC. 6. The senate shall consist of twenty-five members, and the house of representatives shall consist of seventy five members, until the population of the State shall amount to one million of souls, when five members may be added to the house, and five additional members for every five hundred thousand inhabitants thereafter, until the whole number of representatives shall amount to one hundred; after which the number shall neither be increased nor diminished; to be apportioned among the several counties according to the number of white inhabitants. In all future apportionments, where more than one county shall be thrown into a representative district, all the representatives to which said counties may be entitled shall be elected by the entire district.

SEC. 7. No person elected to the general assembly shall receive any civil appointment within this State, or to the senate of the United States, from the governor, the governor and senate, or from the general assembly, during the term for which he shall have been elected; and all such appointments, and all votes given for any such member for any such office or appointment, shall be void; nor shall any member of the general assembly be interested, either directly or indirectly, in any contract with the State, or any county thereof, authorized by any law passed during the time for which he shall have been elected, or during one year after the expiration thereof.

SEC. 8. In the year one thousand eight hundred and fifty-five, and every tenth year thereafter, an enumeration of the inhabitants of this State shall be made, in such manner as shall be directed by law; and in the year eighteen hundred and fifty, and every tenth year thereafter, the census taken by authority of the government of the United States, shall be adopted by the general assembly as the enumeration of this State; and the number of senators and representatives shall, at the first regular session holden after the returns herein provided for are made, be apportioned among the several counties or districts to be established by law, according to the number of white inhabitants.

SEC. 9. Senatorial and representative districts shall be composed of contiguous territory, bounded by county lines; and only one senator allowed to each senatorial, and not more than three representatives to any representative district; Provided, that cities and towns containing the requisite population may be erected into separate districts.

SEC. 10. In forming senatorial and representative districts, counties containing a population of not more than one-fourth over the existing ratio, shall form separate districts, and the excess shall be given to the nearest county or counties not having a senator or representative, as the case may be, which has the largest white population.

SEC. 11. The first session of the general assembly shall commence on the first Monday of January, one thousand eight hundred and forty-nine; and for ever after, the general assembly shall meet on the first Monday of January next ensuing the election of the members thereof, and at no other period, unless as provided by this constitution.

SEC. 12. The senate and house of representatives, when assembled, shall each choose a speaker and other officers (the speaker of the senate excepted). Each house shall judge of the qualifications and election of its members, and sit upon its own adjournments. Two-thirds of each house shall constitute a quorum; but a smaller number may adjourn from day to day, and compel the attendance of absent members.

SEC. 13. Each house shall keep a journal of its proceedings, and publish them. The yeas and nays of the members on any question shall, at the desire of any two of them be entered on the journals.

SEC. 14. Any two members of either house shall have liberty to dissent and protest against any act or resolution which they may think injurious to the public, or to any individual, and have the reasons of their dissent entered on the journals.

SEC. 15. Each house may determine the rules of its proceedings, punish its members for disorderly behavior, and, with the concurrence of two-thirds of all the members elected, expel a member, but not a second time for the same cause; and the reason for such expulsion shall be entered upon the journal, with the names of the members voting upon the question.

SEC. 16. When vacancies shall happen in either house, the governor, or the person exercising the powers of governor, shall issue writs of election to fill such vacancies.

SEC. 17. Senators and representatives shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during the session of the general assembly, and in going and returning from the same; and for any speech or debate in either house, they shall not be questioned in any other place.

SEC 18. Each house may punish, by imprisonment during its session, any person, not a member, who shall be guilty of disrespect to the house, by any disorderly or contemptuous behavior in their presence: Provided, such imprisonment shall not, at any one time exceed twenty-four hours.

SEC. 19. The doors of each house, and of committees of the whole, shall be kept open, except in such cases as in the opinion of the house may require secresy. Neither house shall, without consent of the other, adjourn for more than two days, nor to any other place than that in which the two houses shall be sitting.

SEC. 20. The style of the laws of this State shall be: "Be it enacted by the people of the State of Illinois, represented in the General Assembly."

SEC. 21. Bills may originate in either house, but may be altered, amended, or rejected by the other; and on the final passage of all bills, the vote shall be by ayes and noes, and shall be entered on the journal; and no bill shall become a law without a concurrence of a majority of all the members elect in each house.

SEC. 22. Bills making appropriations for the pay of the members and officers of the general assembly, and for the salaries of the officers of the government, shall not contain any provision on any other subject.

SEC. 23. Every bill shall be read on three different days in each house, unless, in case of urgency, three-fourths of the house, where such bill is so depending, shall deem it expedient to dispense with this rule, and every bill having passed both houses shall be signed by the speakers of their respective houses; and no private or local law which may be passed by the general assembly shall embrace more than one subject, and that shall be expressed in the title. And no public act of the general assembly shall take effect or be in force until the expiration of sixty days from the end of the session at which the same may be passed, unless in case of emergency the general assembly shall otherwise direct.

SEC. 24. The sum of two dollars per day, for the first forty two days' attendance, and one dollar per day for each days' attendance thereafter, and ten cents for each necessary mile's travel, going to and returning from the seat of government, shall be allowed to the members of the general assembly, as a compensation for their services, and no more. The speaker of the house of representatives shall be allowed the sum of one dollar per day, in addition to his per diem as a member.

SEC. 25. The per diem and mileage allowed to each member of the general assembly shall be certified by the speakers of their respective houses, and entered on the journal, and published at the close of each session.

SEC. 26. No money shall be drawn from the treasury, but in consequence of appropriations made by law; and an accurate statement of the receipts and expenditures of the public moneys shall be attached to, and published with, the laws at the rising of each session of the general assembly. And no person, who has been or may be a collector or holder of the public moneys, shall be eligible to a seat in either house of the general assembly, nor be eligible to any office of profit or trust in this State, until such person shall have accounted for, and paid into the treasury all sums for which he may be accountable.

SEC. 27. The house of representatives shall have the sole power of impeaching; but a majority of all the members elected must concur in an impeachment. All impeachments shall be tried by the senate; and when sitting for that purpose, the senators shall be upon oath or affirmation, to do justice according to law and evidence. No person shall be convicted without the concurrence of two-thirds of the senators elected.

SEC. 28. The governor and other civil officers under this State, shall be liable to impeachment for any misdemeanor in office; but judgment in such cases shall not extend further than to removal from office, and disqualification to hold any office of honor, profit, or trust, under this State. The party, whether convicted or acquitted, shall nevertheless, be liable to indictment, trial, judgment, and punishment, according to law.

SEC. 29. No judge of any court of law or equity, secretary of state, attorney general, attorney for the state, recorder, clerk of any court of record, sheriff, or collector, member of either house of congress, or person holding any lucrative office under the United States or of this State; provided, that appointments in the militia, or justices of the peace, shall not be considered lucrative offices; shall have a seat in the general assembly; nor shall any person, holding any office of honor or profit under the government of the United States, hold any office of honor or profit under the authority of this State.

SEC. 30. Every person who shall be chosen or appointed to any office of trust or profit shall, before entering upon the duties thereof, take an oath to support the constitution of the United States, and of this State, and also an oath of office.

SEC. 31. The general assembly shall have full power to exclude from the privilege of electing, or being elected, any person convicted of bribery, perjury, or other infamous crime.

SEC. 32. The general assembly shall have no power to grant divorces, but may authorize the courts of justice to grant them for such cause as may be specified by law; Provided, that such laws shall be general and uniform in their operation.

SEC. 33. The general assembly shall never grant or authorize extra compensation to any public officer, agent, servant, or contractor, after the service shall have been rendered, or the contract entered into.

SEC. 34. The general assembly shall direct by law in what manner suits may be brought against the State.

SEC. 35. The general assembly shall have no power to authorize lotteries for any purpose, nor to revive or extend the charter of the State Bank, or the charter of any other bank heretofore existing in this State, and shall pass laws to prohibit the sale of lottery tickets in this State.

SEC. 36. The general assembly shall have no power to authorize, by private or special law, the sale of any lands or real estate, belonging, in whole or in part, to any individual or individuals.

SEC. 37. Each general assembly shall provide for all the appropriations necessary for the ordinary and contingent expenses of the government until the adjournment of the next regular session, the aggregate amount of which shall not be increased without a vote of two-thirds of each house, nor exceed the amount of revenue authorized by law to be raised in such time: Provided, the State may, to meet casual deficits or failures in revenue, contract debts never to exceed in the aggregate fifty thousand dollars; and the moneys thus borrowed shall be applied to the purpose for which they were obtained, or to repay the debt thus made, and to no other purpose; and no other debt, except for the purpose of repelling invasion, suppressing insurrection, or defending the State in war (for payment of which the faith of the State shall be pledged), shall be contracted, unless the law authorizing the same shall, at a general election, have been submitted to the people, and have received a majority of all the votes cast for members of the general assembly at such election. The general assembly shall provide for the publication of said law for three months at least before the vote of the people shall be taken upon the same; and provision shall be made at the time for the payment of the interest annually, as it shall accrue, by a tax levied for the purpose, or from other sources of revenue; which law, providing for the payment of such interest by such tax, shall be irrepealable until such debt shall be paid; And provided, further, that the law levying the tax shall be submitted to the people with the law authorizing the debt to be contracted.

SEC. 38. The credit of the State shall not, in any manner, be given to, or in aid of, any individual, association, or corporation.

SEC. 39. The general assembly shall provide by law that the fuel and stationery furnished for the use of the State, the copying, printing, binding, and distributing the laws and journals, and all other printing ordered by the general assembly, shall be let by contract to the lowest responsible bidder; and that no member of the general assembly, or other officer of the State shall be interested, either directly or indirectly, in any such contract; Provided, that the general assembly may fix a maximum price.

SEC. 40. Until there shall be a new apportionment of senators and representatives, the State shall be divided into senatorial and representative districts, and the senators and representatives shall be apportioned among the several districts as follows, viz.:

[This apportionment is omitted because it is superseded by a new one.]

SEC. 41. Until the general assembly shall otherwise provide, the clerks of the county commissioners' courts in each of the aforesaid senatorial districts, and in such of the representative districts as may be composed of more than one county, shall meet at the county seat of the oldest county in said district, within thirty days next after any election for senator or representatives therein, for the purpose of comparing and canvassing the votes given at such election; and the said clerks shall in all other respects conform to the laws on the subject in force at the time of the adoption of this constitution.

ARTICLE IV.

SECTION 1. The executive power of the State shall be vested in a governor.

SEC. 2. The first election of governor shall be held on Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, A. D., 1848; and the next election shall be held on Tuesday next after the first Monday in November, A. D., 1852; and thereafter an election for governor shall be held once in four years, on Tuesday next after the first Monday in November. The governor shall be chosen by the electors of the members of the general assembly, at the same places, and in the same manner, that they shall respectively vote for members thereof. The returns for every election of governor shall be sealed up and transmitted to the seat of government by the returning officers, directed to the speaker of the house of representatives, who shall open and publish them in the presence of a majority of the members of each house of the general assembly. The person having the highest number of votes shall be governor; but if two or more be equal and highest in votes, then one of them shall be chosen governor by joint ballot of both houses of the general assembly. Contested elections shall be determined by both houses of the general assembly, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 3. The first governor shall enter upon the duties of his office the second Monday of January, A. D., 1849, and shall hold his office until the second Monday of January, A. D., 1853, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified; and thereafter the governor shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified; but he shall not be eligible to such office more than four years in any term of eight years, nor to any other office, until after the expiration of the term for which he was elected.

SEC. 4. No person except a citizen of the United States shall be eligible to the office of governor; nor shall any person be eligible to that office who shall not have attained the age of thirty-five years, and been ten years a resident of this State, and fourteen years a citizen of the United States.

SEC. 5. The governor shall reside at the seat of government, and receive a salary of fifteen hundred dollars per annum, which shall not be increased or diminished; and he shall not, during the time for which he shall have been elected, receive any emolument from the United States, or either of them.

SEC. 6. Before he enters upon the duties of his office he shall take the following oath or affirmation, to-wit: "I do solemnly swear (or affirm) that I will faithfully execute the duties appertaining to office of governor of the State of Illinois; and will, to the best of my ability, preserve, protect, and defend the constitution of this State, and will also support the constitution of the United States."

SEC. 7. He shall, from time to time, give the general assembly information of the state of the government, and recommend to their consideration such measures as he shall deem expedient.

SEC. 8. The governor shall have power to grant reprieves, commutations, and pardons, after conviction, for all offenses, except treason and cases of impeachment, upon such conditions, and with such restrictions and limitations, as he may think proper, subject to such regulations as may be provided by law relative to the manner of applying for pardons. Upon conviction for treason he shall have power to suspend the execution of the sentence until the case shall be reported to the general assembly at its next meeting, when the general assembly shall pardon the convict, commute the sentence, direct the execution thereof, or grant a further reprieve. He shall, biennially, communicate to the general assembly each case of reprieve, commutation, or pardon granted, stating the name of the convict, the crime for which he was convicted, the sentence and its date, and the date of commutation, pardon, or reprieve.

SEC. 9. He may require information in writing from the officers in the executive departments upon any subject relating to the duties of their respective offices, and shall take care that the laws be faithfully executed.

SEC. 10. He may, on extraordinary occasions, convene the general assembly by proclamation, and shall state in said proclamation the purpose for which they are to convene; and the general assembly shall enter on no legislative business except that for which they were specially called together.

SEC. 11. He shall be commander-in-chief of the army and navy of this State, and of the militia, except when they shall be called into the service of the United States.

SEC. 12. The governor shall nominate, and, by and with the advice and consent of the senate (a majority of all the senators concurring), appoint all officers whose offices are established by this constitution, or which may be created by law, and whose appointments are not otherwise provided for; and no such officer shall be appointed or elected by the general assembly.

SEC. 13. In cases of disagreement between the two houses with respect to the time of adjournment, the governor shall have power to adjourn the general assembly to such time as he thinks proper: Provided, it be not to a period beyond the next constitutional meeting of the same.

SEC. 14. A lieutenant governor shall be chosen at every election of governor, in the same manner, continue in office for the same time, and possess the same qualifications. In voting for governor and lieutenant governor, the electors shall distinguish whom they vote for as governor and whom as lieutenant governor.

SEC. 15. The lieutenant governor shall, by virtue of his office, be speaker of the senate; have a right, when in committee of the whole, to debate and vote on all subjects, and whenever the senate are equally divided, to give the casting vote.

SEC. 16. Whenever the government shall be administered by the lieutenant governor, or he shall be unable to attend as speaker of the senate, the senators shall elect one of their own number as speaker for that occasion; and if, during the vacancy of the office of governor, the lieutenant governor shall be impeached, removed from office, refuse to qualify, or resign, or die, or be absent from the State, the speaker of the senate, shall, in like manner, administer the government.

SEC. 17. The lieutenant governor, while he acts as speaker of the senate, shall receive for his services the same compensation which shall, for the same period, be allowed the speaker of the house of representatives, and no more.

SEC. 18. If the lieutenant governor shall be called upon to administer the government, and shall while in such administration resign, die, or be absent from the State during the recess of the general assembly, it shall be the duty of the secretary of state, for the time being, to convene the senate for the purpose of choosing a speaker.

SEC. 19. In case of impeachment of the governor, his absence from the State, or inability to discharge the duties of his office, the powers, duties, and emoluments of the office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor; and in case of his death, resignation, or removal, then upon the speaker of the senate for the time being, until the governor, absent or impeached, shall return or be acquitted; or until the disqualification or inability shall cease; or until a new governor shall be elected and qualified.

SEC. 20. In case of a vacancy in the office of governor, for any other cause than those herein enumerated, or in case of the death of the governor elect before he is qualified, the powers, duties, and emoluments of the office shall devolve upon the lieutenant governor or speaker of the senate, as above provided, until a new governor be elected and qualified.

SEC. 21. Every bill which shall have passed the senate and house of representatives, shall, before it becomes a law, be presented to the governor; if he approve, he shall sign it; but if not, he shall return it, with his objections, to the house in which it shall have originated; and the said house shall enter the objections at large on their journal, and proceed to reconsider it. If, after such reconsideration, a majority of the members elected shall agree to pass the bill, it shall be sent, together with the objections, to the other house, by which it shall likewise be reconsidered; and if approved by a majority of the members elected, it shall become a law, notwithstanding the objections of the governor; but in all such cases, the votes of both houses shall be determined by yeas and nays, to be entered on the journal of each house respectively. If any bill shall not be returned by the governor within ten days (Sundays excepted) after it shall have been presented to him, the same shall be a law, in like manner as if he had signed it, unless the general assembly shall, by their adjournment, prevent its return, in which case the said bill shall be returned on the first day of the meeting of the general assembly, after the expiration of said ten days, or be a law.

SEC. 22. There shall be elected by the qualified electors of this State, at the same time of the election for governor, a secretary of state, whose term of office shall be the same as that of the governor, who shall keep a fair register of the official acts of the governor, and, when required, shall lay the same, and all papers, minutes, and vouchers, relative thereto, before either branch of the general assembly, and shall perform such other duties as shall be assigned him by law, and shall receive a salary of eight hundred dollars per annum, and no more, except fees: Provided, that if the office of secretary of state should be vacated by death, resignation, or otherwise, it shall be the duty of the governor to appoint another, who shall hold his office until another secretary shall be elected and qualified.

SEC. 23. There shall be chosen, by the qualified electors throughout the State, an auditor of public accounts, who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor is qualified, and whose duties shall be regulated by law, and who shall receive a salary, exclusive of clerk hire, of one thousand dollars per annum for his services, and no more.

SEC. 24. There shall be elected, by the qualified electors throughout the State, a state treasurer, who shall hold his office for two years, and until his successor is qualified; whose duties may be regulated by law, and who shall receive a salary of eight hundred dollars per annum, and no more.

SEC. 25. All grants and commissions shall be sealed with the great seal of state, signed by the governor or person administering the government, and countersigned by the secretary of state.

SEC. 26. The governor and all other civil officers shall be liable to impeachment for misdemeanor in office, during their continuance in office, and for two years thereafter.

ARTICLE V.

SECTION 1. The judicial power of this State shall be, and is hereby, vested in one supreme court, in circuit courts, in county courts, and in justices of the peace: Provided, that inferior local courts, of civil and criminal jurisdiction, may be established by the general assembly in the cities of this State, but such courts shall have a uniform organization and jurisdiction in such cities.

SEC. 2. The supreme court shall consist of three judges, two of whom shall form a quorum; and the concurrence of two of said judges shall, in all cases, be necessary to a decision.

SEC. 3. The state shall be divided into three grand divisions, as nearly equal as may be, and the qualified electors of each division shall elect one of the said judges for the term of nine years: Provided, that after the first election of such judges, the general assembly may have the power to provide by law for their election by the whole State, or by divisions, as they may deem most expedient.

SEC. 4. The office of one of said judges shall be vacated, after the first election held under this article, in three years; of one, in six years; and of one, in nine years; to be decided by lot, so that one of said judges shall be elected once in every three years. The judge having the longest term to serve shall be the first chief-justice; after which, the judge having the oldest commission shall be chief justice.

SEC. 5. The supreme court may have original jurisdiction in cases relative to the revenue, in cases of mandamus, habeas corpus, and in such cases of impeachment as may be by law directed to be tried before it, and shall have appellate jurisdiction in all other cases.

SEC. 6. The supreme court shall hold one term annually in each of the aforesaid grand divisions, at such time and place, in each of said divisions, as may be provided for by law.

SEC. 7. The State shall be divided into nine judicial districts; in each of which one circuit judge shall be elected by the qualified electors thereof, who shall hold his office for the term of six years, and until his successor shall be commissioned and qualified: Provided, that the general assembly may increase the number of circuits to meet the future exigencies of the State.

SEC. 8. There shall be two or more terms of the circuit court held, annually, in each county of this State, at such times as shall be provided by law; and said courts shall have jurisdiction in all cases at law and equity, and in all cases of appeals from all inferior courts.

SEC. 9. All vacancies in the supreme and circuit courts shall be filled by election as aforesaid: Provided, however, that if the unexpired term does not exceed one year, such vacancy may be filled by executive appointment.

SEC. 10. The judges of the supreme court shall receive a salary of twelve hundred dollars per annum, payable quarterly, and no more. The judges of the circuit courts shall receive a salary of one thousand dollars per annum, payable quarterly, and no more. The judges of the supreme and circuit courts shall not be eligible to any other office or public trust, of profit, in this State or the United States, during the term for which they are elected, nor for one year thereafter. All votes for either of them for any elective office (except that of judge of the supreme or circuit court), given by the general assembly, or the people, shall be void.

SEC. 11. No person shall be eligible to the office of judge of any court of this State, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this State five years next preceding his election, and who shall not, for two years next preceding his election, have resided in the division, circuit, or county, in which he shall be elected; nor shall any person be elected judge of the supreme court, who shall be, at the time of his election, under the age of thirty-five years; and no person shall be eligible to the office of judge of the circuit court until he shall have attained the age of thirty years.

SEC. 12. For any reasonable cause, to be entered on the journals of each house, which shall not be sufficient ground for impeachment, both justices of the supreme court, and judges of the circuit court, shall be removed from office, on the vote of two-thirds of the members elected to each branch of the general assembly: Provided, always, that no member of either house of the general assembly shall be eligible to fill the vacancy occasioned by such removal: Provided, also, that no removal shall be made unless the justice or judge complained of shall have been served with a copy of the complaint against him, and shall have an opportunity of being heard in his defence.

SEC. 13. The first election for justices of the supreme court, and judges of the circuit courts, shall be held on the first Monday of September, 1848.

SEC. 14. The second election for one justice of the supreme court shall be held on the first Monday of June, 1852; and every three years thereafter an election shall be held for one justice of the supreme court.

SEC. 15. On the first Monday of June, 1855, and every sixth year thereafter, an election shall be held for judges of the circuit courts: Provided, whenever an additional circuit is created, such provision may be made as to hold the second election of such additional judge at the regular elections herein provided.

SEC. 16. There shall be, in each county, a court, to be called a county court.

SEC. 17. One county judge shall be elected by the qualified voters of each county, who shall hold his office for four years, and until his successor is elected and qualified.

SEC. 18. The jurisdiction of said court shall extend to all probate and such other jurisdiction as the general assembly may confer in civil cases, and such criminal cases as may be prescribed by law, where the punishment is by fine only, not exceeding one hundred dollars.

SEC. 19. The county judge, with such justices of the peace in each county as may be designated by law, shall hold terms for the transaction of county business, and shall perform such other duties as the general assembly shall prescribe: Provided, the general assembly may require that two justices, to be chosen by the qualified electors of each county, shall sit with the county judge in all cases; and there shall be elected, quadrennially, in each county, a clerk of the county court, who shall be ex officio recorder, whose compensation shall be fees; Provided, the general assembly may, by law, make the clerk of the circuit court ex officio recorder, in lieu of the county clerk.

SEC. 20. The general assembly shall provide for the compensation of the county judge.

SEC. 21. The clerks of the supreme and circuit courts, and state's attorneys, shall be elected at the first special election for judges. The second election for clerks of the supreme court shall be held on the first Monday of June, 1855, and every sixth year thereafter. The second election for clerks of the circuit courts, and state's attorneys, shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, 1852, and every fourth year thereafter.

SEC. 22. All judges and state's attorneys shall be commissioned by the governor.

SEC. 23. The election of all officers, and the filling of all vacancies that may happen by death, resignation, or removal, not otherwise directed or provided for by this constitution, shall be made in such manner as the general assembly shall direct: Provided, that no such officer shall be elected by the general assembly.

SEC. 24. The general assembly may authorize the judgments, decrees, and decisions, of any local, inferior court of record, of original civil or criminal jurisdiction, established in a city, to be removed, for revision, directly into the supreme court.

SEC. 25. County judges, clerks, sheriffs, and other county officers, for wilful neglect of duty, or misdemeanor in office, shall be liable to presentment or indictment by a grand jury, and trial by a petit jury; and, upon conviction, shall be removed from office.

SEC. 26. All process, writs, and other proceedings, shall run in the name of "The people of the State of Illinois." All prosecutions shall be carried on "In the name and by the authority of the people of the State of Illinois," and conclude, "Against the peace and dignity of the same."

SEC. 27. There shall be elected in each county in this State, in such districts as the general assembly may direct, by the qualified electors thereof, a competent number of justices of the peace, who shall hold their offices for the term of four years, and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified, and who shall perform such duties, receive such compensation, and exercise such jurisdiction, as may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 28. There shall be elected, in each of the judicial circuits of this State, by the qualified electors thereof, one state's attorney, who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his successor shall be commissioned and qualified; who shall perform such duties, and receive such compensation, as may be prescribed by law: Provided, that the general assembly may hereafter provide by law for the election, by the qualified voters of each county in this State, of one county attorney for each county, in lieu of the state's attorneys provided for in this section; the term of office, duties, and compensation of which county attorneys, shall be regulated by law.

SEC. 29. The qualified electors of each county in this State shall elect a clerk of the circuit court, who shall hold his office for the term of four years, and until his suceessor shall have been elected and qualified, who shall perform such duties and receive such compensation as may be prescribed by law. The clerks of the supreme court shall be elected, in each division, by the qualified electors thereof, for the term of six years, and until their successors shall have been elected and qualified; whose duties and compensation shall be provided by law.

SEC. 31. The terms of the supreme court for the first division, shall be held at Mount Vernon, in Jefferson county; for the second division, at Springfield, in Sangamon county; for the third division, at Ottawa, in La Salle county; until some other place, in either division, is fixed by law.

SEC. 32. Appeals and writs of error may be taken from the circuit court of any county to the supreme court held in the division which includes such county, or, with the consent of all the parties in the cause, to the supreme court in the next adjoining division.

SEC. 33. The foregoing districts may, after the taking of each census by the State, be altered, if necessary, to equalize the said districts in population; but such alteration shall be made by adding to such district such adjacent county or counties as will make said district nearest equal in population: Provided, no such alteration shall affect the office of any judge then in office.

ARTICLE VI.

SEC. 1. In all elections, every white male citizen above the age of twenty-one years, having resided in the State one year next preceding any election, shall be entitled to vote at such election; and every white male inhabitant of the age aforesaid, who may be a resident of the State at the time of the adoption of this constitution, shall have the right of voting as aforesaid; but no such citizen or inhabitant shall be entitled to vote, except in the district or county in which he shall actually reside at the time of such election.

SEC. 2. All votes shall be given by ballot.

SEC. 3. Electors shall in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at elections, and in going to and returning from the same.

SEC. 4. No elector shall be obliged to do militia duty on the days of election except in tme of war or public danger.

SEC. 5. No elector shall be deemed to have lost his residence in this Sate by reason of his absence on the business of the United States or of this State.

SEC. 6. No soldier, seaman, or marine, in the army or navy of the United States, shall be deemed a resident of this State, in consequence of being stationed at any military or naval place within the same.

SEB. 7. No person shall be elected or appointed to any office in this State, civil or military, who is not a citizen of the United States, and who shall not have resided in this State one year next before the election or appointment.

SEC. 8. The general assembly shall have full power to pass laws excluding from the right of suffrage persons convicted of imfamous crimes.

SEC. 9. The general elections shall be held on the Tuesday next after the first Monday of November, biennially, until otherwise provided by law.

ARTICLE VII.

SECTION 1. No new county shall be formed or established by the general assembly, which will reduce the county or counties, or either of them, from which it shall be taken, to less contents than four hundred square miles; nor shall any county be formed of less contents; nor shall any line thereof pass within less than ten miles of any county seat of the county or counties proposed to be divided.

SEC. 2. No county shall be divided, or have any part stricken therefrom, without submitting the question to a vote of the people of the county, nor unless a majority of all the legal voters of the county voting on the question shall vote for the same.

SEC. 3. All territory which has been, or may be stricken off, by legislative enactment, from any organized county or counties, for the purpose of forming a new county, and which shall remain unorganized after the period provided for such organization, shall be and remain a part of the county or counties from which it was originally taken, for all purposes of county and State government, until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 4. There shall be no territory stricken from any county unless a majority of the voters living in such territory shall petition for such division; and no territory shall be added to any county without the consent of a majority of the voters of the county to which it is proposed to be added.

SEC. 5. No county seat shall be removed until the point to which it is proposed to be removed shall be fixed by law, and a majority of the voters of the county shall have voted in favor of its removal to such point.

SEC. 6. The general assembly shall provide, by a general law, for a township organization, under which any county may organize whenever a majority of the voters of such county, at any general election, shall so determine; and whenever any county shall adopt a township organization, so much of this constitution as provides for the management of the fiscal concerns of the said county by the county court, may be dispensed with, and the affairs of said county may be transacted in such manner as the general assembly may provide.

SEC. 7. There shall be elected in each county in this State, by the qualified electors thereof, a sheriff, who shall hold his office for the term of two years, and until his successor shall have been elected and qualified: Provided, no person shall be eligible to the said office more than once in four years.

ARTICLE VIII.

SECTION 1. The militia of the State of Illinois shall consist of all free male able bodied persons (negroes, mullattoes, and Indians excepted), residents of the State, between the ages of eighteen and forty-five years, except such persons as now are or hereafter may be exempted by the laws of the United States or of this State, and shall be armed, equipped, and trained, as the general assembly may provide by law.

SEC. 2. No person or persons, conscientiously scrupulous of bearing arms, shall be compelled to do militia duty in time of peace, provided such person or persons shall pay an equivalent for such exemption.

SEC. 3. Company, battalion, and regimental officers, staff officers excepted, shall be elected by the persons composing their several companies, battallions and regiments.

SEC. 4. Brigrdier and major-generals shall be elected by the officers of their brigades and divisions, respectively.

SEC. 5. All militia officers shall be commissioned by the governor, and may hold their commissions for such time as the legislature may provide.

SEC. 6. The militia shall, in all cases, except treason, felony, or breach of the peace, be privileged from arrest during their attendance at musters and election of officers, and in going to and returning from the same.

ARTICLE IX.

SEC. 1 The general assembly may, whenever they shall deem it necessary, cause to be collected from all able-bodied, free white male inhabitants of this State, over the age of twenty-one years, and under the age ef sixty years, who are entitled to the right of suffrage, a capitation tax of not less than fifty cents, nor more than one dollar each.

SEC. 2. The general assembly shall provide for levying a tax by valuation, so that every person and corporation shall pay a tax in proportion to the value of his or her property; such value to be ascertained by some person or person to be elected or appointed in such manner as the general assembly shall direct, and not otherwise; but the general assembly shall have power to tax pedlars, auctioneers, brokers, hawkers, merchants, commission merchants, showmen, jugglers, inn-keepers, grocery-keepers, toll bridges and ferries, and persons using and exercising franchises and privileges, in such manner as they shall from time to time direct.

SEC. 3. The property of the State and counties, both real and personal, and such other property as the general assembly may deem necessary for school, religious, and charitable purposes, may be exempted from taxation.

SEC. 4. Hereafter, no purchaser of any land or town lot, at any sale of lands or town lots for taxes due either to this State, or any county, or incorporated town or city within the same; or at any sale for taxes or levies authorized by the laws of this State, shall be entitled to a deed for the lands or town lot so purchased, until he or she shall have complied with the following conditions, to wit: Such purchaser shall serve, or cause to be served, a written notice of such purchese, on every person in possession of such land or town lot, three months before the expiration of the time of redemption on such sale; in which notice he shall state when he purchased the land or town lot, the description of the land or lot he has purchased, and when the time of redemption will expire. In like manner he shall serve on the persons in whose name or names such land or lot is taxed, a similar written notice, if such person or persons shall reside in the county where such land or lot shall be situated; and in the event that the person or persons in whose name or names the land or lot is taxed, do not reside in the county, such purchaser shall publish such notice in some newspaper printed in such county, and if no newspaper is printed in the county, then in the nearest newspaper that is published in this State to the county in which such lot or land is situated; which notice shall be inserted three times, the last time not less than three months before the time of redemption shall expire. Every such purchaser, by himself or agent, shall, before he shall be entitled to a deed make an affidavit of his having complied with the conditions of this section, stating particularly the facts relied on as such compliance; which affidavit shall be delivered to the person authorized by law to execute such tax deed, and which shall by him be filed with the officer having custody of the records of lands and lots sold for taxes and entries of redemption, in the county where such land or lot shall lie, to be by such officer entered on the records of his office; and carefully preserved among the files of his office; and which record or affidavit shall be prima facie evidence that such notice has been given. Any person swearing falsely in such affidsvit shall be deemed guilty of perjury, and punished accordingly. In case any person shall be compelled, under this section, to publish a notice in a newspaper, then, before any person, who may have a right to redeem such land or lot from tax sale, shall be permitted to redeem, he or she shall pay the officer or person who by law is authorized to receive such redemption-money, the printer's fee for publishing such notice, and the expenses of swearing or affirming to the affidavit, and filing the same.

Sec. 5. The corporate authorities of counties, townships, school district, cities, towns, and villages, may be vested with power to assess and collect taxes for corporate purposes; such taxes to be uniform in respect to persons and property within the jurisdiction of the body imposing the same. And the general assembly shall require that all the property within the limits of municipal corporations, belonging to individuals, shall be taxed for the payment of debts contracted under authority of law.

Sec. 6. The specification of the objects and subjects of taxation shall not deprive the general assembly of the power to require other objects or subjects to be taxed in such manner as may be consistent with the principle of taxation fixed in this constitution.

ARTICLE X.

Section 1. Corporations, not possessing banking powers or privileges, may be formed under general laws, but shall not be created by special acts, except for municipal purposes, and in cases where, in the judgment of the general assembly, the objects of the corporation cannot be attained under general laws.

Sec. 2. Dues from corporations, not possessing banking powers or privileges, shall be secured by such individual liabilities of the corporators, or other means, as may be prescribed by law.

Sec. 3. No state bank shall hereafter be created, nor shall the State own or be liable for any stock in any corporation or joint stock association for banking purposes, to be hereafter created.

Sec. 4. The stockholders in every corporation or joint stock association, for banking purposes, issuing bank notes, or any kind of paper credits to circulate as money, shall be individually responsible, to the amount of their respective share or shares of stock in any such corporation or association, for all its debts and liabilities of every kind.

Sec. 5. No act of the general assembly, authorizing corporations or associations with banking powers, shall go into effect, or in any manner be in force, unless the same shall be submitted to the people at the general election next succeeding the passage of the same, and be approved by a majority of all the votes cast at such election for and against such law.

Sec. 6. The general assembly shall encourage internal improvements, by passing liberal general laws of incorporation for that pnrpose.

ARTICLE XI.

All lands which have been granted, as a "common," to the inhabitants of any town, hamlet, village, or corporation, by any person, body politic or corporate, or by any government having power to make such grant, shall forever remain common to the inhabitants of such town, hamlet, village or corporation; but the said commons, or any of them, or any part thereof, may be divided, leased or granted, in such manner as may hereafter be provided by law, on petition of a majority of the qualified voters interested in such commons, or any of them.

ARTICLE XII.

Section 1. Whenever two-thirds of all the members elected to each branch of the general assembly shall think it necessary to alter or amend this constitution, they shall recommend to the electors at the next election of members of the general assembly, to vote for or against a convention; and if it shall appear that a majority of all the electors of the State voting for representatives have voted for a convention, the general assembly shall, at their next session, call a convention, to consist of as many members as the house of representatives at the time of making said call, to be chosen in the same manner, at the same place, and by the same electors, in the same districts that chose the members of the house of representatives; and which convention shall meet within three months after the said election, for the purpose of revising, altering, or amending this constitution.

SEC. 2. Any amendment or amendments to this constitution may be proposed in either branch of the general assembly; and if the same shall be agreed to by two-thirds of all the members elect in each of the two houses, such proposed amendment or amendments shall be referred to the next regular session of the general assembly, and shall be published at least three months previous to the time of holding the next election for members of the house of representatives; and if, at the next regular session of the generel assembly after said election. a majority of all the members elect, in each branch of the general assembly, shall agree to said amendment or amendments, then it shall be their duty to submit the same to the people at the next general election, for their adoption or rejection, in such manner as may be prescribed by law; and if a majority of all the electors voting at such election for members of the house of representatives, shall vote for such amendment or amendments, the same shall become a part of the constitution. But the general assembly shall not have power to propose an amendment or amendments to more than one article of the constitution at the same session.

ARTICLE XIII.

That the general, great, and essential principles of liberty and free government may be recognized and unalterably established, WE DECLARE:—

SECTION 1. That all men are born equally free and independent, and have certain inherent and indefeasible rights; among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty, and of acquiring, possessing, and protecting property and reputation, and of pursuing their own happiness.

SEC. 2. That all power is inherent in the people, and all free governments are founded on their authority, and instituted for their peace, safety, and happiness.

SEC. 3. That all men have a natural and indefeasible right to worship Almighty God according to the dictates of their own consciences; that no man can of right be compelled to attend, erect, or support any place of worship, or to maintain any ministry, against his consent; that no human authority can, in any case whatever, control or interfere with the rights of conscience; and that no preference shall ever be given by law to any religious establishments or modes of worship.

SEC. 4. That no religious test shall ever be required as a qualification to any office of public trust under this State.

SEC. 5. That all elections shall be free and equal.

SEC. 6. That the right of trial by jury shall remain inviolate; and shall extend to all cases at law, without regard to the amount in controversy.

SEC. 7. That the people shall be secure in their persons, houses, papers, and possessions, from unreasonable searches and seizures: and that general warrants, whereby an officer may be commanded to search suspected places without evidence of the fact committed, or to seize any person or persons not named, whose offences are not particularly described and supported by evidence, are dangerous to liberty, and ought not to be granted.

SEC. 8. That no freeman shall be imprisoned, or disseized of his freehold, liberties, or privileges, or outlawed or exiled, or in any manner deprived of his life, liberty or property, but by the judgment of his peers, or the law of the land.

SEC. 9. That in all criminal prosecutions, the accused hath a right to be heard by himself and counsel; to demand the nature and cause of the accusation against him; to meet the witnesses face to face; to have compulsory process to compel the attendance of witnesses in his favor; and in prosecutions by indictment or information, a speedy public trial by an impartial jury of the county or district wherein the offence shall have been committed, which county or district shall have been previously ascertained by law; and that he shall not be compelled to give evidence against himself.

SEC. 10. No person shall be held to answer for a criminal offence unless on the presentment or indictment of a grand jury, except in cases of impeachment, or in cases cognizable by justices of the peace, or arising in the army or navy, or in the militia when in actual service in time of war or public danger: Provided, that justices of the peace shall try no person, except as a court of inquiry, for any offence punishable with imprisonment or death, or fine above one hundred dollars.

SEC. 11. No person shall, for the same offence, be twice put in jeopardy of his life or limb; nor shall nny man's property be taken or applied to public use without the consent of his representatives in the general assembly, nor without just compensation being made to him.

SEC. 12. Every person within this State ought to find a certain remedy in the laws for all injuries or wrongs which he may receive in his person, property, or character; he ought to obtain right and justice freely, and without being obliged to purchase it, completely and without denial, promptly and without delay, conformably to the laws.

SEC. 14. That all persons shall be bailable by sufficient surities, unless for capital offences where the proof is evident or the presumption great; and the privilege of the writ of habeas corpus shall not be suspended, unless, when in cases of rebellion or invasion, the public safety may require it.

SEC. 14. All penalties shall be proportioned to the nature of the offence; the true design of all punishment being to reform, not to exterminate mankind.

SEC. 15. No person shall be imprisoned for debt, unless upon refusal to deliver up his estate for the benefit of his creditors, in such manner as shall be prescribed by law, or in cases where there is strong presumption of fraud.

SEC. 16. There shall be neither slavery nor involuntary servitude in this State, except as a punishment for crime, whereof the party shall have been duly convicted.

SEC. 17. No ex post facto law, nor any law impairing the obligation of contracts, shall ever be made: and no conviction shall work corruption of blood or forfeiture of estate.

SEC. 18. That no person shall be liable to be transported out of this State for any offence committed within the same.

SEC. 19. That a frequent recurrence to the fundamental principles of civil government is absolutely necessary to preserve the blessings of liberty.

SEC. 20. The military shall be in strict subordination to the civil power.

SEC. 21. That the people have a right to assemble together in a peaceable manner to consult for their common good, to instruct their representatives, and to apply to the general assembly for redress of grievances.

SEC. 22. No soldier shall, in time of peace, be quartered in any house without the consent of the owner; nor in time of war, except in manner prescribed by law.

SEC. 23. The printing-presses shall be free to every person who undertakes to examine the proceedings of the general assembly, or any branch of government; and no law shall ever be made to restrain the right thereof. The free communication of thoughts and opinions is one of the invaluable rights of man; and every citizen may freely speak, write, and print, on any subject, being responsible for the abuse of that liberty.

SEC. 24. In prosecutions for the publication of papers investigating the official conduct of officers, or of men acting in a public capacity, or when the matter published is proper for public information, the truth thereof may be given in evidence; and all indictments for libels, the jury shall have the right of determining both the law and the fact, under direction of the court, as in other cases.

SEC 25. Any person who shall, after the adoption of this constitution, fight a duel, or send or accept a challenge for that purpose, or be aider or abettor in fighting a duel, shall be deprived of the right of holding any office of honor or profit in this State, and shall be punished otherwise, in such manner as is or may be prescribed by law.

SEC. 26. That from and after the adoption of this constitution, every person who shall be elected or appointed to any office of profit, trust, or emolument, civil or military, legislative, executive, or judicial, under the government of this State, shall, before he enters upon the duties of his office, in addition to the oath prescribed in this constitution, take the following oath: "I do solemnly swear [or affirm, as the case may be] that I have not fought a duel, nor sent or accepted a challenge to fight a duel, the probable issue of which might have been the death of either party, nor been a second to either party, nor in any manner aided or assisted in such duel, nor been knowingly the bearer of such challenge or acceptance, since the adoption of the constitution; and that I will not be so engaged or concerned, directly or indirectly, in or about any such duel, during my continuance in office. So help me, God."

ARTICLE XIV.

The general assembly shall, at its first session under the amended constitution, pass such laws as will effectually prohibit free persons of color from immigrating to and settling in this State; and to effectually prevent the owners of slaves from bringing them into this State, for the purpose of setting them free.

ARTICLE XV.

There shall be annually assessed and collected, in the same manner as other State revenue may be assessed and collected, a tax of two mills upon each dollar's worth of taxable property, in addition to all other taxes, to be applied as follows, to wit: The fund so created shall be kept separate, and shall annually, on the first day of January, be apportioned and paid over pro rata upon all such State indebtedness, other than the canal and school indebtedness, as may for that purpose be presented by the holders of the same, to be entered as credits upon, and to that intent, in extinguishment of the principal of said indebtedness.

SCHEDULE.

That no inconvenience may arise from the alterations and amendments made in the constitution of this State, and to carry the same into complete effect, it is hereby ordained and declared:

SECTION 1. That all laws in force at the adoption of this constitution, not inconsistent therewith, and all rights, actions, prosecutions, claims and contracts of this State, individuals or bodies corporate, shall continue and be as valid as if this constitution had not been adopted.

SEC. 2. That all fines, penalties and forfeitures due and owing to the State of Illinois under the present constitution and laws, shall enure to the use of the people of the State of Illinois under this constitution.

SEC. 3. Recognizances, bonds, obligations, and all other instruments entered into or executed before the adoption of this constitution, to the people of the State of Illinois, to any State or county officer or public body, shall remain binding and valid, and rights and liabilities upon the same shall continue, and all crimes and misdemeanors shall be tried and punished as though no change had been made in the constitution of the State.

SEC. 4. That "Article XI," entitled "commons," is hereby adopted as part of the constitution of this State, without being submitted to be voted upon by the people.

SEC. 5. That at the first election fixed by this constitution for the election of judges, there shall be elected one circuit judge in each of the nine judicial circuits now established in this State.

SEC. 6. The county commissioners' courts and the probate justices of the several counties shall continue in existence and exercise their present jurisdiction until the county court, provided in this constitution, is organized in pursuance of an act of the general assembly to be passed at its first session.

SEC. 7. Shat the clerk of the circuit court, in each county fixed by this constitution as the place for holding the supreme court, except in the county of Sangamon, shall be ex officio clerk of the supreme court, until the clerks of said court shall be elected and qualified. as provided in this constitution, and all laws now in force, in relation to the clerk of the supreme court, shall be applicable to said clerks and their duties.

SEC. 8. That the sheriffs, state attorneys, and all other officers elected under this constitution, shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by law.

SEC. 9. That the oaths of office herein required to be taken may be administered by a justice of the peace until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 10. That this constitution shall be submitted to the people for their adoption or rejection, at an election to be held on the first Monday in March, A. D. 1848, and there shall also be submitted for adoption or rejection, at the same time, the separate articles in relation to the emigration of colored persons and the public debt.

SEC. 11. That every person entitled to vote for members of the general assembly, by the constitution and laws now in force, shall, on the first Monday in March, A. D. 1848, be entitled to vote for the adoption or rejection of this constitution, and for and against the aforesaid articles separately submitted, and the said qualified electors shall vote in the counties in which they respectively reside, at the usual places of voting, and not elsewhere; and the said election shall be conducted according to the laws now in force in relation to the election of governor, so far as applicable, except as herein otherwise provided.

SEC. 12. That the poll book to be used at said election shall, as nearly as practicable, be in the following form, to wit:

POLL BOOK of an election held at ——— precinct, in the county of ———, on the first Monday of March, A. D. 1848, for the adoption or rejection of the Constitution and the several articles submitted.

Names of the Voters.	Adoption of the Constitution.	Rejection of the Constitution.	For the article in relation to colored persons.	Against the article in relation to colored persons.	For the article for the two mill tax.	Against the article for the two mill tax.
A. B.	1		1		1
E. F.	2			1	3
G. H.			3			1

SEC. 13. That the returns of the votes for the adoption or rejection of this constitution, and for and against the separate articles submitted, shall be made to the secretary of state, within fifty days after the election, and the returns of the votes shall, within five days thereafter, be examined and canvassed by the auditor, treasurer and secretary of state, or any two of them, in the presence of the governor, and proclamation shall be made by the governor forthwith of the result of the polls. If it shall appear that a majority of all the votes polled are for the adoption of this constitution, it shall be the supreme law of the land, from and after the first day of April, A. D. 1848, but if it shall appear that a majority of the votes polled were given against the constitution, the same shall be null and void. If it shall further appear that a majority of the votes polled shall have been given for the separate article in relation to colored persons, or the article for the two mill tax, then said article or articles shall be and form a part of this constitution; otherwise said article or articles shall be null and void.

SEC. 14. That if this constitution shall be ratified by the people, the governor shall forthwith, after having ascertained the fact, issue writs of election to the sheriffs of the several counties in this state, or in case of vacancy, to the coroners, for the election of all the officers, the time of whose election is fixed by this constitution or schedule; and it shall be the duty of said sheriffs or coroners to give at least twenty days' notice of the time and place of said election, in the manner now provided by law.

SEC. 15. The general assembly shall, at its first session after the adoption of this constitution, provide by law for the mode of voting by ballot, and also for the manner of returning, canvassing and certifying the number of votes cast at any election; and until said law shall be passed, all elections shall be viva voce, and the laws now in force regulating elections shall continue in force until the general assembly shall provide otherwise, as herein directed.

SEC. 16. That the first general election of governor, secretary of state, auditor, treasurer and members of the general assembly, and of such other officers as are to be elected at the same time, shall be held on the first Monday of August, eighteen hundred and forty-eight, anything in this constitution to the contrary notwithstanding. County officers then elected shall hold their respective offices until their successors are elected or appointed, in conformity with laws hereinafter enacted.

SEC. 17. The returns of the election of justices of the supreme and judges of the circuit courts, secretary of state, auditor and treasurer, shall be made and canvassed as is now provided by law for representatives in Congress; and returns for members of the general assembly and county officers shall be made and canvassed as is now provided by law.

SEC. 18. That all laws of the State of Illinois, and all official writings, and the executive, legislative, and judicial proceedings, shall be conducted, preserved, and published in no other than the English language.

SEC. 19. On the first Monday in December, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight, the term of office of judges of the supreme court, state's attorneys, and of the clerks of the supreme and circuit courts, shall expire; and on said day, the term of office of the judges, state's attorneys, and clerks elected under the provisions of this constitution, shall commence. The judges of the supreme court elected as aforesaid, shall have and exercise the powers and jurisdiction conferred upon the present judges of that court; and the said judges of the circuit courts shall have and exercise the powers and jurisdiction conferred upon the judges of those courts, subject to the provisions of this constitution.

SEC. 20. On the first Monday in December, one thousand eight hundred and forty-eight, jurisdiction of all suits and proceedings then pending in the present supreme court shall become vested in the supreme court established by this constitution, and shall be finally adjudicated by the court where the same may be pending. The jurisdiction of all suits and proceedings then pending in the circuit courts of the several counties shall be vested in the circuit courts of said counties.

SEC. 21. The Cook and Jo Daviess county courts shall continue to exist, and the judge and other officers of the same remain in office until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 22. Until otherwise provided by law, the terms of the supreme court shall be held as follows:—In the first division, on the first Monday of December, A. D. 1848, and annually thereafter. In the second division, on the third Monday of December, A. D. 1848, and annually thereafter. In the third division, on the first Monday of February, A. D. 1849, and annually thereafter. The sheriffs of Jefferson and LaSalle counties shall perform the same duties and receive the same compensation as is required and provided for the sheriff of Sangamon county, until otherwise provided by law.

SEC. 23. Nothing of this constitution shall prevent the general assembly from passing such laws in relation to the apprenticeship of minors, during their minority, as may be necessary and proper.

SEC. 24. That the general assembly shall pass all laws necessary to carry into effect the provisions of this constitution.

SEC. 25. Elections of judges of the supreme and circuit courts shall be subject to be contested.

SEC. 26. Contested elections of judges of the supreme court shall be tried by the senate, and of judges of the circuit court by the supreme court, and the general assembly shall prescribe the manner of proceeding therein.

Done in convention at the capital, in the city of Springfield, on the thirty-first day of August, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and forty-seven, and of the Independence of the United States of America, the seventy-second.

ALPHABETICAL LIST

OF THE

POST OFFICES IN ILLINOIS,

ARRANGED BY COUNTIES,

Together with the Rates of Postage.

The Postage on Letters, to be forwarded in the Mails to any part of the United States, is Three Cents per half ounce, PRE-PAID by Stamps.

The Postage on dropped Letters is Two Cents per half ounce, PRE-PAID by Stamps.

Transient Newspapers, Pamphlets, Proof-Sheets, Book-Manuscripts, Samples, Sample-Cards, Photograph Cards, Maps, Blanks, Blank Paper, Engravings, Envelopes, Seeds, Roots, Scions, and printed matter, (except circulars and books), will be rated at Two Cents for every four ounces, or fraction thereof, PRE-PAID by Stamps.

Double the above rates will be charged for Books.

Unsealed Circulars, not exceeding three in number, shall pass at the single rate of Two Cents, and in that proportion for a greater number, adding one rate for three Circulars, or less number thereof, directed to one address.

Letters to Canada and the British Provinces, Ten Cents per half ounce, pre-payment optional. Newfoundland, Ten Cents per half ounce, must be pre-paid by Stamps.

Letters to the President of the United States, to any Cabinet Officer, or head of Bureau, Civil, Military or Naval, (except official communications, written and franked by an officer responsible thereto,) must be pre-paid.

Suggestions to the Public.

Post all letters and other mail matter as early as practicable before the advertised closing hours of the Mails. This is necessary to give time to face, assort and stamp the letters, and also to avoid the risk of mistakes likely to occur in a hurried distribution.

Direct letters in a clear, legible hand, giving the name of the Post Office, County and State, in full. There are hundreds of instances in which the names of offices, when written carelessly, closely resemble each other. For example: in Illinois we have PERU, PERA, PANA and PEORIA. If the county were always given, the risk of mistaking one of these for the other would be avoided. The frequent miscarriage of letters is also largely attributable to writing the wrong State, and to abbreviating the name of the State. Be sure to give the State correctly, and write it in full. Give the full name of the person addressed, with residence, street and number, when known.

See that your letters are securely sealed before depositing in the Post Office. Attach the postage stamp on the upper right hand corner in all cases, pressing the envelope and stamp between the thumb and finger until they firmly adhere. Avoid wetting the stamp too much; the gummed side need be merely moistened.

Valuable letters should ALWAYS BE REGISTERED. If this does not add security while in transit, it effectually prevents letters from falling into the hands of wrong parties after reaching their destination.

Abingdon.

An incorporated city of Cedar township, is situated in the south-west part of Knox county, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, one hundred and seventy-eight miles north-east of Quincy. It was laid out by Mr. A. D. Swarts, in the month of May, 1836, since which time there have been several additions to the original town.

The city contains two colleges and three common schools, which are well attended. "Abingdon College," located in the southern part of the city, was erected in the year 1855, at a cost of about $14,000. The building is of brick, on stone foundation, 40x60 feet; three stories high. This Institution has been gradually growing in public favor since the time of its incorporation, in 1855, up to the present day. It has an excellent corps of professors, at the head of which stands Pres. J. W. Butler, who has occupied his present position since the death of Pres. P. H. Murphey, in the year 1860.

"Hedding Seminary and Central Illinois' Female College," stands in the north-east part of the city, on a beautiful eminence, which gives a delightful view of the surrounding country, for the dietance of many miles. The building was erected in the year 1856, at a cost of $12,000.

There is also a third, known as "Cherry Grove Seminary," situated about one mile almost due north of the square.

Of benevolent societies, there are Lodge No. 185 of A. F. and A. Masons, and Lodge No. 184 of I. O. of Odd Fellows, and Pleasant Plains, Lodge No. 183, I. O. of Good Templars. The Widows' and Orphans' Fund of the O. F. Lodge amounts to $350, besides a beneficial fund of $1,000, both of which are constantly accumulating.

Of the religious denominations, the most numerous are the Christian (or Disciples), the Congregational, the Episcopal Methodist, and the Protestant Methodist, all of whom have regular worship.

The Educational Magazine, a monthly periodical, devoted to physical, intellectual, and moral improvement, edited by Pres. J. W. Butler and Prof. A. J. Thomson, of Abingdon College, is now in its first volume, and bids fair to become a popular sheet.

The surrounding country is unsurpassed for the productiveness of its soil. Corn, wheat, and oats are the principal grains raised for export, vast quanties of which are shipped yearly to Chicago and other markets.

In easy access to the city are immense beds of coal, which have been opened and are now being worked. Coal is furnished to the citizens at ten cents per bushel, delivered. As to timber, there is an abundant supply easily procured.

The following are the names of some of the early settlers of Abingdon, furnished by Dennis Clark, Esq., a gentleman who assisted in laying out the town lots in 1836. Those in italics have since died:

ABINGDON COLLEGE

Was chartered in February, 1855, and empowered to confer all degrees usually conferred by similar institutions. It is located in Abingdon, Knox county, Illinois, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, which intersects the Peoria, Oquawka and Burlington

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs, Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

Railroad, ten miles north of Abingdon, at Galesburg, giving direct railroad communication with all parts of the country.

Abingdon is situated on one of the highest points between the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers, surrounded by gently undulating prairies and dense forests—is pre-eminently a healthy location, and has long been celebrated for its high-toned morality.

An experience of nine years has served to confirm the founders and friends of the Institution in their early impression that mixed schools, under proper regulations, have decided advantages over either male or female colleges. The sexes exercise a refining, restraining, yet stimulating influence over each other, when associated in the same school, and in the same class, which nothing else can supply; and here they vie with each other for the wreath of honor, as they labor side by side in a common cause.

Both male and female are thoroughly instructed, not only in the college courses, but they are prepared in the Institution by a thorough drilling in the primary studies to enter these several courses. Students enjoy superior advantages by pursuing their preparatory studies here, but when this is not convenient, or desirable, there is no arbitrary age, or stage of advancement at which applicants can be received into the Institution. All will be classified according to their proficiency.

Degrees.

The studies included in the scientific, female collegiate, and classical courses, are distributed into departments or schools. A student may study the branches included in either department, and if he stands an approved examination on them and pays three dollars, he will receive a certificate of graduation signed by the President and Professor of said department.

When a young gentleman shall have passed through all the departments of the Scientific Course, and obtained certificates from them, he will be entitled to the degree of Bachelor of Science. When a young lady shall have passed through all the departments of the Female Collegiate Course, and obtained the certificates given in that course, she will be entitled to the degree of Mistress of English Literature. When young gentlemen shall have passed through all the departments of the Classical Course, they will be entitled to the degree of Bachelor of Arts. The degree of Master of Arts will be conferred on such Bachelors of three years' standing as have during that time distinguished themselves for usefulness in some of the learned professions, or are deemed worthy of such distinction.

Alton

Is an important and flourishing post city and port of entry in the western part of Madison county. It is situated in latitude north 38° 20' on the left bank of the Mississippi River, three miles above the mouth of the Missouri, and twenty miles below the Illinois River. Distance from Chicago, 256 miles.

The "Town of Alton" was laid out by Col. Rufus Easton, of St. Charles, Missouri, in the year 1818. Two or three log cabins only had previously been erected. In July, 1837, the Legislature passed an act to incorporate the "City of Alton," and in September of the same year the first election of city officers was held.

The first steamboat that ever passed above the mouth of the Missouri was called the "Western Engineer," and landed at Alton, on the 8th of July, 1820. It was attached to Col. S. H. Long's scientific expidition, which went up the Missouri in 1819.

As a point for manufacturing, Alton has no superior on the western waters. It is built upon solid limestone, famous for the manufacture of lime of the very best quality, and for producing a building material but little inferior to marble, and as durable as granite. With beds of the finest fire-clay for earthenware and drain pipes, it has also abundance of clay for brick. Inexhaustible mines of bituminous coal underlie the whole country north and east of the city; and in the forests near are found all kinds of wood and timber for fuel, building or manufacturing purposes.

Alton has become renowned for its fine orchards, vineyards and gardens. There is a Horticultural Society established here, which embraces among its members some of the most scientific fruit-growers in the State.

By the Alton & Terre Haute Railroad and the Alton & Chicago Road, the city is placed in connection with the great net-work of Railways throughout the Union. There is a daily line of packets between St. Louis and Alton, which has become the great shipping point for the produce of Central Illinois.

Alton has ten churches, two daily and three weekly newspapers. The various orders of Free Masonry, Odd Fellowship and Good Templars have organizations. The Alton Bank is the only institution of issue in the city. The Alton Mutual Insurance & Savings Company and the Alton Building & Savings Company, are, also, banks of deposit. The Illinois Mutual Fire Insurance Company, with its five hundred agencies, and with a capital and assets amounting to over one and a half million of dollars, has its home office located in Alton. There are several splendid foundries and machine shops in successful operation; also flouring mills, breweries, and one wollen factory. The Penitentiary was located here in 1827. The prisoners were moved to the new Penitentiary at Joliet in 1857. The old buildings and yard in Alton are now occupied by the Government as a Military Prison. It is now called "Bluff Castle," being located upon the high bluff north of the landing.

The educational facilities of Alton are nowhere surpassed. In addition to Shurtleff College, in Upper Alton, Monticello Female Seminary, four miles north, and a number of private and select schools, it has a complete system of graded public schools, under the direction of a Board of Education and Superintendent.

The City Building, on Market Square, contains the Market, Council Chamber, rooms for the city officers, jail and a public hall, 50 by 90 feet. The Alton City Court also occupies this building for its sessions. The hall will accommodate 1,000 persons. The whole structure was erected at a cost of about $40,000. In the eastern part of the city a commodious city hospital and workhouse is now being erected. The public cemetery, in the same neighborhood, is a model of good taste and beauty.

Alton has an excellent Fire Department. The apparatus belonging to the Hook & Ladder Company is said to be superior to any in the State. The principal streets are McAdamized and lighted with gas.

In approaching the city from the south, by river, the traveler is struck with its singularly beautiful and picturesque location. The present population is estimated at about 12,000.

Amboy.

An important incorporated village of Lee county, on the main line of the Illinois Central Railroad, 104 miles by railroad, west from Chicago. It is situated in the midst of a rich and productive rolling prairie country, and is the centre of a large and rapidly increasing trade. The first settlement was made here in 1854, the railroad was completed to this point in 1855, and the place incorporated in 1857. It has now a population of 2,500, and is steadily increasing. It has four churches, a lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows, a graded school, a weekly newspaper, the Times, two flour mills, a distillery, three wagon manufacturers, and a proportionate number of trades and professions.

This is the central station of the "Northern" or "Centralia and Dunleith Division" of the Illinois Centrol Railroad, and is the residence of the division superintendent, and location of the company's repair shops, etc. The railroad machine shops, to the location of which the place owes a large share of its prosperity, are very extensive, and give employment to about 150 hands. Machinery is kept here for the manufacture and repair of any and all parts of locomotives, cars, etc.

Every description of work required in the construction and repair of the rolling stock of the road can be executed at these works. Merchandise is received via the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy, and the Illinois Central railroad.

Ashley.

Is an incorporated post town in the eastern part of Washington county, on the Illinois Central Railroad, 99 miles north of Cairo, and 266 miles south of Chicago, and is the most prominent business point between Centralia and DuQuoin.

The State road leading from St. Louis, Missouri, to Shawneetown, Illinois, passes through the town, also the new railroad, (not yet completed,) leading from St. Louis, Missouri, to Louisville, Kentucky.

Ashley was laid out by Dr. James M. Lucas, in April, 1854. The first sale of lots was on the 11th day of May, the same year. The first house was built soon after by John M. Hunter. Quite a number were built the same year. The first six settlers were John M. Hunter, Truman Gilbert, Green Middleton, P. W. McNail, L. B. Morrow, and E. McNail. The first white child born in the town was Henry Clay Hunter. The first death, Mrs. Mary Shoemake.

The town was incorporated in the year 1859, under the general incorporation laws of the State. The town officers consist of five town trustees, elected annually, one police magistrate, elected every four years, one town constable, and one street commissioner.

The country surrounding the town is about half prairie and half timbered land of a gently undulating surface, thickly settled with a prosperous class of farmers.

The lands produce wheat, oats, tobacco and grass abundantly, but are not so good for corn as the lands farther north. Those who devote their lands to grass, and stock realize the largest returns from the capital employed.

All the fruits of temperate climate succeed well, and especially the apple, pear, peach, cherry and small fruits. No doubt this branch of horticulture will eventually become a permanent business here.

Stone of an excellent quality is procured near the town for building purposes, and also oak timber. Stone coal abounds, but has received little attention.

There are at present two large flouring mills and one saw mill in operation, also one woolen factory, three wagon, and one plow (Sibert's patent gang plow) manufactories in full operation, 9 merchandising firms, two hotels, two large lumber yards, and no whisky saloons. There is one large school house, accommodating from 150 to 200 scholars. One Methodist Episcopal Church, also societies of Baptists, Presbyterians, and Congregationalists. One Masonic Lodge, Clay No. 153, meets every 2d and 4th Monday in each month. One Odd Fellows Lodge, Ashley No. 3, meets every Saturday evening. Emblem of peace, Lodge No. 181, Good Templars, meets every Tuesday evening.

Ashley has ready access to the following markets, viz: Chicago north, Cairo south, St. Louis west, and Cincinnati east, all by railroad.

The town is now rapidly improving, and will always be the central business point for a large scope of country, being the shipping and receiving point for all the towns in the surrounding counties. Population about 1,200.

Audubon,

A township and small post village in the north-east corner of Montgomery county, south of the Terre Haute, Alton & St. Louis Railroad, via which it is 88 miles east from St. Louis.

Augusta,

An incorporate post village in a township of the same name, situated in the south-east part of Hancock county, on the line of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 231 miles south-west from Chicago, and 37 miles north-east from Quincy. It is surrounded by beautiful rolling prairies of rich, productive soil, well watered and interspersed with groves of good timber. Coal is obtained from the neighboring mines, and large quantities shipped to Quincy and Keokuk. There is also here a species of potter's clay used in the manufacture of brown earthen ware, pronounced by the State Geologist to be of the best quality found in the State.

Among the first settlers in the vicinity of Augusta were Messrs. Alexander Denney, Wm. D. Abernathy, Samuel Haggert, Joel Catlin (now of Jacksonville), George W. Hawley, Henry D. Fonda, Wm. M. Dexter, Horace Mead and Jonathan Mead, who immigrated in 1832–3. The town was laid out during the winter of 1835–6, and shortly after Rufus Hawley, Rev. Milton Kemble (now of Clayton), and others settled here. Wm. D. Abernathy, Samuel B. Mead, M. D., and Joel Catlin were the original proprietors of the land where the village now stands. (The above names in italics are those who have since died.)

The township now has a population of about 2,600, and village about 1,200. It has three churches, Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian (brick edifice), and one graded school of about 250 scholars, under the management of five teachers, of which Mr. G. W. Batchelder is principal. There are eight public schools in the township, with an attendance of about 500 scholars.

Considerable pork is packed in this place during the season, and a large number of cattle and hogs are shipped, principally to Chicago. The cultivation and manufacture of sorghum is successfully carried on by farmers in this vicinity.

The town is governed by a Board of Trustees: President—H. A. Young. Trustees—Henry G. Dearborn, M D.; A. J. Winfield; G. W. Leach; A. J. Short.

Societies.—J. L. Anderson Lodge No. 318, A. F. and A. M.; meets Saturday after each full moon. Augusta Division Sons of Temperance No. 580; meets each Monday evening.

Aurora.

A flourishing city in the south-east part of Kane county, forty miles west-south-west of Chicago, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. It is situated on both sides of the Fox River, which has a substantial dam across it, affording excellent water power for manufacturing purposes. The land on both sides rises gradually to a height of from 60 to 70 feet. It is spread over an area of about six square miles, affording the greatest abundance of building sites, being, though rolling and un. even, yet not broken, and very little low and marshy. The south-east corner and northern part on both sides are somewhat timbered, and large numbers of the original forest oaks still grace the east side, making it look like a garden, especially from the cupola of Clark Seminary, which everybody ought to visit. On the west side, South River street is one of the most sylvan looking streets in the West. Water of the purest kind is found by digging from twelve to twenty feet, and in the bluffs, on both sides of the river, a thousand springs of soft water, clear as crystal and delicious to drink, gush forth, enough to supply the largest city in the world. By the aid of hydraulic rams, they are made to supply, through leaden pipes, the round-house and almost the entire business portion of the east side, and a reservoir to supply the railroad on the west side. Aurora contains two good-sized parks, one on each side of the river, wisely reserved by the original founders on the east side, and purchased by the corporation on the west side, when the City Charter was applied for. Both are well enclosed. The one on the east side has been planted with ornamental trees; and the one on the west side has some native trees left.

Aurora has nine church edifices—the Congregational (an ornament to the city, built of stone, in a half Gothic style, and frescoed inside,) two Methodist Churches—one on each side of the river; two Baptist Churches—also one on each side of the river; one Universalist Church; one German Lutheran Church; one Episcopal Church, and a Roman Catholic edifice. It also contains two good school houses—one on each side of the River—and Clark Seminary, a first-class Educational Institution.

There is as much life and business in Aurora as in any other city of its size in the West. It contains at present a population of 9,000.

In the autumn of 1833, a young man by the name of Joseph McCarty, a millwright by trade, from Elmira, New York, descended the Ohio River, and spent a part of the winter in the South. In the Spring, he ascended the Illinois River on a tour of "prospecting." He found the points he had thought of already occupied, and moved on up the valley of the Fox River, and in April, 1834, arrived at the Indian village of Wau-bon-sie and his tribe, on the west bank of Fox River, just north of where Aurora is now situated, and on what is called the McNamara farm. Here he found a swift river, and an island facilitating the building of a dam, and with Robert Faracre and John Barsley, a youth whom he had brought with him as an apprentice, he "drove stakes," by erecting a log cabin 14 by 16 feet. This was built on the east side, where he claimed about 360 acres. He subsequently built one on the west side, where Dunning's block now stands, to hold his claim on that side, which was about 100 acres. Having secured lands and tenements, the next thing in order was a dam and a saw mill.

In these labors were the summer and autumn of 1834 consumed.

The first sawing done in this mill (the first on Fox River) was done for Mr. Wormley, who made a claim near Oswego, in 1834.

R. C. Horr also came that year, and was elected justice of the peace the following year, being the first justice created in the place.

The McCartys and the Higginses built the first two frame houses.

The first death was that of Miss Elmira Graves, a young lady brought by her friends, a consumptive from her home by the side of Lake Champlain, who died late in the fall of 1835.

The original plat of Aurora (east side of the river) was laid out in 1835 by Samuel McCarty, the proprietor.

The dam across Fox River was completed in that year, and Zaphna Lake bought the water power, with McCarthy's claim on the west side, for $500. He built two saw mills before the close of 1837, the last of which was removed to make room for the Black Hawk Mills, which were erected in 1842—R. C. Mix, builder.

In the fall of 1835, and during the whole summer of 1836, the immigration to this point was very considerable.

The first flour mill was built in 1836, by the McCarty brothers and Robert Miller.

In 1836, there were two school houses built —one on each side.

Now they must have a postoffice—and what to call it? A great many names were suggested, some after persons, and some old Indian titles, (the Indians had just been removed.) At last, E. D. Terry suggested the beautiful and classic name which the city now bears, and which was adopted. It is said that "there's nothing in a name;" but it would be well for her citizens to consider the beautiful signification of the name of the city (a rising light), and labor to make it really worthy of the title.

There was no house for religious purposes up to 1837. The first sermon was preached in 1838, by one Wm. Rounsville.

The Presbyterian Church was early organized here, and the Methodist came next.

In 1843, P. A. Hall, since Superintendent of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, arrived in Aurora. B. F. and M. V. Hall, his two brothers, arrived the year it was built, and commenced the publication of The Aurora Weekly Beacon, a neutral paper of six columns, on the 1st of June, 1847.

In the year 1848, a movement took place to obtain a railroad from Aurora to the junction with the Chicago & Galena Road, which was happily effected and opened in 1851, affording great facilities of transit from this district, and adding much to its prosperity.

Beds of limestone underlie the city. Of this stone there are two kinds: one is quarried for building purposes, and the other familiarly known as "horse-bone lime," containing unmirable fossils, is burned in two kilns. There is a bed of excellent brick clay on the east side, and sand is found in many places. There are many remains of the great flood, which is known as "the drift period," in the shape of boulders of various sizes. They are sometimes pure granite; at others, conglomerate, and sometimes of quite curious composition.

Direct railroad communication was opened from Aurora to the Mississippi, in 1855.

Theodore Lake laid out the village of West Aurora, in 1842.

During the latter part of the winter of 1847, and agreeably to the expressed wish of two corporations, Hon. Wm. R. Parker, then Representative in the Legislature, procured the passage of an act incorporating them as a city, by the name of the "City of Aurora." The first municipal election was held on the first Tuesday of March following.

Since the incorporation, Aurora has carried on, steadily, a system of internal improvements, highly beneficial to the citizens.

Avery.

A postoffice in Guilford township, Jo Daviess county, about ten miles south-west of Galena.

Aviston.

A township and post village in Clinton county, about thirty-five miles east of St. Louis, via Ohio and Mississippi Railway.

Avon.

An incorporated village, situated in the north-west corner of Fulton county, on the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, 180 miles south-west from Chicago, and about 200 miles from St. Louis, Missouri, thereby making it a central point for marketing both north and south.

It was first settled by four brothers, by the name of Woods, in the year 1836, soon after which a post-office was established.

It has now a population of about 900, and contains two churches, two high schools, a lodge of Good Templars, Rose of Sharon, No. 163; 7 dry goods stores, three flouring mills, with a capacity of 150 barrels per day, etc. Is surrounded by good farming and grazing lands on the west, south and east, while it is skirted on the north by the timber lands of Cedar Creek, at a distance of 1½ miles, in the bluffs of which are found bituminous and cannel coal, together with an abundant supply of building stone. The shipment of live stock from this place will compare favorably with that of any other station on the line of this Railroad, while its situation and natural facilities are not surpassed by any of its neighboring towns.

Basco.

A post village in Bear Creek township, Hancock county, about 243 miles from Chicago, via Plymouth, on the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad.

Batavia,

A pleasantly located village of Kane county, containing a population of about 2,000. The first settler here was Christopher Payne, in the year 1833. Immigration commenced in the following year, and this point became attractive to many, among whom may be mentioned Mr. Latham, Col. Lyon, Messrs. Vandeventer, Howe, McKee and Risk, E. S. Town, Wm. Van Nortwick, John Van Nortwick and J. W. Churchill, Esqrs.

This village is situated on rising ground, on both sides of the Fox River, which, at this place, furnishes most excellent advantages of water power. The railroad connecting Aurora at the Junction, on the G., & C. U. R. R., passes through the place, and the Dixon Air Line about three miles north of it. It has five churches and two large and elegant public school buildings.

A very large paper mill is located in this village, which manufactures, by a patented process, an excellent quality of print paper from straw, together with the usual styles of rag paper. A large carriage manufactory, two flour mills, a saw mill, several lime kilns, and numerous mechanical shops are also located here. A very beautiful species of cream-colored limestone, extensively used for building purposes, is quarried in the vicinity, and is largely shipped to different parts of the State. There is an excellent hotel, together with several stores, etc. Distance from Chicago, 35 miles west.

Bay City,

A postoffice in Jefferson township, Pope county, on the Ohio River.

Beardstown,

A thriving city and the capital of Cass county, is situated on the left bank of the Illinois River, 139 miles north of St. Louis, Mo., and 92 miles south of Peoria, and has a population of 3,000. It was settled about the year 1825, by Thomas Beard, and, growing rapidly, it was, for many years, the most important grain and meat shipping market between St. Louis and Chicago. It is situated upon a high sandy bank, surrounded by rich bottom lands, highly cultivated. It is upon a railroad in course of construction, connecting it with St. Louis and Rock Island. It has, on either side of the river, immense beds of bituminous coal, and large quantities of timber, which, together with the productions of its rich bottom lands, form its principle articles of export upon the Illinois River.

The principal buildings consist of a court house, public school, and eight church edifices, two flouring mills, two saw mills, one iron foundry, and three hotels, one of which, the Park House, is one of the best in the State. There is one weekly newspaper published here, The Central Illinoisan.

The general appearance of Beardstown is far above the average of river towns. Many of its business houses are of large size, modern style, and built of brick. The streets are wide and well shaded with trees. The dwelling houses are generally neat and cottage like, surrounded with beautiful gardens and lawns, while some of them are noted for the elegance and refined taste of their structure. Stages connect it with railroads at Jacksonville, a distance of 25, and Springfield, 45 miles, and a line of packets arrive and depart daily, north and south.

Belleville.

The city of Belleville is situated upon a gently rising eminence near the centre of St. Clair county, and is surrounded by one of the most fertile and productive regions in the State, from which it derives a great commercial business, and has become the largest city in Southern Illinois.

The town was settled about the year 1800, and in 1814 became the capital of St. Clair county.

The town was incorporated in 1819, and became an incorporated city in 1850. It is connected with St. Louis, 16 miles distant, and the Mississippi River, by the St. Louis and Murfreysboro Railway, and a McAdamized road. These two speedy and cheap public roads have placed the city for business purposes on the bank of the river. Coal was discovered in the vicinity of Belleville, about the year 1820, but no coal mine was opened till 1825. Since that time it has been found that the whole southern part of the State is a coal field, and coal mining has become the most important business of this community. There are twenty-three coal mines worked near Belleville, and the average amount of coal conveyed daily to East St. Louis, is 16,500 bushels. Adjacent to the city are vineyards, to the amount of about 60 acres, for which the soil is well adapted. The new court house, completed here in 1862, at a cost of $100,000, is one of the finest in the State. Belleville has free schools, where about 1,200 children are educated. A female academy has been recently established by the Roman Catholic Society. The building is large and commodious, three stories high and built of brick. The city contains one daily and five weekly newspapers, ten churches, with the usual variety of denominations, two banks, thirty-five stores, which are estimated to do a business of $400,000 yearly, four lumber yards, which do a business of $175,000, four steam flouring mills, which manufacture yearly about 400,000 barrels of flour, most of which is shipped directly east. Three large distilleries run day and night, four malt factories manufacture $50,000 worth of malt yearly, and eight breweries produce 30,500 barrels of ale and beer. There are in the city about twenty hotels, seven large carpenter shops, one woolen factory, thirteen wagon shops, and three carriage manufactories, two iron and brass foundries, three door and sash factories, and many other mechanic shops of different kinds. The health of the city is excellent, and water abundant and pure. These, with coal, good soil, and wealthy agricultural country in all directions, must, in a few years, make Belleville a great manufacturing place. Population, 10,000.

Bloomington,

A flourishing city and the capital of McLean county, is pleasantly situated on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, one mile and a half south-west of its intersection with the Illinois Central, and 125 miles south-west from Chicago. It is beautifully located in the border of Blooming Grove, on a high rolling site, and elegantly laid out. The surrounding country is rich in groves of trees, fine residences and farms, with the richest soil for the production of everything conducive to the wants and even the luxuries of life.

A little more than thirty years since the spot on which Bloomington stands was a wild, unbroken prairie. It was purchased from the United States Government by James Allin, Sen., who is still a resident of the city. At the session of the Illinois Legilsature, 1830–31, he succeeded in getting a bill passed for the then new county of McLean, with such boundaries as to make this spot the most feasible for the county seat. When the Commissioners came on to lay off the new county, Mr. Allin proposed to donate to the county about thirty acres for the county seat, which proposition was accepted and the town located.

A public sale took place on the 4th of July, 1831, at which time a large number of lots were disposed of, at prices varying from $5 to $50. This was the first celebration of the glorious fourth ever held in Bloomington.

The courts were first held in a small room in one end of Mr. Allin's house, who also kept the first store when many of his customers were Indians. He also built the first brick building in the town.

In 1850, the citizens thought it expedient to have a city organization. To get a city charter required a population of at least 1,500 inhabitants. The census was taken, and the town found to contain 1,611 souls, whereupon a charter was obtained, and the requisite officers elected.

To the building of the two railroads (which intersect each other at this point) may be mostly attributed the recent rapid growth of this city. It is true that the place was in a healthy growing condition prior to their commencement; but not until they were commenced and completed did it assume the rapid growth and importance which it has attained.

The surveys for the Illinois Central Railroad commenced at this point in 1851. In the spring of 1852 the work commenced, and in

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs, Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

June, 1853, the cars were running south to this point.

In the spring of 1852, the surveys for the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad were made through this county, and in the fall of the same year the work commenced thereon near this place. In the fall of 1853, the cars were running from Springfield here, and in the spring of 1854, the road was completed through from Alton to Joliet, making a complete and speedy connection between St. Louis and Chicago. This being the best and most central point on the road, the Company decided to establish their machine shops and offices here, which have been, and still are, of very great advantage to the city; bringing, as they have, a large and valuable class of citizens, and employing over 500 hands as conductors, engineers, machinists, laborers, &c.

On either side of the city are the depot buildings of the Illinois Central, eastward, and the Chicago & Alton Railroad westward. About midway between the Depots there are several fine blocks of brick buildings, among which is the "Ashley House" so widely known as a most elegantly furnished and liberally conducted hotel. It is situated adjacent to the business portion of the city, four stories high and lighted with gas. There are several manufacturing establishments located here, all of which carry on an extensive and thriving business.

Situated in the midst of so rich an agricultural district and beingeasy of access by different lines of tranrportation. Bloomington naturally enjoys the advantages of a flourishing trade. Many of their Merchants are engaged in the wholesale jobbing trade as will be seen in the list of business houses following this sketch.

Within five miles of Bloomington there are over 500 acres of fruit and ornamental nurseries. F. K. Phœnix, Esq., has the largest nurseries in the west, comprising all varieties of fruit and ornamental trees grown with success in this latitude. Messrs. Mann & Overmann have an excellent assortment, though not so extensive.

There are also several fine vineyards in this vicinity. Dr. H. Schroeder and R. H. Fell are now and have been for some time past successfully testing the adaptability of the soil in this locality for grape culture.

Educational.—The Illinois Wesleyan College, Rev. O. S. Munsell, D. D., President; Bloomington Female College, G. Thayer, A. M., Principal, Bloomington Female Seminary, Rev. R. Conover, principal, are all excellent institutions, each under the charge of an able and efficient corps of teachers.

State Normal University.—The accompanying cut conveys a very accurate idea of the noble building appropriated to the purposes of this Institution. The main part of the edifice is 86 ft. long by 75 ft. wide; and each of the wings is 100 ft. long by 32 ft. wide; hence, the total length of the building, from east to west, is 150 ft. The structure is very symmetrical; the north and south fronts are precisely alike, as are the wing fronts on the east and west.

The building stands in the northern part of an enclosure, containing about 50 acres. It is situated a few rods from the Junction Station of the Illinois Central, and the St. Louis, Alton & Chicago Railroads. All of the enclosure is laid out as a park, and is rapidly filling with trees and shrubbery. The Institution also owns 100 acres of fine prairie land, which approaches on the west within about 40 rods from the enclosure just mentioned, but on the other side of the county road leading to Bloomington. The distance from the Institution to the city is about one mile and a half.

The object of this Institution is well set forth in the following extract from the Act of the Legislature creating it. "Sec. 4. "The object of said Normal University shall be to qualify teachers for the common schools of this State, by imparting instruction in the art of teaching, in all branches of study which pertain to a common school education,—in the elements of natural sciences, including agricultural chemistry, animal and vegetable physiology,—in the fundamental laws of the United States and of the State of Illinois, in regard to the rights and duties of citizens, and such other studies as the Board of Education may from time to time prescribe."

The current expenses are met by the interest of the University Fund which was borrowed by the State, several years since. The yearly income is something over $10,000. Each county in the State is entitled to gratuitous instruction for two students, and each State Representative District for a number of students equal to its representation in the House. As the building is designed to accommodate 300 Normal Students, and as several counties have not fully availed themselves of the privileges of the school, the Principal is allowed to admit some students at his discretion, for the present. All persons entering the Normal Department are obliged to certify their intention to become teachers. The full course of study embraces three years; and it is not expected that any student will enter for a shorter period than one year. The Academic year begins about the first Monday in September.

Model School.—The object of this Department, in which there are accommodations for 300 students, is to afford the Normal Scholars an opportunity both to see, day by day, a school such as it should be, and also to take part in the instruction under the eye and advice of their own teachers. It is therefore both, a model and an experimental school. It contains four grades, viz.: Primary, Intermediate, Grammar and High; and its course of study embraces a full range from the elements to a preparation either for business or for college. The time necessary to complete the full High School course is four years.

STATE NORMAL UNIVERSITY, BLOOMINGTON, ILLINOIS.

Students from abroad pay a tuition fee; those residing in the district enjoy the advantages of the school, as the funds of the district are used for its support. In this school, three experienced teachers find constant employment; the remainder of the instruction is given by members of the senior classes in the Normal Department.

HISTORY.—The Normal University of Illinois was created Feb. 18, 1857, by an Act of the Legislature. The interest of the University fund was set apart for its support with the express provision, that no portion of the income should be used in procuring or erecting buildings, but that it should be established in that town or city which should contribute most liberally for its accommodation, provided the proposed situation was not objectionable. The city of Bloomington, McLean County, and individuals contributed lands and other property, valued at $140,000, and the Institution was fixed in its present location, during the summer of 1857. Work began at once on the building.

Charles E. Hovey of Peoria was elected Principal, and the school began Oct. 5, 1857, in rooms hired for that purpose in the city of Bloomington. The financial crisis, which immediately followed, caused a suspension of the work on the building for more than a year. At length, extraordinary difficulties having been surmounted, the house was so far completed, that the school opened in its rooms, at the beginning of its Fourth year, in the Fall of 1860. During one year more its first Principal remained at its head, and its numbers and influence steadily increased. But in the summer of 1861, Mr. Hovey was commisioned as Colonel of the 33d Regiment of Illinois Volunteers, and four of the Faculty and more than half of the male students accompanied him to the field. In the following September, the school commenced its Fifth year, under the management of Perkins Bass, Esq., of Chicago, as Acting Principal. At the close of this year, Richard Edwards of the St. Louis Normal School was chosen Principal, which post he still holds.

During the first term of the present year, the number of students in all Departments of the Institution was 438, having increased steadily since the interruption in the summer of 1861.

The graduates and other students of the school are extensively scattered over the State, engaged in the work for which the commonwealth by its liberality and wisdom, has fitted them; and this young Institution bids fair to accomplish the great good its friends have hoped and expected from it. The following are the names of the present

Faculty.

Bushnell,

A thriving post town of Prairie City township, in McDonough county, on the Chicago & Quincy Railrord, 195 miles from Chicago, and 71 from Quincy. It was laid out in 1854, and is situated on a beautiful rolling prairie of unsurpassed fertility. As the county filled up, the town increased in size and importance, until at present there are 1,500 inhabitants. It contains three churches, viz.: Dutch Reformed, Methodist Episcopal and German Methodist—twenty-two business houses, a steam flouring mill, a large steam grain elevator, and several smaller grain houses. It has also a Masonic Lodge (T. J. Pickel) No. 307.

The shipments from this place were, for the year 1862, over 400,000 bushels of grain and 325 car loads of live stock. Coal and building material abound in the vicinity. During the year 1863, 70 buildings were erected, and yet the supply is not equal to the demand. The town is becoming one of the most flourishing and active in this section of the State.

Cahokia.

An old French settlement, situated in the American bottom in St. Clair county, ten miles north of west from Belleville.

Cairo. Alexander

The most important city of Southern Illinois, situated in the extreme southern part of the state on the point of land at the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers. Owing to its favorable location as a shipping point, Cairo has for many years attracted the attention of capitalists, and several attempts have been made to establish here a great commercial city; until a few years since, however, owing to the lowness of the situation and to its frequent inandation, together with the unhealthfulness of the climate, all efforts to build up the place had proved abortive. As early as 1818 a company was organized and a charter obtained from the Territorial Government granting certain privileges to the corporators, who laid out a magnificent city here, (on paper), but never succeeded in carrying out their designs beyond the erection of a few miserable shanties. The "Eden" of Dicken's "Martin Chuzzlewitt" is acknowledged to have been a tolerably fair representation of the Cairo of that early day.

In 1837 another company, nothing daunted by the fate of its predecessor, obtained a charter under the title of the "Cairo City and Canal Co.", but after three or four years of fruitless effort, during which time they partially constructed a levee and erected many buildings, they were obliged to suspend operations and abandon the enterprise as a failure. Notwithstanding these unsuccessful attempts the naturally commanding situation of the place,—evidently designed by nature for the location of a large city, continued to attract the attention of capitalists, and in 1853 the location was purchased by an association formed under the title of the "Cairo City Property Co." This company, profiting by the experience of the former proprietors, commenced operations with the determination to succeed. In the spring of 1853 the first lot was sold by this company, though for several years they devoted more attention to the permanent improvement of the place than to the sale of lots. The buildings erected by the previous companies were cleared away, and the work upon the levee, commenced by the "Canal Co.", was carried to a successful completion by the Ill. Central Railroad Company, under the auspices of the city trustees. The completion of the railroad to this point and the construction of the substantial paved levee, at once gave an impetus to business, and from that date the sale of lots went on briskly and settlers flocked in from all quarters.

The city, as above stated, lies at the confluence of the Ohio and Mississippi Rivers, 175 miles below St. Louis, and 365 miles south from Chicago. It is the seat of justice of Alexandria county, and has a population of nearly 10,000. The ground upon which the city is built is entirely of alluvial formation, and is protected from inundation by a substantial levee fronting upon both rivers, but cutting off about 10,000 acres of land at the extreme point, a great proportion of which is covered at high water. The city plat forms nearly a perfect triangle, about two miles in length and same distance across the widest part. In size the lots are 25 feet front by 100 deep, and at the present time (1864) range in price from $250 to $750 for residence, and with scarcely any limit for business purposes. Along the Ohio Levee, for upwards of a mile, there is an unbroken line of business houses, while stores and dwellings are rapidly filling up the streets in the centre of the city. At the lower end of the Ohio Levee, the St. Charles Hotel, costing $60,000, and deemed a monument of folly at the time of its erection, is now entirely inadequate to the requirements of the city, and numerous other first class hotels are in process of erection. The city now contains a handsome court house, erected at a cost of $30,000, seven churches, a handsome market house, two banking houses, a bank of issue, a convent, two theatres, two daily newspapers (having weekly issues), two lodges each of Masons and Odd Fellows, a ship yard, three iron foundries and machine shops, a saw mill, planing mill, and sash, door and blind factory, a large flour mill (manufacturing about 50,000 bbls. of flour per year) upwards of a dozen hotels, and a large number of wholesale and retail business houses, etc., a full alphabetical list of which will be found below. The "Sisters of Loretto," a charitable Catholic society, have now in process of erection a large and beautiful convent and seminary, to cost upwards of $35,000, the ground having been generously donated by the City Property Co. The Illinois Central Railroad Co. has just commenced the erection of an immense passenger station, with hotel combined, designed to be the largest and most elegant structure of the kind in the United States. The important work of filling up the streets to the level of the levees has already commenced and will be pushed rapidly forward, thus elevating the entire city nearly ten feet, and rendering future indundations almost impossible. Besides the above there are numerous other improvements in progress, among which we may enumerate the extension of the stone pavement on the levee, together with the construction of a substantial plank road along its entire length, the introduction of gas, etc., etc., rendering it, in fact, one of the most progressive and rapidly improving cities to be found on the continent.

WHEELER & WILSON'S Sewing Machines, 106 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The United States Government has a military post here called "Fort Cairo," and since the commencement of the Southern rebellion has maintained a considerable force of soldiers here. It is also a naval station and one of the principal points in the west for the equipment of the river navy. The military and naval occupation of the town has tended greatly to its prosperity and given an impetus to all kinds of trade. At the period of the present writing there is perhaps no more prosperous city in the country, and none that presents greater attractions for the investment of capital and employment of labor. The great natural advantages of its location, commanding, as it does, the navigation of the two great rivers of the continent, and having immediate railroad connection with great commercial centres of the country, are universally acknowledged and now that the local objection of lowness of situation and consequent unhealthfulness has been overcome by the enterprise of its citizens, there is nothing to prevent the city of Cairo from fulfilling its destiny and becoming the great central commercial city of America.

All steamboats ascending and descending the Ohio and Mississippi rivers touch at this point, including the beautiful boats of the "St. Louis and Memphis Packet Co."—A daily line of boats also ply between the city and Paducah, also to Evansville, Columbus, Memphis, and New Orleans, while transient boats arrive and depart almost daily for all points above and below, and for the Cumberland and Tennessee rivers. A railroad is projected through the western counties of "Egypt," to connect with the road at Belleville, for St. Louis, forming almost an air-line road to that city. Another road is also projected to Evansville, and eventually to Cincinnati.

(We will state for the information of persons interested in this city, that full particulars as to price of lots, etc., can be obtained by addressing "S. S. Taylor, Esq., Trustee of City Property Co., Cairo, Ill."

Canton.

A thriving city situated in the north-east part of Fulton county, on sections No. 26, 27, 34 and 35, township 7 north, range 4 east of the fourth principal meridian, in the celebrated "Military Tract." It is very beautifully located about ten miles from the Illinois river, on an arm of high rolling prairie, between fine groves of timber which skirt the banks of Copperas creek on the east, and Big creek on the west. It is on the Lewiston branch of the Peoria & Oquawka Rairoad, and about, 97 miles from Chicago, via. the above and the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad. A railroad extending from Pekin, on the Illinois river, to Warsaw, on the Mississippi—is in course of construction, and already in operation from Warsaw, 20 miles east. The remainder of the line is graded, except some four miles of light work; many of the bridges and culverts are completed; and the prospect of the completion of the road during the present season, (1864,) is very flattering. At Pekin, this road will connect with the Illinois River Railroad, by which passengers may go south to Jacksonville, Springfield, etc., or north and east—via. Peoria; while its western terminus connects with a line of road running through Iowa, and connecting directly with the great Pacific Railway.

Canton is about 200 miles from St. Louis, which, until within the last few years, has been the great emporium for this section of country. It was there that our merchants found a ready market for the immense products of the surrounding country, and purchased their "large and well-selected" stocks of goods. Since the construction of railroads between the east and west, many of the larger stocks of merchandise have been purchased in eastern cities, coming hither principally via. the lakes, and northern railroad routes, and the Illinois canal and river; and since the establishment of railroad communication with Chicago, almost the entire trade which formerly went to St. Louis, now goes to that city.

Nathan Jones was the first settler in this place, having located here in 1825. He continued to reside here till his death, which took place on the 1st of May, 1854. The town was laid out by Mr. Jones and his brother-in-law, Isaac Swan, in 1825. It was incorporated by legislative act in 1849; and in 1853 became a city. It now contains about 3,000 inhabitants, has a number of very fine buildings—both public and private—and is one of the most thriving and pleasant inland towns in the state.

Canton has one of the largest plow factories in the state, turning out several thousand plows annually, (many of which are shipped to California, via. New York;) also, corn cultivators, patent corn stalk cutters, etc., are manufactured here.

It contains an extensive woolen mill, turning out large quantities of first-class goods annually. Also, a foundry and machine shop, manufacturing cane mills and steam engines, and doing all kinds of job work.

There are two flour mills and distilleries combined, and one devoted to flouring and custom grinding alone; all doing good business.

The Methodist and Baptist societies have each fine brick edifices, and the Congregational society is building a church, of which the basement is now completed. The old school Presbyterians have a comfortable frame building. The Lutherans and Church of the New Jerusalem, have each small frame houses. The Roman Catholics completed last season, the neatest and largest frame meeting-house in the city.

Considerable attention has been paid to education, particularly during the last ten years. There are three good public school-houses—two frame and one brick—which latter is one of the largest and finest graded school-houses in the state. It was completed in the fall of 1861. There are also good select schools.

The Masonic Fraternity has a flourishing lodge and chapter. The Odd Fellows have a lodge and encampment, and own the building in which their hall is located. A lodge of Good Templars has also recently been organized under favorable auspices.

There is a public Library containing some 700 or 800 volumes.

Two good weekly newspapers are published here—"The Canton Weekly Register," republican, published on Mondays; and "The Fulton Ledger," democratic, published on Tues days.

The country around Canton is one of the most fertile and best fruit sections in the state. Lumber is abundant, and the whole country is underlaid by a vast bed of excellent bituminous coal. Produce of all kinds finds a ready market at a good price. Owing to these circumstances, it is one of the most desirable locations in the state, for both residence and business.

Carlinville.

The county seat of Macoupin county, situated on the Chicago Alton & St. Louis Railroad, about midway between Alton and Sprinfield, has a population of about 3,000; good free, graded schools, a female academy, and a college for young men — Blackburn Theological Seminary. It has two newspapers, the Free Democrat, edited by Henry M. Kimball, and the Spectator, edited by Flinn & Van Deren. It has six church edifices, some of which are very good buildings, and four good school houses. Coal abounds in the vicinity, and timber plenty. Business good and constantly increasing. There are several manufacturing establishments, stores, etc., with a farming community sufficient to keep up even a larger business. Macoupin is one of the largest and most populous counties in the State, and Carlinville, being near the centre, makes it a very desirable inland town, both for residence and business.

Carthage.

A post village, capital of Hancock county on the Keokuk Branch of the Quincy and Toledo Railway about 110 miles N. N. W. from Springfield. Another road from Warsaw via Carthage to Bushnell, connecting with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy R. R., is two thirds graded and will be soon completed. In the southern part of Hancock county, near Tioga, are the remains of some 20 Indian mounds. These mounds are some hundred feet distant from each other in rows, forming a straight line. Their elevation is 8 or 10 feet above the level of the surface and their diameter about 200 feet. The excavation of some of these mounds show human bones buried indiscriminately at the base. The soil of the country adjoining Carthage is rich and productive, and the prairie dry and rolling. Good water is obtained by digging wells from 15 to 25 feet deep. Coal is near and abundant. Population 700.

Chambersburgh,

A township and post village in the north-east corner of Pike county, five miles west of Meredosia on the Quincy & Toledo Railroad, via which it is 61 miles east-south-east from Quincy.

Champaign,

An important and rapidly growing city of Champaign county, on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, 128 miles south from Chicago. The city has sprung up entirely since the completion of the railroad, and owing to its favorable situation in the midst of a farming country unsurpassed for fertility, has become one of the most flourishing cities in Central Illinois. Lucius W. Walker, Mark Carley and Isaac White located here in 1854, being the first actual settlers on the site of what now constitutes the city of Champaign.

The village was at first known as "West Urbana," the township name. In 1856, the place was incorporated as a city, under the name of "Champaign."

The railroad was opened to this place in 1854, and from that date its increase has been steady and rapid, having now (1864) a population of nearly 3,000.

The city of Urbana is situated about a mile and a half east of Champaign, with which it is connected by a horse railroad. The city contains five churches, (Presbyterian, Congregational, Methodist, Baptist and Catholic,) two public schools, one flour mill, one brewery, two weekly newspapers, two private banking houses, a bank of issue, five steam elevators, an agricultural implement factory, three hotels, a large furniture manufactory, a pork-packing house, a Lodge each of Masons. Odd Fellows and Good Templars, and various mechanical trades, business houses, etc.

The country surrounding Champaign is mostly high rolling prairie, well watered, exceedingly fertile, and noted for the salubrity of its atmosphere. A grove of heavy timber lies about two miles east of the city. Coal abounds in the surrounding country, and will soon be advantageously worked. A large and elegant male and female seminary, designed to cost upwards of $50,000, is now in process of erection, about midway between the cities of Urbana and Champaign.

At this point, the residence of our friend M. L. Dunlap, Esq., editor of the Illinois Farmer, we are enabled to insert his admirable view of the fruit-growing qualities of the State, as also its horticultural and floricultural developments, a sketch of deep interest to the gentleman and the gardner.

"The State of Illinois forms the center around which clusters the great group of the Northwestern States. In consequence of her happy geographical position, of the wide scope of latitude within her grasp, and the genial influence of the air currents that kiss her rich, rolling surface, give her peculiar claims, in a pomological view, to pre-eminence over her sister States that will enable her to supply early vegetables, the staple and choice fruits in advance of all others.

"She may well be called the garden of the Northwest, not only from her geographical position, but form the nature of her soil and climate, which embraces a wide range of temperature, ripening the fig in latitude thirty-seven, and yet perfecting the apple and pear on her northern limit at forty-two

"The great current of heated air which comes from the tropics in summer, passes to the west of her, scorching the plains of Missouri, Kansas and Iowa, while the center of the great waves of cold, that come down from the North in winter, returns over the same channel, and touches her but lightly.

"Although the climate is strictly continental, yet from the influence of the rivers within, and on her borders and being out of the central current of heat and cold, it is less subject to sudden changes than that of the States to the west.

ORCHARDING.

"For a long time it was supposed that the prairies were not adapted to this branch of horticulture, but the culture and grassing of these vast meadows, by exposing them to the sun and air, soon dispelled this fallacy, and now we find some of the largest and most profitable orchards in this State located on the rolling prairies, thus giving them a new value. From being wet, even on the high land, they have become dry and friable, and well adapted to the growth of almost all plants of woody structure.

"The prairie orchards are, or will be, sheltered by artificial belts of timber, which ward off the cold and high winds that would destroy the fruit at the time of inflorescence, as well as other stages of its growth, and in addition to this, make a valuable and cheap fence.

"A respectable percentage of the whole State can thus be made available for orcharding or fruit growing of some kind, more especially the apple, the most valuable of all fruits; though Central Illinois, and the loess or bluff formation of the Mississippi, are the most valuable for this purpose.

"Geologically the State is divided into four natural grand divisions, each of which requires a different selection of varieties to succeed the best. While the Newtown Pippin is large, high flavored and productive on the river bluffs and the mountain lime stone formation, it is worthless on the black loam and granite drifts of the center and north part of the State.

"The facilities for transportation afforded to all parts of the State, at all seasons of the year, to either the North or the South, give to the agriculturist of the State advantages that cannot be over estimated.

"While the climate of Ohio, Indiana, and Michigan is yearly becoming less valuable for fruit growing, on account of the clearing up of their forests, this State is becoming more valuable, from the increased growth of timber belts that tend to modify the climate, guard against sudden changes, and give to the country a more equable distribution of rain.

"The prairie orchards thus far have produced uniform good crops, and some of them now send to market two to six thousand bushels of apples annually. An increased attention has been given in this direction within the past three years, and the number of trees planted has been nearly doubled since the spring of 1863.

GRAPE GROWING.

"This State must soon stand first in the list of grape growing States. This fruit can be grown to more or less advantage in all parts of the State, but the loess of the Mississippi stand out most prominently in this respect. In Hancock county it is estimated that there are now 400,000 vines, while Madison and Adams counties are but little if any behind. The planting at Warsaw is as follows:

"There	were	planted	in	1855,	20 vines.
"	"	"	"	1858,	101 "
"	"	"	"	1859,	656 "
"	"	"	"	1860,	3,929 "
"	"	"	"	1861,	3,135 "
"	"	"	"	1862,	2,305 "
"	"	"	"	1863,	65,000 "

"In Nauvoo up to and including last spring there was estimated to be 190,000 vines.

"No branch of rural economy is receiving more attention than fruit culture, in the apple orchard, the vineyard, and the small fruit garden; apparently only limited by the trees and plants within reach of the planters.

PEACH CULTURE.

"The peach lands lie south of the 40th parallel, and within the bounds of the Mississippi and Wabash rivers. This section has no serious competition. The peach crop of Michigan coming at the close of the crop from this part of our State. The loess of the Mississippi, and the grand chain of hills in the south part of the State, are remarkable for fine peaches, and it is on these formations that most of the peach orchards are located. These orchards now cover some thousands of acres.

SMALL FRUITS.

"These are assuming no small importance, even if we do not include among them the grape

"The strawberry is sent to market from the south part of the State May 10th, at the time they are in bloom at the north part of the State, and the first ripe peaches go north August 10th, so the small fruits fill a void that the orchard cannot supply.

"The strawberry is followed by the raspberry, and that by the blackberry, between which is sandwiched the currant and the gooseberry. The May cherry goes with the strawberry, and follows the season in its progress northward, thus extending the small fruit season over a wide area of summer. Illinois is the fruit and vegetable garden of the valley of the Upper Mississippi."

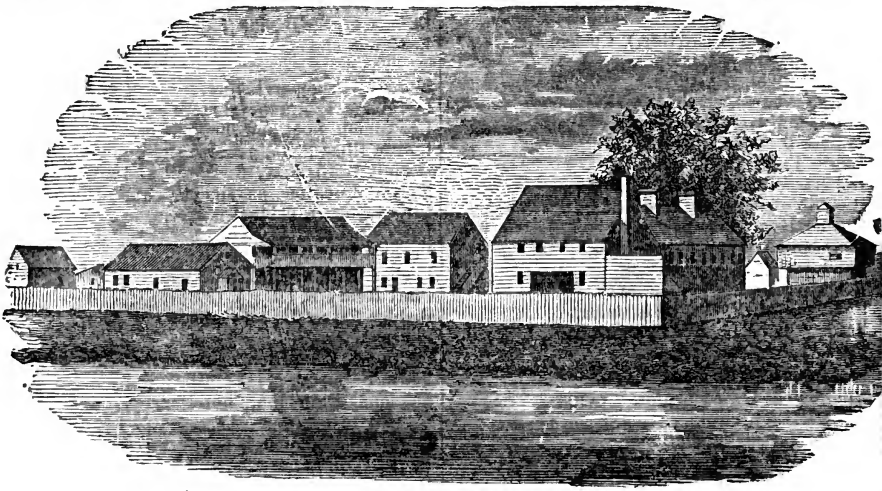
Chicago.

In presenting a sketch of the Garden City of the West, in a Gazeteer of Illinois, the intelligent reader will not expect to find a history, which would alone occupy the pages of a volume. It will, however, be expected that we should dwell a little more than ordinarily upon the antecedents and wonderful growth of this vast city, which has sprung into existence, within the date and memory of men of the present generation.

The occupation of this part of the great west by the Indians, and more especially in this region of country by the Pottawatomies, who made it their roving ground; and from this point where the fur trade with the Indians was carried on, is now well known, and part of the early history of Chicago. Before the opening up of railroads, and when the distance, and difficulties of traveling, made a journey so far west, all but an impossibility, an Indian trading station was established here and occupied by a few whites who at that early period, in the spirit of adventure made their way so far west, from the civilized portion of our people. At the close of the Indian war in 1795 by General Wayne, the Chiefs of the several tribes assembled by his invitation at Greenville, Ohio, and there effected a treaty of peace which closed the war of the west. In this treaty the Indians ceded to the United States numerous small tracts of land, where forts and trading posts were established. Among these, was one described as "one piece of land six miles square, at the mouth of Chickajo (Chicago) River, emptying into the south-west end of Lake Michigan, where a post formerly stood." In the same treaty, a free passage by land or water, is secured from the mouth of the Chicago river to the commencement of the portage between that river and the Illinois, and down the Illinois to the Mississipi. In this treaty is contained the first land trade of this city, the first step in that order of business which distinguishes Chicago above every other city of nation, the first link in the chain of title to the thousands upon thousands of transfers that have been made of the soil thus parted with by the Indians.

Not many years after this "tract and parcel of land" six miles square had been ceded to the United States, the proprietors thought it practicable to enter upon actual possession. Accordingly in 1804, the government built the first United States fort occuping this locality. It stood nearly on the site of the fort erected in 1816, and finally demolished, in the summer of 1856. The fort was furnished with three pieces of light artillery. A company of United States troops, about fifty in number, many of whom were invalids, constituted the garrison. It received the name of Fort Dearborn, by which it was ever after known as long as it continued a military post. The fort stood upon the slightly elevated point on the south side of the river, near the lake shore, formed by a bend in the river, just before mingling its waters with those of the lake.

This fort then occupied one of the most beautiful sites on the lake shore. It was as high as any other point, overlooking the surface of the lake; commanding as well as any other view on this flat surface could, the prairie extending to the south, the belt of timber along the South Branch and on the North Side, and the white sand hills both to the north and south, which had for ages past been the sport of the lake winds. It stood upon a flattened mound, formed by the curve of the river at its base on its three sides. On the apex of this mound-shaped elevation stood the buildings of the old fort, its two block houses on opposite corners, enclosed by palisades, and a green grassy slope extending each way, and on the north and east side down to the edge of the ever quite waters of Chicago river.



FORT DEARBORN.

Up to the time of the erection of this fort no white man had made here his home. The Pottawatomie Indians had here undisputed sway. Their villages were near by. In addition to the garrison, there soon gathered here a few families of French, Canadians and half-breeds, consisting of that floating class which hang about a military post, or an Indian trading station. Whatever there was of civilized society, which has connected those days of the past in a bright chain of identity with the present, was sustained in the Kinzie family. And such was the nucleus of a community formed in the center of the North-West, but half a century ago, shut out from communication with all the world, except by the waters of the lakes, passed over but once or twice a year by a single sail vessel; or by Indian trails to other almost as isolated communities at St. Louis, Detroit, or Fort Wayne. It was certainly a way-mark in the wilderness far in advance of civilization. They were a little world unto themselves. They pursued in an even way, the narrow routine of pioneer life, furnishing few incidents of sufficient note to fill up a page of history, from the time of the creation of this fort, till the one great incident, which blotted it out and its little surrounding community, the massacre in 1812.

The author of "Waubun," remarks as a native saying of the Indians, "the first white man who settled here was a negro." Point-au-Sable, a native of St. Domingo, from a life wandering, made his advent here among the Indians in 1796, as a character of some consequence. He had made the Indians believe he had been a chief among the white men and probably expected some such honor among his new friends. He made some improvements, merely driving the pre-emption stakes of civilization,—when he left in disgust or discouragement, and ended his days with Clamorgan, at Peoria, a St. Domingo negro friend, who had obtained large Spanish grants of land about St. Louis. A Frenchman by the name of Le Mai took possession of Point-au-Sable's improvements, and commenced trading with the Indians. Le Mai's establishment, a few years after was purchased by John Kinzie, Esq., then an Indian trader in the St. Joseph country, Michigan, who came with his family to Chicago to reside, in 1804, the year in which the fort was built. John Kinzie was the first permanent white resident of Chicago, the first man to establish permanent trade, and improvements, and to leave the impress of his enterprise and the marks of civilization on the first things from which Chicago has sprung. For nearly twenty years he was, with the exception of the military, the only white inhabitant of Northern Illinois. If any person is entitled to the honor of being styled the "Father of Chicago," that person is unquestionably John Kinzie.

Mr. Kinzie's residence was the first house built in Chicago. A part of it was the same rude structure put up by the so-called first white man—the negro Jean Baptiste Point-au-Sable, about the year 1796. It was enlarged and improved by Le Mai, of whom Mr. Kinzie purchased, who further improved it internally and externally, until he made it a respectable family mansion. It stood on the north side of the river, fronting the Fort. Between this house and the fort, there was kept up a foot ferry, and a little boat swung in the stream awaiting the pleasure of any passenger. A foot path on each side, from the gate of the fort, or the door of the mansion, to the platforms at the water's edge, from which the passenger stepped into the boat, marked the course of travel from one side to the other.

The quietnesss and deep repose of the scenery, marked only by an occasional Indian in a canoe, or a pony with a pack of furs; or a French Canadian loitering here or there, a soldier pacing his rounds about the fort, or idly strolling over the prairies, or hunting in the woods, it is impossible to conceive should have been superseded within half a century by one of the busiest cities in the National Union.

There can be no question that the growth of this city has been promoted by its favorable geographical position. Situated at the mouth of the Chicago River it is so favorably adapted for lake commerce, that vessels of considerable size could enter the harbor, and trade extend into the interior by boats down the river. As the population increased and the developement of the resources of the State were commenced by the early settlers, it became evident that one of the most effective improvements would be a canal for boats, with a towing path along its side—railroads not then having come into use. Accordingly, the legislature passed a bill appointing Canal Commissioners, and authorizing the Illinois & Michigan Canal. To them were also assigned the duty of laying out the towns along the line of the Canal, and in the autumn of 1829 they proceeded to lay out the town of Chicago, having employed Mr. James Thompson to survey and plat the town, which he did. His first map is in the Recorder's office, bearing date August 4, 1830, and is the part known as the original town of Chicago. This was the beginning of Chicago as a recognized place, its first official organization, which must be dated as its birth. The projection of the canal was the immediate precursor of the city, the source from which she received her first impulse and to which she is more indebted for her greatness than to any other source.

Subsequently it is true a more direct and speedy impulse has been given to Chicago by her many railroads; but the canal was her strength in her infancy, her hope for many long years of struggle, when her fortune with that of the canal waxed and waned together, when financial disasters fell upon one it fell upon the other, and, at last, when the canal policy prevailed, and its fortunes rose, Chicago rose with it; and when it triumphed at last, and the work was finished, Chicago triumphed also, and became then the full formed bud of promise of all she has become since. Then her railroads became a necessity, demanded by her next step of progress, and they, too lingered and struggled for a time; but as Chicago, backed by the county, had made the canal, she also made her railroads. But she has outgrown her nursing mother, and the Canal is now looked upon as a comparative "old fogy" institution—one of the things that were—to be superseded by new inventions; nevertheless it has its use, a valuable one, and Chicago knows better than to give up her canal. She and the State, and indeed the United States must make this a great national work, by enlarging its original conception to a ship canal, to draw off through the harbor of Chicago, the drainage of the city in the supply of water needed for the improvement of the Illinois River; so enlarging the original plan that steamboats and gun boats, if required, can pass from the Lake to the Mississippi, that steamers from New Orleans can be moored at our docks, and Chicago steamers in like manner at New Orleans. Nothing short of this will answer the demand of the times.

The construction of the canal was no easy task; obstacles springing up entirely unforeseen, and nothing but indomitable perseverance finally overcame all, and the great undertaking became an accomplished fact. Railroads have but followed the law of progress, the last improvement naturally following the former.

In dwelling upon the continued progress of Chicago down to the present time, from its early history, its ups and downs, yet with its ever advancement, and recovery from occasional collapses of fortune of many, would fill volumes. The incidents of lots sold for a mere trifle, that have since become of the value of thousands of dollars, would, if narrated, seem but romantic tales, some of the stories partaking of the marvellous. It is not, however, our province to enter into such minutiæ, that must be left for the historian; it is sufficient for us to give this hasty glance at our city's antecedents, somewhat indeed briefly, yet sufficiently to show its onward progress until now, at length it stands out a city of great magnificence.

Its foundation is the mercantile prosperity of its people. Chicago stands forth as the Queen Garden City of the West. Some of her palatial residences are princely, if not of great magnitude, and if the enterprise for improvement dawns upon her citizens, to adorn the suburbs with parks, artificial mounds, or eminences, with ornamental waters, and drives of well McAdamized roads, with the advantage of such a noble sheet of water as Lake Michigan to behold from the summit of these eminences, then may we hope to retain such of our citizens who have become rich, and who, having originally come from some eastern State, sigh to return thence, remembering the diversity of its scenery, and the beauty of its hills and dales, which the present surroundings of Chicago contrast so unfavorably with, that they are induced to return to the early romantic rides of childhood, rather than remain in a city where there is so little to attract the eye as its surrounding landscape presents. This feeling may, however, be removed, and if the suggestions of our fellow citizen, and early settler here, Hon. Wm. B. Ogden, (who has done so much for Chicago, and who would be willing to co-operate in such an enterprise,) were acted upon, we should soon see springing up rides and drives over hard roads, alongside of groves of trees, and occasionally up-rising ground, giving a view of the lake and the country, to be dotted here and there with mansions partly concealed with shrubbery, and other of those beautiful surroundings of flower gardens and grass lawns, and extended through a park into the open country, found adjacent to each of the three great divisions of our noble city. Here also will be the highway lake terminus of the Pacific Railroad, which shall bring the silks and teas of China and Japan by the overland Pacific route, to be shipped, either down the St. Lawrence to Europe, or by the Ship Canal to New Orleans and the South American States of this vast continent. Such is to be the future of Chicago. Meanwhile, it is our duty to record her progress so far. We will, therefore, in these pages, give tables and statistics of the present growth of her trade and material wealth.

It is now well known that in the great staples of corn, lumber and pork packing, Chicago has grown to be the largest market in the world; the port where grain is gathered and stored for shipment, and where the vast business is handled by eighteen grain elevators, having each immense capacity for storage, and where it is deposited by country merchants, for use, or transportation east when required.

This enormous business is transported partly, in the winter season, by our eastern lines of railway, and during the opening of navigation, by upwards of 1,250 American vessels, consisting of steamers, propellers, tugs, barks, brigs and schooners, and having a capacity of tonnage of 361,997 tons; also, 357 Canadian vessels, having a tonnage of 88,896 tons. There is also a large fleet of river boats, constantly bringing in grain of all kinds, by the Illinois & Michigan Canal; besides the immense quantity brought in by rail, on all the lines of our western railroads.

As a manufacturing city, Chicago is fast attaining very great importance. Already we have two iron rolling mills for making bars and rails; also, seven agricultural implements manufactories, 29 breweries, 16 distilleries, 52 packing houses for beef and pork, 15 iron foundries, 31 machine shops, 16 tanneries, 26 carriage builders, 43 wagon makers, and ere long we hope to see a smelting furnace for the Lake Superior copper ore, a business that at present has been neglected; also, a spinning and weaving mill, with cotton mills, for which there is ample opportunity; and capitalists will do well to establish these works here, to supply the Empire of the West, rather than send our orders to eastern manufacturers.

There is ample space for all these great works, which would doubtless pay well and be liberally supported. For the accommodation of our transient visitors, there are 94 hotels, some of which are equal to any on this continent; the three or four principal ones are the Sherman, Tremont, Briggs and Garden City. The Metropolitan, Matteson, Adams, Richmond, City and Massasoit are also excellent hotels, although not so large as the others.

Improvement is now the order of the day in Chicago. She has arrived at that stage in her existence where every class of her citizens are making giant strides in prosperity. Buildings are rising in all parts of the city, for business or dwellings. Two grand projects are now in hand, the one to erect an immense business block on the site of the old First Presbyterian Church, lately a billiard hall, corner of Clark and Washington streets, at a cost of nearly $200,000; the other is that of an immense business block on the site of the First Baptist Church, (which is to be taken down,) corner of Washington and LaSalle streets, for the Board of Trade and the Chamber of Commerce. These improvements, occupying corners abutting on the Court House square, will be, when completed, grand signs of the rapid progress of this city to greatness, and even magnificence. The Court House of our city is large, roomy, and by no means a mean structure, enlarged and improved as it has been within the last five or six years. The time will come, however, when it will have to give place to a still more imposing structure, to keep pace with the wants of the city, and the architectural beauty which will soon adorn its streets, and the suburban residences of its princely merchants.

The growth of the city has also rendered needful the erection of numerous places of Divine worship, numbering in all about 95, besides convents and asylums. Amusements have not been forgotten; there is a large Theatre, a Museum with Theatre, a German Theatre, an Ethiopian Opera House, called the Academy of Music, besides lesser theatrical entertainments, and frequent visits of opera troupes and minstrels, who make Chicago their headquarters for a time, returning periodically.

Here also are located many important and valuable societies and institutions, for the intellectual and social gatherings of our citizens. Masonic Lodges are numerous, and also those of other moral and benevolent organizations, their names and location being recorded elsewhere.

The Chicago Historical Society is, however, one of the most important and interesting in our midst. Established so recently as 1856, it has already gathered into its rooms many most valuable relics of the past history of the State of Illinois, as of the city, and, indeed, of the Western States. Under the able management of its officers and committees, carried more directly into operation by its intelligent and polite Secretary, the Rev. William Barry, it has risen into great importance and usefulness as a depository of the many curious and ancient utensils and weapons of the Indians, which, together with an extensive library of old and rare books and newspapers, published in this and other States, many of which are presented by public bodies or private citizens, this Society will be one eventually of which Chicago may be proud. It is in contemplation to provide a suitable permanent building for the use of this Society, so soon as favorable arrangements can be effected.

The Academy of Sciences is another of our more recent institutions, organized in 1857 and incorporated in 1859. In its rooms are a large number of specimens illustrative of the national history of the North-west. Under the auspices of this Society, and by the liberal aid of many citizens, the Hon. J. Young Scammon among the most liberal of the contributors, and in connection with the Chicago University, an observatory is being erected, having previously secured one of the largest and most valuable telescopes for taking observations. The tower will be erected at great cost, and of massive strength, suitable for so heavy and important an undertaking.

The advent of these scientific societies here, when in full and perfect operation, will be an additional means of holding together and combining our educated men, so that they will the more readily remain with us as permanent residents. These, and kindred institutions growing up in and around the city, are so many elements of combination in retaining amongst us those who may add dignity and honor to our city. The establishment, therefore, of the Garret Biblical Institute, at Evanston, and the University at Lake Forest, with those of Chicago, are all elements of intellectual and moral strength, and productive of great good to our people.

A Literary Society is also in full operation, called the Young Men's Association, having an extensive library, and under whose auspices, during the winter, a course of lectures is provided, which are gatherings of considerable interest to the better classes of our citizens, at that period of the year. A Young Men's Christian Association is also in full operation, together with, since the commencement of the rebellion, a Sanitary Commission, Soldiers' Home, and, indeed, many other benevolent institutions.

The material wealth and prosperity of Chicago may now be said to be fully established. The last eight years have seen immense improvements and enlargements in every part of the city. One of the chief was the raising the grades of the streets over six feet, in many places, even more, giving a fall of water drainage to the lake, which previously was standing in the streets after heavy rains. This was done at immense cost, and involved subsequently the raising of whole blocks of stone and brick buildings to grade, by elevating the foundations or basements, or lifting the buildings with thousands of powerful screws, and effecting a change so marvellous as to be a wonder to its residents, as also to its visitors from abroad.

The latest improvement now in progress is the sinking of a shaft of immense diameter, and then running a tunnel under the bed of the lake a distance of two miles, then up to the water, so as to obtain a supply of purer water for the use of the inhabitants of this vast and growing city.

The following statement of the healthy location of Chicago, we have obtained from another writer, and insert it, as highly satisfactory to the thoughtful resident.

SANITARY CONSIDERATIONS.

"The city of Chicago is now one of the most healthy cities in the world, notwithstanding the many disadvantages under which her citizens labor in consequence of the low situation. Of course civilization has its disadvantages as well as its advantages, and we have here sources of much discomfort and disease, if not positive death. Yet, notwithstanding all our drawbacks, we can congratulate ourselves upon presenting a bill of health which is complimentary to our sanitary arrangements, and to that innate energy which is so important an element in prolonged vitality. Even with our cholera ravages, the added average of the past seventeen years present but the figures 50.70, a rate at which a generation would die out in about thirty-three and a half years, whereas the average is calculated at thirty-three; but if we take the figures of the last five years as an index, we shall have 18,33 as the annual ratio, or a cycle of fifty-two and a half years. We have not at hand the statistics of other cities of the Union in so concise a shape as to admit of comparison, but it is doubtful whether any one can show a more favorable register.

The following table contains a statement of the population for a series of years, and comparison of deaths; the last column shows the annual per centage, the three figures of which are the rate per 10,000, or the left hand figure is the next lowest integral per centage. The table of population is given from 1840, being the first year in which the census of Chicago was taken. Those numbers marked with a * are only approximate, the others are the figures as obtained by actual count:

RATIO TO POPULATION.

Year.	Population.	Deaths.	Ratio.

The last is an overstatement we think of the Tribune of some 20,000.

TOPOGRAPHICAL.

The site upon which Chicago stands is low, being elevated but a few feet above the level of the Lake, possessing very little natural drainage, and presenting therefore all the features which conduce to marsh diseases. And the early residents felt the full force of the influence; the soil was continually damp, and in winter and spring the country for many miles around was little better than the Calumet of to-day. Even now we well know how the water will stand, or rather lie, for months together, some distance from drains. But the energy of the settlers soon remedied the evil. For many years Chicago was looked upon as a city which presented unequalled facilities for making money, but a permanent residence in which was equivalent to a shortening of five years on the term of existence, and the entailing of miasmatic diseases in a cachectic form upon future generations. And the early settlers did suffer, but it was more from the change than from radical unfitness of the climate to the human constitution. A short residence here was sufficient to produce perfect acclimatization, and to-day we have as hearty and healthy a people as any city in the world can boast. It is peculiarly significant that even the cholera—contagious though it be—passed by the permanent residents almost as faithfully as the destroying angel left untouched the houses of the Israelites, upon whose door posts the blood of the lamb had been sprinkled. The emigrants were those who suffered; people who had just come into the city intending to make it their future home. These died by the score. Now the city has been raised to grade, is well drained in almost every part, and offers sanitary as well as commercial inducements to the emigrant, surpassed by none. Indeed, this is already known. The old time prejudice against a residence in Chicago has died away; the difficulty is now, not to find tenants, but tenements, and although in our sidewalks and streets there is still much room for improvement, we may congratulate ourselves at least upon having a location which is worthy of such improvement."

In bringing this brief sketch to a close, it would ill become us if we failed to notice the magnificent expanse of waters, on which this city is so admirably located. Lake Michigan, an Indian word meaning great water, is one of the five great lakes of North America, connected with the St. Lawrence River. It is the largest Lake that is wholly included within the United States. Its length following the curves, is about 350 miles; its greatest breadth is about 90 miles. The surface of the lake is about 600 feet above the level of the sea; the depth is stated to be from 900 to 1,000 feet. The shore of the lake is generally low, being formed of limestone, rock, clay or sand. The area of the lake is estimated at 20,000 square miles. Its waters are increased by the rains and snows of the western mountains into which they drain. The lake waters of Michigan pass into Lake Huron, and so gradually decend into the St. Lawrence to the sea.

Upon this Lake is carried the commerce of the west to a large extent, by the shipping of this and eastern ports, and to the salubrious breezes from the lake may be attributed, the health of our people and comparative mildness of our winters. The magnitude of this commerce, will be seen, by the statistical tables we subjoin. These have been made up to the end of the year 1863, and will give some idea of the wonderful progress in all branches of industry to which the skill and energy of our merchants have already brought up the commerce of our city.

COMMERCE OF CHICAGO.

For the year 1863.

[The following sketch is taken from the Annual Review of the Chicago Tribune. It is condensed into grand totals, sufficient for the purpose of a Gazetteer, and an exhibition of the great trade of this city.]

FLOUR AND GRAIN.

The following are the receipts of flour, and also all kinds of grain for the year, making this the largest grain market in the world.

Flour, 1,536,691 bus. Wheat, 11,180,344 bus.
Corn, 26,450,508 bus. Oats 9,136,525 bus.
Rye, 839,760 bus. Barley, 1,098,346 bus.

In addition to the above statistics of flour, received into this city, there is a large amount manufactured here. There are nine milling establishments, where are annually made 250,000 barrels of flour, consuming about 1,250,000 bushels of wheat.

THE PROVISION TRADE OF CHICAGO.

Pork and beef packing for the season of 1863–4 ending March 5, 1864. Chicago is the greatest beef and pork packing point in the world.

The following statistics are suppled by Henry Milward, Esq., provision broker. The number of hogs packed in this city being 904,759, and the number of beeves 70,086.

COMPARISON OF HOGS PACKED IN CHICAGO AND CINCINNATI FOR TWELVE SEASONS.

Season.	Chicago.	Cincinnati.
1852–53	48,156	331,000
1853–54	52,849	421,000
1854–55	73,694	355,786
1855–56	80,380	405,396
1856–57	74,000	344,512
1857–58	99,262	416,677
1858–59	185,000	382,826
1859–60	167,918	431,199
1860–61	231,335	433,799
1861–62	514,118	474,157
1862–63	970,264	608,457
1863–64	904,658	357,640

From the above table it will be seen that for three years past Chicago has distanced Cincinnati—this last season the latter city being behind upwards of half a million. Our own falling off arose from the shortness of supply during a severe storm of one or two weeks.

The receipt of live and dressed hogs during the season has been: live hogs, 1,003,193; dressed, 309,459.

There are now 58 packing houses in operation in this city, many on a small scale, but there are more large packing houses in Chicago than in any other city, and some of them perfect models—combining all the improvements, which art or science could accomplish. Pork packing is however only one branch of the business. During the past season thirteen houses have been engaged in packing beef, and have cut 70,086 beeves, being the greatest number ever packed before in any city in the world.

LUMBER.

This is also another of the large mercantile interests of Chicago, it being considered the largest lumber market in the world.

The receipts of lumber during the year 1863 amounted to the amazing quantity of 392,800,000 feet, showing a large increase over the previous year.

UNIVERSITY OF CHICAGO.

With the opening of the North West, and the sudden rise of Chicago towards the rank of a great commercial emporium, it was foreseen by those who had at heart the highest interests of society, that broad and deep foundations should here be laid for education, and that here was the natural centre of a great University, which should expand in pace with the growth of the city, and should at once represent and give tone to its culture and add to it the crowning element of greatness.

Among the first to entertain this conception was the late Hon. Stephen A. Douglas, then a citizen of Chicago, and in pursuance of his convictions, in 1856, he conveyed to the Rev. J. C Burroughs property then valued at $60,000, in trust for the foundation of a University. The beginning thus made, the enterprise has advanced, with a rapidity surprising, under the condition of the times, till it has already taken rank among the leading Universities of the country, while a future is foreshadowed to it, such as has perhaps never opened before a similar enterprise.

Officers of the Board of Trustees.—Hon Wm. B. Ogden, President; Hon. Charles Walker, Hon. James H. Woodworth, Vice Presidents; Rev. J. A. Smith, D. D., Secretary; Hon. J. H. Woodworth, Treasurer.

H. B. Bryant and H. D. Stratton, Commercial Science.

—. ———, Professor of Vocal Music.

LOCATION AND BUILDINGS.

The location of the University is on the high gravelly beach of Lake Michigan, embracing ten acres of ground, covered by a beautiful natural grove. In healthfulness and beauty, it is universally admitted to be unsurpassed by any college site in the country, while the City-Railway, passing its gates, brings it within easy reach of all the privileges of the city at the same time that it enjoys the quiet seclusion of the country.

The Building already completed is of Athens stone, five stories high, mostly occupied by students rooms and accommodations for the boarding department. The rooms for students, arranged in suits of a study and two bedrooms, in convenience, ventilation &c., are all that can be desired. The main building is now in rapid progress and contracted to be ready for occupancy during the next collegiate year. It will be the finest college edifice in the west and will leave nothing wanting in recitation rooms, halls, chemical laboratory, cabinet, gymnasium, etc.

THE OBSERVATORY.

The walls of the Observatory are rapidly rising and within the present year the great Clark Telescope will be mounted. The scientific authorities of this Country and Europe are agreed in pronouncing it the greatest Telescope in the world.

RESOURCES.

The University of Chicago relies for the means to carry out its plans upon the fact, that it meets a recognized want of the people of the great Northwest. Identified in name and interest with the city of Chicago, it has proved itself able to command the wealth and co-operation of the city to any extent demanded in erecting its buildings and endowing its various departments; while its relations to the magnificent country of which the city is the centre, opens to it a field of influence and patronage such as places its future resources beyond a doubt, and gives to its managers the utmost confidence, independently of all

COURSE OF STUDY.

The University aims at nothing less than the highest standard of classical and scientific culture attained by American Universities; at the same time providing in its scientific course and its privilege of elective studies for those who, from any cause, are compelled to shorten their time of study. In this way it aims to give to its advantages the widest possible extension to the different wants of society, without detriment to its primary design of fostering and disseminating learning in its highest and broadest sense.

The following course of study, while it by no means embraces all that is contemplated, is yet believed to be not essentially inferior to the highest standard yet reached by the Universities of best character in this country. Students passing from any period of the course have uniformly been found able to enter ad eundem at the first colleges of the East.

FRESHMAN YEAR.—First Term.—Xenophon's Anabasis, Greek Prose Composition, Smith's History of Greece, Livy, Latin Prose Composition, Robinson's University Algebra, Whately's Lessons in Morals. Second Term. —Geometry completed, Application of Algebra to Geometry, Homer's Iliad, Horace (Odes), Roman Antiquities, Modern History.

SOPHOMORE YEAR.—First Term—Horace (Satires and Epistles), Plane Trigonometry, Mensuration and Surveying, (Loomis') English Words, (Trench, Graham) German. Second Term—Isocrates, Cicero de Senectute and de Amicitiae, Navigation, Spherical Trigonometry, Algebra completed, Rhetoric, German. Third Term—Conic Sections, Analytical Geometry, Demosthenes on the Crown, Grecian Antiquities, Tacitus, (Germania and Agricola), Rhetoric completed.

JUNIOR YEAR.—First Term.—Logic (Sir Wm. Hamilton), Cicero de Oratore, Defferential and Integral Calculus, (optional) Paley's Evidences, French. Second Term.—Natural Philosophy, (Snell's Olmsted) Greek Tragedies, Greek Testament, Terence, English Literature. Third Term.—Natural Philosophy completed, Astronomy, Greek Tragedies, Plautus, Botany, Zoology.

SENIOR YEAR.—First Term.—Mental Philosophy, (Sir Wm. Hamilton) Astronomy completed, Chemistry, Civil Engineering. Second Term.—Mineralogy and Geology, Greek Philosophers, Guizot's History of Civilization, Butler's Analogy, Paley's Natural Theology. Third Term.—Moral Philosophy, Political Economy (Wayland), International Law, Constitution of United States. Anatomy, Physiology, Ethnology, Aesthetics.

SCIENTIFIC COURSE. For those who do not wish to pursue the Greek and Latin languages, a special course has been arranged, omitting that part of the classical course, and substituting a larger amount of French, German, Mathematics, and Natural Sciences. Graduates from this course receive the degree of BACHELOR OF SCIENCES.

Students not candidates for degrees, may also pursue any studies of the regular course at their option.

Illustrative Apparatus.—The lectures on Chemistry and Natural Philosophy are illustrated by the best modern apparatus. In Geology and Mineralogy the collection of specimens is one of the largest and best selected in the country. The Botanical collection of Prof. Scammon numbers over four thousand species. There are, also, moderate facilities for the illustration of Zoology, and other branches of Natural History.

Boarding Department.—A competent steward and matron have been placed in charge of this department, and students who wish to board in the University may be sure of the best accommodations which the low prices charged will afford.

Expenses.—Board, per week, $2.00; Washing, per dozen, 40 cts.; Room, per year, $15.00; Tuition, per year, $50.00. Wood and lights students find for themselves.

The whole expenses, including books, are found not to exceed $180.00 per year.

Sessions and Vacations,—The Collegiate year opens on the second Thursday in September of each year. First term continues fifteen weeks; vacation, one week. Second term, thirteen weeks; vacation, one week. Third term, twelve weeks, closing on the Thursday before the 4th of July.

ACADEMY.

A School either for preparation for College, or for General Education. Prof. Alonzo J. Howe, A. M., Principal.

The President and Faculty of the University give instruction in the Academy, and exercise care over the students, the same as in the College.

Students not preparing for College may choose for themselves what studies to pursue, and may enter at any time during the year, if prepared to recite with classes then in progress.

The studies preparatory to College have been arranged in a course of three years, including Arithmetic, English Grammar, Geography, Elementary Science, History of the United States, Reading, Spelling, Writing, Book-Keeping, English Composition, Declamation, Algebra (through Robinson's Elementary), Latin, (the Elements, and Cæsar, Cicero and Virgil,) and Greek as far as four books of Xenophon's Anabasis. The course embraces all that is necessary to fit students for this, or any other American College.

Boys of twelve years of age, with a fair knowledge of the Elementary Branches, can enter the Academy to advantage.

Students have the same privileges of board and rooms as College students.

Terms—The same as in the University proper, viz: Tuition, $50.00 per year; Board, $2.00 per week; Room, $15.00 per year; Washing, 40 cts. per dozen.

LAW DEPARTMENT.

That the requirements of the legal profession should be regarded in a University, worthy to be called the University of Chicago, and that liberal provision for legal learning should be incorporated into the foundations of the institution, was not overlooked by the managers of the University, and was prominent in the plans of its distinguished founder. Accordingly, a Department was provided for in its charter, and in 1858, an endowment of Five Thousand Dollars, by the Hon. Thomas Hoyne, enabled the department to go into successful operation. Its history thus far, has exceeded the expectations of its founders, and it has reached a position among the permanent and honored institutions of the city, and of the North-West. As will be seen by reference to its order, which appears below, the Supreme Court of Illinois has recognized the Diploma of this department as the standard of preparation for the Bar of the State.

Professors.—Hon. Henry Booth, Real Estate, Personal Property, Contracts, Commercial Law.

Hon. John M. Wilson, Equity Jurisprudence.

Hon. Grant Goodrich, Criminal Law, Personal Rights, Domestic Relations.

Harvey B. Hurd, Esq., Evidence, Common Law Pleadings, Practice.

The design of this department is to furnish a thorough, scientific and practical training, such as may fit the student to enter at once upon the duties of his profession with success. For this purpose, there are daily examinations in the various branches of the law, occupying from four to five hours; in addition to which there are moot courts weekly or oftener, and frequent exercises in extemporaneous speaking.

Terms, Diplomas, etc.—There are three terms in the year, of thirteen weeks each. The first term begins on the third Wednesday in September; the second on the first Wednesday in January; and the third on the second Wednesday in April. A full course of study occupies two years, or six terms; embracing the various branches of the common law, equity, admiralty, commercial, international and constitutional law, and the jurisprudence of the United States. There is also a less extensive course of commercial jurisprudence, for those intending to devote themselves to mercantile pursuits. At the close of the collegiate year, there is a public examination in the presence of the Faculty and Trustees of the University, when any student who has attended the exercises of the school for three full terms, and is found qualified to practice, receives the degree of Bachelor of Laws.

Admission to the Bar.—The following order of the Supreme Court of Illinois was entered on record May 12, 1863:

"Ordered, That a diploma from the Law School of the University of Chicago shall be deemed satisfactory evidence that the graduate is sufficiently learned in the law to entitle him to admission to the bar of this court."

Communications should be addressed to Prof. H. Booth, postoffice box 1965, Chicago.

UNIVERSITY OF ST. MARY'S OF THE LAKE, CHICAGO.

The constantly increasing patronage has induced the Board of Trustees to undertake the erection of a new University Building, capable of accommodating three times the number of students now attending the schools.

This extension of the buildings affords an opportunity of adding the departments of Divinity, Law and Medicine to the course of studies. The Professors of Rush Medical College will superintend the medical studies, and their lectures will be delivered in their College buildings, some few squares from the University. The Lecture Hall of the Law Department is situated near the Court House, and at a distance not inconvenient for students residing at the University.

The University Buildings are situated in the North Division of Chicago. A more favorable position for salubrity, pleasure and convenience, could not be found in or about the city. The grounds, situated within a few blocks of the shore of Lake Michigan, embrace an entire square, decorated with shade trees, where students may indulge in cheerful exercise for the purpose of health and relaxation.

Slate and Metal

ROOFERS,

118 MONROE ST., CHICAGO.

Having had 18 years experience in the Roofing Business we can fully recommend all our work to be done in a superior and workmanlike manner. Roofs covered with Slate or Tin in all parts of the United States or Canada. A constant supply of the best quality of Vermont Slates, also the Celebrated Peach Bottom Slate of Pennsylvania on hand.

The improved system of slating on lath, pointed on the underside with hair mortar, was first introduced by Griffin & Bro., in this city, in 1855, and has proved itself to be the cheapest and the best plan to lay slate, thereby saving at least 30 per cent. in the difference between tongued and groved boards and lath.

Z. GROVER, A. M., Principal.

THIS DAY SCHOOL FOR YOUNG LADIES

Is pleasantly located at 81 and 83 Wabash Av.

It is easily accessible from every part of the City, by means of the several City Railways.

The building is large, affording elegant, capacious and well-ventilated School, recitation and play rooms.

There are three Departments—PRIMARY, INTERMEDIATE and COLLEGIATE, embracing an extensive and thorough course of study.

There are usually connected with the School from one hundred to a hundred and fifty pupils, and from eight to ten teachers.

Five classes have already graduated—the last one numbering eleven members.

Especial attention is paid to Physical culture, and Rational Recreation. For this purpose the New Gymnastics of Dr. Lewis, are successfully taught and practiced.

The county seat of Vermilion county, is an incorporated town of 3,000 inhabitants. It has communication east and west, by means of the Toledo, Wabash & Western and the Great Western Railroads. The vicinity was first settled in 1823 by Amos Williams, Harvey Ludington, Dan W. Beckwith, and others. The town was laid out and named by Beckwith; he and another party having donated the grounds in consideration of the county seat being located thereon. The town is situated on a plateau, some ninety feet above the river bed, on a sandy surface, covering a gravel subsoil, with a natural drainage that has been improved by art. Mud and standing water are unknown. The surrounding country is prolific in timber of the best quality, embracing every variety indigenous to the climate.

Near by is an abundant supply of durable sand stone, specimens of which may be seen in the walls of the county jail, and in the piers of the two bridges that span the Vermilion River at the town.

The town itself rests upon the north-eastern edge of one of the largest coal beds in the State. The coal veins average six feet in thickness, and lie from ten to sixty feet below the general surface, the "dip" of the seams being to the south and west. Both the methods, "striping" and "mining," are used in getting the coal. During the winter of 1863–64, 40,000 tons were shipped to various points on the railroad, and a vast amount used for home consumption.

The town contains five churches, viz: Methodist, Presbyterian, (each of these denominations have fine buildings,) two German Protestant and Catholic. It is also well supplied with educational advantages, having two fine seminaries under the management of able teachers. It has a Masonic lodge, Olive Branch No. 38, which meets on the first and third Tuesday evenings of each month; also Danville Lodge No. 69 I. O. O. F., which meets every Friday evening.

The surrounding country is well supplied with water and rich in all natural resources which make it desirable for agricultural and stock raising purposes.

Dayton.

The village of Dayton, in the township of the same name, and central part of LaSalle county, is situated on the west bank of Fox river, four miles above Ottawa. It was settled in 1829, by John Green, who carried on farming on an extensive scale. He also paid considerable attention to raising improved stock, and some very superior Durham and Spanish breeds were brought here by him. The immense and unfailing water privileges on the river at Dayton, bespeak for it, at no distant period, a place among the leading manufacturing towns in the great west. The water is drawn from the Fox river feeder under a 20 feet lead. It has two large flouring mills, one saw mill, one wool carding and cloth dressing establishment, and a machine shop, already in operation, and yet there is still ample surplus water power to drive 50 run of burrs. There are two school houses and two churches within a mile and a half of this place. Distance from Chicago via Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, 88 miles.

A flourishing city in the township of the same name, and central part of Macon county, of which it is the capital. It is situated one mile north from Sangamon river, at the crossing of the Illinois Central and Great Western Railroads, via. which roads merchandize is received from Chicago and New York. The town was laid out in 1829, and surrounded by a rich and thickly settled agricultural district, and is rapidly increasing in wealth, population and business of a permanent character. The Magnet, (daily and weekly,) and Chronicle, (weekly,) newspapers are published here. The churches, (of which there are six,) county and other public buildings, and some of the private residences, are alike creditable to the taste and enterprise of the citizens. There are in the town several manufacturing establishments. Population about 2,500.

DeKalb,

A post town and station in the township and central part of DeKalb county, on the Galena and Chicago Union Railroad, 58 miles west from Chicago. The surrounding country is undulating, the greater part being prairie, interspersed with tracts of good timber, and the soil is rich and very productive. The county is drained by affluents of the Kishwaukee and Fox rivers. The climate is remarkably healthy, and the location of the town for business unsurpassed. Large quantities of grain are yearly shipped from here. There are several large warehouses, a steam flouring mill, a planing mill, several churches and a good Union school building. The town although but a few years growth has now a population of about 2,000, and from the resources of the surrounding country, its steady growth, facilities for transportation and proximity to Chicago market, it is reasonable to predict that at no far distant day, it will in point of business, size, and wealth, compare favorably with most inland towns in the state.

Dixon.

A thriving City on Rock River in the township of Dixon, the county seat of Lee county, at the crossing of the Illinois Central, and the Galena & Chicago Union Railroads. The district surrounding the town was in possession of the Winnebago Indians until 1830, in which year the land where the town now stands, was purchased from the government by John Dixon, Esq. In 1837 it was made the county seat, and in 1840 a court house was erected. Though possessing superior advantages, the town seems to have advanced but slowly, till the opening of the railroad, about the year 1850, since which time the increase has been rapid, and the wealth of the city at the present day will compare favorable with other cities in the State. Many large capitalists have availed themselves of the excellent water power in the town, and the fertile and productive land adjacent, whereby they have greatly enhanced their wealth. There are in the city several large flouring mills, two large foundries and machine shops, two large saw mills and a starch manufactory, besides several smaller manufacturing establishments of various kinds. The principal buildings are of stone; the streets running at right angles, ornamented with shade trees, are even and regular, giving to the city a very prepossessing appearance. There are many fine churches and public buildings worthy of note, among the latter of which is the Dixon Collegiate Institute, a splendid brick building, located on an eminence overlooking the town, and commanding a view of the river and surrounding country, having accommodation for 350 students, where the higher English branches and classics are taught. The Republican and Telegraph, weekly newspapers, are published here. There are several good hotels in the city. Population about 6000.

Dunleith,

An important village of Jo Daviess county, situated on the Mississippi river, opposite the city of Dubuque, Iowa, with which it is connected by ferry. It is the northern terminus of the Illinois Central Railroad, and during the season of navigation, is the point at which the boats of the Minnesota Packet Company connect with the railroad. This place has sprung up entirely since the completion of the Central Railroad, and it is to this work that it owes its importance. Like many of the western towns of sudden growth, Dunleith boasts of an enormous hotel, the "Argyle House," now rented to private families. It is situated in the great lead mining region, and is a point from which a large quantity of that metal is shipped. The village is located principally upon a plain at the foot of a limestone bluff, and contains, besides the hotel above alluded to, which is the principal building of the place, two churches and a fine public school, two hotels, a large reaper manufactory, iron foundry and machine shop, barrel factory, brewery, grain elevator, tannery, fanning mill factory, together with manufactories of wagons, tinware, etc. Large quantities of hay, grain, etc., are shipped from this point, both by rail and boat. The country immediately surrounding Dunleith is quite hilly and is undoubtedly rich in lead ore. Farther from the river the land is very rich and productive. Population about 1,500.

Du Page,

A township and post village of Will county, 30 miles from Chicago, via Lemont on the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad. It contains two churches, Methodist and Presbyterian. The township of Du Page is a very fertile tract, with a fair proportion of timber land and good water. Population, about 600. Postmaster, William G. Farmer.

DuQuoin,

A flourishing town located on Nine-mile prairie in the township of the same name, and south-eastern part of Perry county, on the Illinois Central Railroad, 76 miles north of Cairo, and 288 miles south from Chicago. It was settled in 1853, by Chester A. Keyes and — Metcalf, esqrs., the then proprietors of the land where the town is located, and has since grown, and still continues to grow, very rapidly. It has a city charter, (but the town is still working under the old town charter,) and a population of 2,500. The country adjacent is prairie, interspersed with strips of woodland, and is exceedingly fertile and excellent for raising all kinds of grain that are grown in the State. It is particularly adapted for fruit raising. Hundreds of acres of peach orchards are planted, from which large quantities of peaches are annually shipped north. Strawberries and small fruits also thrive well. Large quantities of sorghum are raised in the vicinity of DuQuoin, which is sold at St. Johns, a small town one mile north, where it is manufactured.

The land for some distance round DuQuoin is underlaid with a vein of bituminous coal of good quality, averaging six feet in thickness.

There are in the town three churches, Baptist, Methodist Episcopal, and Presbyterian, one Union graded school, and for which a fine building is shortly to be erected, a lodge each of Free Masons, Odd Fellows and Good Templars.

There are also in operation eight coal mines, from which large quantities of coal are yearly raised, and a much larger trade in coal would be done were there sufficient facilities for transportation. There are several brick yards, making a superior quality of brick, for which the clay is peculiarly adapted.

There are also two flouring mills, two wool carding shops, one foundry and machine shop, and one cotton gin. The DuQuoin Mining Journal (weekly) is published here.

The location, coal interest, wealth of the surrounding country, and steady growth and increasing wealth of a permanent character, bespeak for DuQuoin a rank among the principal towns of the State at no far distant period.

Effingham,

The county seat of Effingham county, is located on the Chicago Branch, Illinois Central Railroad, 199 miles south of Chicago, at the crossing of the great national thoroughfare leading from Cumberland, Maryland, to St. Louis, Mo. The located route of the Atlantic and Mississippi Railroad, on which considerable work has been done, also crosses at this place.

The town site was bought in 1853, by D. B. Alexander and S. W. Little, and a few acres laid into town lots. On the completion of the Illinois Central Railroad a brisk business sprang up at the depot. The prosperity here soon secured the removal of the county seat from Ewington to this place, and in 1861 the first Circuit Court was held. Since that time—notwithstanding the retarding influences of the rebellion—the place has been rapidly growing into importance, and is now the most flourishing town, and best trading point between Mattoon and Centralia. The surrounding country is very favorable for fruit, and perhaps the finest peaches that reach Chicago, are shipped from this point, where they are produced in great abundance.

The town contains three churches—Baptist, Methodist, and Roman Catholic, also a Lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows. The Effingham Gazette is published weekly by John Horny. It has a telegraph office. Population 1,000. Postmaster, David B. Alexander.

Elgin,

A flourishing and important city of Kane county, forty-two miles north-west from Chicago, on the line of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad. It is very pleasantly situated, on elevated ground, on both sides of the Fox River, and is surrounded by an excellent agricultural district, for which it forms the centre of trade. The "Fox River Valley," or "Elgin & State Line" Railroad connects with the G. & C. U. at this point. The river has a dam at this place, which furnishes the motive power for one woolen mill, four flour mills, two planing mills, and one saw mill.

Elgin has an active trade, and is noted as one of the largest shipping points in the State for butter. It contains an excellent hotel, the "Waverly House," together with several smaller ones, six churches, a bank of issue and a private banking house, a male and female academy, a Masonic Lodge, two newspapers, a large distillery, three breweries, a sorghum mill, tannery, and a large number of stores and mechanical shops. Evanston, Formerly called Ridgeville, an incorporated town of Cook county, so named in honor of Dr. Jno. Evans, lies on the shore of Lake Michigan, 11 miles north from Chicago, and contains about 1,500 inhabitants. The town is delightfully situated, and furnishes attractive suburban homes for business men of Chicago, whose families make up a large part of the population. The first settlement within the town was made in 1836, by Mr. A. McDaniel, A. Hatheway, C. H. Beaubien, Philip Rogers, John Dye, Wm Dennis, Timothy Sunderlin, J. C. Stebbins, Simon Doyle, and others followed in that and the succeeding year. Maj. E. H. Mulford, now an honored resident, settled here at an early day. Evanston is chiefly noted as the seat of the following literary institutions, established in 1855.

1. The North-Western University, with six Professors and Instructors, and 125 Students. It has 4,000 volumes in Library, five collections in Natural History and Geology, and property of the value of about $300,000, and an annual income of $6,000. Number of Alumni, 26. Hon. John Evans, pres. Board of Trustees.

2. The Garrett Biblical Institute, a theological school under the patronage of the M. E. Church, named in honor of the late Mrs. Eliza Garrett, by whose munificence it was founded. It has an endowment of the value of $250,000, four Professors, 60 Students, 3,000 volumes in Library. Number of graduates, 57. Hon. Grant Goodrich, pres. Board of Trustees. Bishop M. Simpson, D. D., president of Faculty.

3. The North-Western Female College was founded October 1st, 1855. The corner stone of the first college edifice was laid by Rev. Mathew Simpson, Bishop of the M. E. Church, on the 15th of June previous, the building was opened for college purposes January 1st, 1856, and destroyed by fire on the 26th of December of the same year. It was rebuilt in the summer of 1857, and re-opened on the 1st of October following, and has since been favored with a continued course of prosperity.

On the 19th January, 1859, it received from the State Legislature a very liberal charter, authorizing it to confer the highest literary degrees.

It has established an excellent character for the thoroughness of its course of study, and strict, thorough, mild and salutary government.

For an institution so recently established, its Library and Cabinet are very respectable, and constantly increasing. Pres. of Board of Trustees, Rev. H. Bannister, D. D.; Pres. of Faculty, W. P. Jones, M. A.; the Board of Teachers number six, and the alumni 29. Students in attendance about 70.

There is connected with the institution a Ladies Aid Fund, for the purpose of aiding young ladies of slender means in acquiring a liberal education, being yet in its infancy, its funds are small, but hopes are entertained that the liberality of a generous public will augment them.

Farmington,

Is an incorporated town of about one thousand inhabitants, situated on the Lewistown Branch of the C. B. & Q. Railroad, in the north-east corner of Fulton county, 24 miles west of Peoria.

It is surrounded by a fine prairie country, well improved and admirably adapted to farming. Well cultivated farms, substantial buildings, fine orchards, good fences, smooth roads, droves of stock, and a general appearance of thrift and good management, attract the eye of the stranger, and mark it as a place where years of intelligent and enterprising labor have improved upon great natural advantages. An abundance of coal and limestone of the best quality is found within three miles of the village, and timber in fair supply in the immediate neighborhood.

The first settlement was made here in October, 1827, by Jonah Marchant, Theodore and Charles Sargent, Thomas Ritchie, Job Brown, Abira Jones, and others. Abraham Marchant was the first white child born in this vicinity, Nov. 15th, 1828. The first marriage was that of Fountain Watkins and Eliza Marchant, in 1832, and the first death was that of Silas Chase, in 1831. Asa J. West, of Monmouth, preached the first sermon, and George Cutter first taught the young settlers their letters in the summer of 1832–3. The pioneer store was opened by George W. Little in 1833, and the first hotel was kept by James

Geo. R. Chittenden, General Agent for Ill., Wis., Iowa, Minn. & N. Indiana.

Mason, who is still known as the genial host of the "National." A block house was built here during the Black Hawk war, and the settlement furnished five soldiers for that campaign, all of whom are still residing in the neighborhood.

The village now contains seven churches: Baptist, Christian, Congregational, Episcopal, Episcopal Methodist, O. S. Presbyterian, and Universalist, well conducted schools, and a public library of over 500 volumes; also, Memento Lodge, No. 44, I. O. O. F., which meets every Saturday evening. There are five first class dry goods houses, two hotels, two flouring mills, an establishment for the manufacture of Wheeled Corn Cultivators, Wm. C. Day, propr., besides a large number of other trades and pursuits.

Freeport.

Freeport, the county seat of Stephenson county, is a thriving busy city of seven or eight thousand inhabitants, lying on the west bank of the Pecatonica river, fifty miles southeast of Galena, thirty-five miles from Savanna, on the Mississippi,and 120 miles from Chicago. The first house built on the site of the city was a log hut erected in 1835. In 1849 it contained about 1000 inhabitants only. From 1852–54 its growth dates, since which time it has year by year steadily increased in size, numbers, wealth, and all that goes to make up a prosperous town. The Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, has its western terminus here, and from a junction at this point with the Illinois Central Railroad. The Racine & Mississippi and Northern Illinois Railroad,both completed, and doing a large business, have each a terminus here. Freeport, therefore, enjoys rare railroad facilities, and is centrally located. The surrounding country is one of the richest farming regions in the State—rolling prairie, well watered, with living springs, and plenty of timber near at hand.

The P. Manny Reaper Factory is located here, and there are several other large manufacturing establishments—two flouring mills, two sash and blind factories, a planing mill, machine shops, fanning mill factory, an iron foundry, a brass foundry, soap and candle factory, marble works, a tannery, three breweries, and two distilleries. There are three weekly, one monthly and one Quarterly newspaper published in the city. One of the printing offices — the "Journal"—employs steam and runs three power presses constantly. There are two elegant and costy Union School houses, with a full system of graded Union free schools. The churches in the city number twelve, and comprise all the leading denominations. There are two National Banks already doing business, and one individual Bank. Seven home insurance companies are located here—The Stephenson, The Farmer, The American, The Winnesheik, The Columbian, The Fire and Tornado, and The Adams. All these are home companies, some of them many years old, and all managed by reliable, honorable, responsible men. They are thriving and enterprising, and are making Freeport the "Hartford" of the west. They have won an excellent reputation, and labor to preserve it. The Post Office in Freeport mails from 60,000 to 80,000 letters per quarter, and the office pays a surplus to the government. There are but two offices in Illinois that do this. Altogether, Freeport is a live wide awake town, and destined to be a large inland city.

Fulton,

A small city of Whiteside county, situated in a level and healthy location, on the Mississippi River, and on the G. & C. U. R. R., opposite the city of Lyons, Iowa, 136 miles due west from Chicago. It was at one time a place of considerable importance, being the western terminus of the Chicago, Fulton & Iowa line of the G. & C. U. R. R. The road has since been continued down the river, opposite Clinton, where it crosses to an island, with a ferry over the main channel, thence continuing on through Iowa to the Missouri.

The city is connected by steam ferry with Lyons, and is a regular landing for the boats of the Northern Packet Company. The surrounding country is mostly rich prairie, gently undulating, well watered and healthy.

Fulton has five churches, two hotels, a lodge each of Masons and Good Templars, a public school, flour mill, brewery, tannery, saw mill, railroad repair shop, etc.; also, a military academy, known as the "Western Union College;" the college building is a fine structure of limestone, four stories high, originally erected in 1855 as a hotel (the "Dement House"), at a cost of $110,000; it was opened as a military academy in September, 1861, and has had an average attendance, each year, of 187 cadets. The system of instruction embraces a thorough collegiate course, combined with military drill and discipline throughout. The arms are supplied by the general government.

Galena.

An important city and the capital of Jo Daviess County, in the north western corner of the State, on both sides of the "Fevre" or "Galena" River, five miles from its junction with the Mississippi, also on the main line of the Illinois Central Railroad, which terminates at Dunleith, seven miles above the city. It is 445 miles above St. Louis, and 379 below the Falls of St. Anthony, 180 miles north-west from Chicago and 150 miles south-west by west from Milwaukee. It is noted as the commercial centre of the great lead mining region of Illinois and Wisconsin, and is, in many respects, one of the most interesting and remarkable cities of the State.

In 1826 the population of Galena village was about 150, and the place consisted of a cluster of about 20 log cabins. In 1828, 100 houses and a population of 800; in 1832, a population of 1,000; in 1839 the city was incorporated. In 1841, there were 650 houses and a population of 2,200; at present, a population of about 10,000.

This large and steady increase has been maintained by the admirable position of the location, and the development of its mineral resources. The time is coming when it will necessarily become one of the largest and most flourishing cities of the State. No more beautiful place can be found, its railroad and river advantages, and adjacency to the Mississippi river must always make Galena a city of great importance.

The ground upon which the main portion of the city is built, is very irregular and uneven, extending along the valley of the river, and up numerous valley or rather gullies, which penetrate the hills on both sides.

The bluffs, which are composed of a species of soft, porous limestone, encircle the whole city, and in many cases rise in abrupt precipices. As the place has increased, houses have been built upon and streets cut into the face of these bluffs. To a stranger entering the city for the first time, it presents a very singular and striking aspect, as he will see, rising upon either hand, precipitous rocks, with street above street, and houses from one to two hundred feet above his head.

The cliffs are in several places ascended by long flights of wooden steps, and there are several houses that can be approached only by almost perpendicular stairways. On a closer inspection of the place, the somewhat disagreeable impressions of a first glance are dissipated by the romantic beauty of the scenery, as viewed from the surrounding hills. From the top of the principal bluff the visitor can look down upon the main business portion of the city, lying directly at his feet, though a correct idea of its size and appearance can only be obtained by traversing all its streets. Several of the most populous streets are almost completely hidden in deep ravines and behind precipitous masses of rock. Nestled among the hills are many beautiful and costly private residences, with fine churches, school houses, and tasteful cottages.

The year 1857 was probably the zenith of the prosperity of Galena. The total value of exports being upwards of $2,100,000, but since that time, owing to the causes hinted at above, the trade and population of the city have gradually declined, until at the present time it has probably reached its lowest point, and is now showing some signs of reviving life. The lead interest is of immense importance, and can never be seperated from the city, while the healthfulness of its location and the productiveness of the farming country by which it is surrounded, will always contribute to make it a favorite point for trade, and as a place of residence.

In 1857 there were daily lines of boats to St. Louis, St. Paul, and intermediate ports, with fifteen lines of coaches running to all the principal points in this region of country. In the summer of 1863, the navigation of the Galena River by steamboats was entirely suspended, and the levee, at which, a few years before, a dozen first-class boats were frequently lying at one time, was entirely deserted, and nearly every store fronting upon it was closed. Of the fifteen lines of stages, two only are now running.

The city is surrounded by numerous small streams, located upon which are various manufactories, the products of which are mostly brought to the city. At the present time one of the leading branches of business conducted here is that of pork packing, it being, in this respect, one of the most important points in the State. An immense quantity of grain, wool, butter, and other produce, is shipped annually.

The most prominent building in the place is the "De Soto House," an immense six story hotel, built in the city's palmiest days, at a cost of about $100,000, exclusive of furniture, which was of the most elegant description. The city contains, besides the county buildings, the postoffice and custom house, a handsome structure of Nauvoo limestone, a United States Marine Hospital, a convent of the Sisters of Mercy, thirteen churches, a lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows, fourteen hotels, (the "De Soto" and "Tyler" being first class,) ten public schools, two private banking houses, and a bank of issue, having a capital of $50,000; an insurance company, two daily newspapers, (publishing weekly editions, also,) two steam saw mills, a plow factory, iron foundry and machine shop, pottery, vinegar factory, brush factory, two soap and candle factories, eight breweries, together with numerous manufactories of furniture, wagons, tinware, etc., a more comprehensive idea of which can be obtained by reading the annexed list of trades, professions, etc. The "Fevre," "Fever," "Bean," or "Galena" River, upon which the city is built, is more properly a slough of the Mississippi, being filled by the back water from that stream. Formerly the depth of water in the Fevre corresponded proportionately with that in the Mississippi, but since the construction of the railroad along its banks, the washings have been so great as to fill up the channel, and to prevent navigation except in high stages of water. The peculiar name of the river is supposed to be an English corruption of the French name "La Riviere au Feve," i. e. "Bean River." The name "Galena" is now the recognized appellation of the river. Four handsome bridges span the stream opposite the city. Three of them are draw bridges, one being used by the railroad.

The lead region extends from east to west 87 miles, and from north to south 54 miles. It includes a strip of eight townships in Iowa, west of the Mississippi, ten townships in northern Illinois, and sixty-two townships in south-western Wisconsin. These last seventy-two townships are directly accessible to Galena, and are what is usually termed the "Galena Mines." This section contains an area of nearly 1,000,000 acres, and embraces some of the best farming lands in the north-western country. The mineral is known to exist in greater or less quantities, in all parts of this district, and it is not unfrequently the case that a valuable "lead" is "struck" on lands that are under cultivation, and while the miners are blasting the rock and taking out the ore beneath, the farmer is cultivating his crop above. The ore has been "struck" in every direction throughout the entire lead district, though in hundreds of cases shafts have been sunk and thousands of dollars expended in fruitless search for mineral in the immediate neighborhood of the richest "diggings." Lead mining is, however, the great staple of the district, and some large fortunes have been made, while to the entire mining population, it is a source of industry and remuneration. There is, however, not a little singularity in the leads, some of which are very rich, and in the immediate neighborhood of shafts which have proven fruitless. This is always the case in a mining district, and only what may be expected. The mineral, in the Galena mines, is usually found in horizontal veins, in the solid limestone, varying from half an inch to ten or twelve inches in thickness. It is sometimes found in perpendicular veins or sheets, and frequently in solid masses, in some instances of several tons weight. The ore of different mines varies slightly in purity, though the average of pure lead in the ore is about 70 per cent. In some mines the mineral is found in regularly shaped triangular, square, and octagonal blocks of from half to two inches in thickness, and frequently irregularly massed together.

The most noted "diggings" in the vicinity of Galena are at present known as "Wise's Lead," or "New California," about six miles south of the city, in a bluff upon a "slough," a short distance from the Mississippi. These diggings were discovered but a few years since, and have proved very productive. At this place the mining is done both by sinking perpendicular shafts and by boring horizontally into the side of the bluff. The horizontal openings have, in this locality, proved most productive. At the diggings visited by the editor, (known as "Marsden's,") the mineral was struck in a side opening, at about 200 feet from the surface, and the gallery continued under the bluff for about 800 feet, with veins of mineral, of more or less value, the entire distance, from its first appearance to the end of the present excavations. The horizontal openings are usually about three feet wide and vary in height from three to ten feet. A small wooden railroad track is laid along the bottom of the opening, upon which is propelled by hand, a car about the size of an ordinary wheel-barrow. In portions of the mine the visitor is compelled to crouch on his hands and knees and crawl, an operation which, to a timid person, is anything but pleasant, especially when he has to carry a candle in one hand, and trust his feet to a slippery plank. The miners are Cornishmen, Germans and Irish, and work in alternate gangs, both night and day. The average wages of the miners in the fall of 1863, was $1.50 per day; in ordinary seasons it varies from $1.00 to $1.50. The temperature of the mines is warm and pleasant, and remains the same both in summer and winter. The mineral on being brought from the mine, is subjected to a thorough washing, and after being cleansed from dirt and stones, is carted to the smelting furnace, where it is broken up and converted into pigs of lead, requiring about 100 lbs. of the ore to each pig, weighing 70 lbs. At the "New California Diggings" the ground for nearly three miles, in the face of the bluff and on the narrow strip of land below it, is literally honey-combed with shafts, most of them adandoned. When a rich lead is discovered it usually has the effect to set the mining community wild with visions of rapid fortune, and they forthwith commence digging like moles in the vicinity of the lucky miner, until the edge is taken off their ardor by failure, when they abandon the work, and their shaft is left to designate the locality of their ruined hopes.

There are unmistakable indications that the lead mines in the vicinity of Galena were known and worked, to a limited extent, by the aborigines, at a very early period, long before the white man visited the country. The French, as early as 1654, were certainly aware of the existence of the mineral in this section, though we have no positive record that they were practically engaged in mining until 1712, in which year Louis XIV made grants of mineral lands to Anthony Crozat, and the business of mining by the whites was commenced, and has been prosecuted, in different portions of the lead regions, by both whites and Indians, with more or less vigor, up to the present time. Until 1822 the mines were wrought irregularly, by any parties choosing to work them, but in that year, the territory having passed into the possession of the United States, a reservation, supposed to include the entire lead mining district of Wisconsin and Illinois was made by the Government, and the balance of the land, including all that portion lying between the Wisconsin and Illinois rivers, and extending east from the Mississippi to Fox river, was relinquished to the Indians. After the year 1822, the value of the mines attracted the attention of the Government, and a Lead Commissioner was appointed, and leases granted to all who applied, with authority to work the mines for a fixed excise, with guarantees of protection from the Indians. Without obtaining these leases no parties were permitted to work the mines or engage in smelting. In 1824, Lieutenant Thomas was appointed U. S Superintendent of the mines, and from this time, their reputation rapidly extended throughout the country, and men flocked from all parts to the new "El Dorado" of America. In 1827 a village was laid off by Lieutenant Thomas, and styled "Galena," that being the name applied in mineralogy to the lead ore. A small settlement, consisting of a few log huts, had previously existed at the "forks" of the river, a short distance above the present site of the city. This settlement was styled by the French "La Pointe," and by the Americans "Frederick's Point," after the individual, a baker for the miners, who located it. The first actual settler in the valley of Fevre river was Mr. Jesse Shull, who built a trading house at this point in 1819, in which year the celebrated "Buck Lead" was being extensively wrought by the Indians.

In the early history of the mines it was customary for a great many persons to engage as miners during the summer months who were engage in farming during the balance of the year. The marvelous stories of fortunes made at the mines attracted many of the farmers from the southern portion of the State, who, after putting in their spring crops, would ascend the Mississippi, labor at the mines until fall, and then return to harvest, thus imitating the fish known as "suckers," which ascend the rivers in spring to deposit the spawn and return in the fall, hence such persons were called "Suckers," and the term has since become the common appellation of all the citizens of the State. In 1825 the number of miners at these mines was 100, in 1826, 400, in 1827, 1,600.

There were at one time 24 smelting furnaces within the county of Jo Daviess, but of late years, the majority have been abandoned as unprofitable. The best now in operation in the vicinity of Galena is that of Samuel Hughlett & Son, on the "Small Pox" river, a few miles south of the city. This is a new establishment and is constructed on the most approved plan. It is situated between precipitous rocks, immediately over the bed of the creek, and has two blast furnaces with patent pumping bellows, propelled by water power. The operation of smelting is quite simple, the ore being merely thrown into an open furnace through which a strong blast is regularly kept up. The mass is stirred every five minutes, and as the ore melts, it runs off in a small sluice into an iron holder immediately under the mouth of the furnace, where it is skimmed and dipped into pig moulds, each mould having the brand of the smelter imprinted in the bottom. The pigs are removed when cool and are piled up ready for shipment. The smelters buy the ore of the miners, generally realizing, after deducting the cost of labor, impurities, cost of shipment, etc., from one-fourth of a cent to three cents per pound, according to the state of the market.

The first record of the amount of lead shipped from the Galena mines is that of 1821, in which year the total amount was 335,130 pounds, in 1827, 5,182,180 pounds, and in 1845, which was the most successful year yet known, the amount was 54,494,850 pounds. The yield for 1863 was about 34,000,000 pounds. The total amount shipped from the commencement of the mines, under the government of the United States, of which record has been preserved, will reach the neighborhood of 1,000,000,000 pounds, for which has been realised the sum of $50,000,000, nearly all of which was owned and invested in local enterprises by residents of the city of Galena. A vast amount of which no record has been kept, has undoubtedly been shipped from this point since the settlement of the country. The city of Galena is noted from its being the home of that brave and successful patriot, Lieut. General Ulysses S. Grant, U. S. A.

Galesburg, Knox C

Is situated on the height of the water-shed between the Mississippi and Illinois rivers, at that point on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy R. R. where the Burlington and Peoria branches leave the main trunk, and is by rail about 165 miles W. S. W. from Chicago, 100 miles N. N. E. from Quincy, 50 miles W. N. W. from Peoria and 40 miles E. N. E. from Burlington, thus making it the great railroad center for over four hundred miles of road.

History.—In 1836, in accordance with a long-cherished plan of Rev. Geo. W. Gale, D. D., for founding institutions of learning in the West, eleven thousand acres of land were bought where Galesburg now is, a town was laid out in the centre of the tract, and the lots and farm lands so appraised as to repay the original cost, and leave about $40,000 which was to form an endowment for a college. In February, 1837, the college was chartered under the name of "Knox Manual Labor College," and received in fee simple the lands bought for its endowment. The early history of the town is that of Knox College, also, as the founding of one gave rise to the other, and for many years the growth and prosperity of the town depended directly upon that of the college.

In the autumn of 1837, the first buildings were erected and the school opened, and now college and town pursued the even tenor of their way, until the railroad fever of 1850 swept past and secured to the town the four railroads now leading from it. Vacant lands immediately became saleable at prices so large as to secure at once an endowment of over a quarter of a million of dollars to Knox College, and the growth of the town went forward at a rapid pace.

But still mindful of its literary birth, in 1851 it gave rise to another institution of learning, under the patronage of the Universalists, named "Lombard University," after one of its best and earliest friends. In a very short time, through the untiring exertions of its founders, it secured a liberal endowment and patronage, and with Knox College and its different departments, justly gives to the town the name "College City."

In 1857 the town became an incorporated city, with a clause in its charter allowing the people by vote at the first election, to license or forever prohibit the sale of intoxicating liquors within its limits. By a vote of over three to one the prohibition was adopted, and still stands in force.

The Colleges stand first as objects of note.

is situated near the middle of the city, in a park of about thirty acres, well set with forest trees. Its main building is a stately edifice, costing about $45,000. North of the Park is the Female Seminary connected with the college. The building is large, and cost over $40,000. The college owns property to the amount of one third of a million of dollars, and now has over 200 students in attendance.

THE COLLEGE was chartered in 1836–7, and opened in the Fall of 1838 with a preparatory school of fifty scholars. It has three departments, Collegiate, Female Collegiate and Academic. The Academic department became a necessity, in the exigencies of a new country to fit students for the College proper. The female department was an after thought, secured by amendment of the charter, and though placed under the same Board, is distinct in its arrangement and course of study, and confined to a separate building. The original design was to found a college in the appropriate meaning of that term, and is thus expressed:

"SEC. 2. The object of said corporation shall be to promote the general interests of literature, and to qualify young men in the best manner for the various professional and business occupations of society, by carrying into effect a thorough system of mental, moral and physical education." This is still the leading design.

THE MAIN COLLEGE EDIFICE, containing chapel, recitation and lecture rooms, cabinet, laboratory, and three libraries, viz: College, of 4,000 volumes, and the two society libraries, of about 750 each, stands in the center of Broad street, which expands into College Park, an enclosure of almost nine acres, lying between the College and the Seminary building. On either side of the main College edifice stands East College and Williston Hall, furnishing dormitories for about 60 students, and commodious rooms for the two Literary Societies. Surrounding these buildings lie about 17 acres of ground devoted to recreation. Both these grounds and the College Park are set out with forest trees, and the design is to lay them out in the modern English method, with additional trees and shrubs scattered over them, and with winding foot paths, giving the visitor a variegated view. Plats will be laid off and devoted to shrubs, vines, and flowering plants to be cultivated by the students. The Trustees and the Faculty will spare no pains to make these grounds increasingly attractive from year to year.

There are two courses of study in college, the regular and scientific. The last occupies three years, and comprises the entire college course, with the exception of Greek and Latin. Students completing this course are entitled to the degree of Bachelor of Science. The design of this is not to lower the standard of liberal education, or in the least to depreciate the classics; but to give a Scientific and English education to a class of young men whose circumstances forbid their taking the thorough course. The regular course is intended to be as extensive and thorough as that in the older and best institutions of the country.

THE ACADEMIC DEPARTMENT has two courses of study, Classical and English. The first prepares the student for College or Seminary. The second is a full course of English studies, and affords special advantages to those who intend to become teachers.

THE FEMALE COLLEGIATE DEPARTMENT embraces a three years' course of such studies as are usually pursued in the higher Female Seminaries, including music and all the ornamental branches. The building occupied by this department is large, containing chapel, recitation rooms, parlors, music, drawing and painting rooms; besides rooms for the accommodation of about eighty young lady boarders. These are large, airy, well carpeted, and fully and neatly furnished. All young ladies from abroad are required to board in the Seminary, without special reasons to the contrary, and are under the careful supervision of the Principal. No greater advantages for thorough mental and moral culture it is thought can be found in the Western country.

THE BUILDINGS are of brick, with all the modern improvements. The main College edifice cost about $45,000. The Seminary building, $40,000.

THE COLLEGE YEAR consists of 40 weeks, commencing the first Thursday in September and ending the 25th of June, and is divided into three terms of unequal length, giving a recess of two weeks for the holidays of Christmas and New Year's. The regular annual commencement is in the last week of June.

THE EXPENSES of the Institution are put down to the lowest figure, to bring its advantages within the reach of all. Those who have charge of its interests realize their responsibilities, and will be earnest in their efforts to make it a blessing to the country. While they do not desire at all to make it denominational, they hope to have it under the influence of decidedly Evangelical Christian religion.

The present number in attendance is over 200.

ITS FACULTY AND INSTRUCTORS are as follows:

Rev. William Stanton Curtis, D. D., President, and Professor of Intellectual Philosophy, International and Constitutional Law.

————, Professor of Moral Philosophy, Rhetoric and Elocution.

LOMBARD UNIVERSITY.—Located in the eastern part of the town, near the Peoria Railroad, has a fine large gothic edifice, erected at a cost of about $30,000. and holds property in buildings, lands and scholarship notes to the amount of about $100,000. Being the only college under the exclusive control of the Universalists in the entire north-west, and receiving their endorsement and patronage, it forms the great educational centre for that denomination. Over 200 students are now in attendance in the different departments.

KNOX FEMALE COLLEGE.

GALESBURG, ILL.

THE PUBLIC SCHOOLS of the city are well graded and well taught, but are, at present, obliged to occupy rooms entirely unworthy a city that boasts of its educational privileges, but this want will soon be met by the erection of first class buildings to accommodate all. About 1,200 pupils are enrolled in these schools.

OF CHURCHES there are fourteen, embracing the usual variety, and their well-filled places of worship attest the pre-eminent church going character of the community.

MANUFACTORIES.—First among these stand George W. Brown's "Corn Planter Shop." Mr. Brown began business here in 1855, and, so great has been the demand for his Planters, that he now works one hundred hands in his extensive and admirably arranged shops, and manufactured for the spring trade of 1864, 3,000 Planters, using in their construction 130,000 lbs. steel, 100,000 lbs. wrought iron, 240,000 lbs. cast iron, and 350,000 feet of lumber, beside large quantities of bolts, screws and nails. Since commencing business he has made and sold over 10,000 Planters.

J. P. Frost & Co.'s Foundry and Machine Shops, give employment to over fifty men, in the manufacture of almost every thing usually made in such shops. They daily melt up about two tons of iron for casting, but employ their force chiefly in the manufacture of sorghum mills, of which they made and sold over one thousand last autumn, and "Harris' Beater Hay Press," the demand for which exceeds their capacity to supply.

There is another foundry and machine shop recently erected near the depot, and already doing a thriving business.

The "Western Beater Hay Press Co." recently organized with a capital stock of $100,000, has its headquarters at the office of J. P. Frost & Co., George I. Bergen, general agent, and bids fair to develope and systematize the hay trade in the west, thus proving of great advantage to the agricultural interest of the country.

Messrs. Bergen & Sisson, who have for over fourteen years carried on one of the largest carriage and wagon factories in the county, are making extensive preparations for building their newly patented Improved Corn Planter.

Reynolds & Babcock are just opening a steam factory for the manufacture of Horse Rakes.

Three steam Flouring Mills, two Carding Machines, several Planing Mills, many Plough Shops, a half dozen Harness establishments, Cabinet Shops, and, indeed, shops for the manufacture of almost anything and every thing Yankee ingenuity has invented, are among the institutions of the city.

The immense hay barn of Watkins & Bro. is the largest establishment of the kind in the west, and presses from thirty to fifty tons in twenty-four hours. It is near the depot and will well well repay a visit to the passer-by.

The incessant stir and activity on the Railroad depot grounds, the round house for twenty-five engines, the machine shops, the car shops, the immense piles of bridge timbers alive with men preparing them for their different destinations in every direction on the roads. The railroad offices and their busy gentlemanly occupants, all bespeak the great amount of business carried on, while the dwellings of the hundreds of railroad employees make quite a village.

During the year ending April, 1861, 12,929 passengers went eastward from Galesburg, and 18,209 westward, and for the year ending April 1864, from one-third to one-half more passengers went from this depot. The amount of freight shipped westward for the year end ing April 1861, was 8,459,045 lbs., eastward, 36,203,316 lbs., and this increased from one-third to one-half would not more than give the freights for the year ending April, 1864.

The mercantile interests of the place are carried on through seventeen large dry goods and clothing stores, seventeen grocery stores, ten boot, shoe and leather stores, four hardware and stove stores, four drug stores, two book stores, and five jewelry and silver-ware establishments, many of which do an extensive wholesale and jobbing business to smaller towns in the vicinity.

The money interest of the city is looked after by the "First National Bank of Galesburg," with a capital of $100,000, C. H. Mathews, president, and E. B. Chapman, cashier, "A. D. Reed's Banking House," and that of "Sydney Myers & Co."

Strangers are "taken in" by "mine host" of the "Depot Hotel," "The Bancroft House," "The Barton House" and "The Galesburg House," and the wants of the inner man attended to in the most approved manner.

Two weekly newspapers, "The Free Democrat" and "Knox County Observer," post up the people in the doings of the world and "the rest of mankind."

The most skillful photographers are on almost every corner, doing up live folks with the sun's rays, while Judson and Anderson prepare all sorts of marble to adorn the graves of our friends who have gone before.

The city is much scattered, and, from the great profusion of shade trees and shubbery that line the streets and adorn the yards in summer, seems almost like a forest. Most of the streets are provided with good plank walks and crossings.

There are but few particularly expensive and elegant private residences, but it is the almost universal remark of strangers who visit the city, that there is scarcely another city in the west that exhibits such general marks of the neatness, taste, thrift, enterprise, industry, intelligence and morality of its inhabitants. If there are few marks of great wealth, there are no marks of extreme poverty, and the liberality and patriotism of the people is well shown by the doings of the "Ladies' Soldiers' Aid Society" of the city, during the last year. It has raised and sent to the soldiers, clothing and supplies to the amount of almost $3,500, besides doing much for their families at home and sending over $2,000 in cash to other commissions.

The intelligence of the people may be seen in the fact that the best scientific lecturers, such as Agassiz, lecture here, and always to well-filled and paying houses. No other city in the State, except Chicago, has patronized such lecturers so well as Galesburg.

That the people read much is evident from the number and size of its public libraries: Knox College Library, 4,000 volumes; Adelphi of Knox College, 750 volumes; Gnothautii of Knox College, 750 volumes; Lombard University, 1,500; Young Men's Library Association, about 2,000 volumes, which is increased yearly by the amount of $350 worth of books; and the libraries belonging to each of the thirteen Sunday Schools of the city, several of which comprise over 500 volumes.

Gallatia,

A post village in the township and county of Saline, about 34 miles west of DeSoto Station, on the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad.

Galloway,

A small post village in Eagle township, La Salle county, about 10 miles south of Ottawa, and 94 miles from Chicago. It contains two Catholic churches; United Brethren and O. S. Presbyterians meet in the schoolhouse. In the east side of Eagle township are the celebrated Vermilion coal banks. The coal is exceedingly good and inexhaustible in quantity, the veins being from four and a half to seven feet thick. It is excellent for gas, and is used by the Ottawa Gas Company in preference to the Ottawa coal. The land is well adapted for agricultural purposes, being dry and rolling prairie. Population of township, 1,100. Postmaster, George R. Belford.

Galum,

A postoffice in South-Western township, Perry county.

Galva.

A fine and flourishing town of Henry county, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, 144 miles distant from Chicago. It is admirably located on the highest land between Lake Michigan and the Mississippi River. It is the centre of a rich farming district, and therefore well situated for a wealthy and industrious population. The town was commenced in 1854, and has gradually increased until it now presents all the animation of a busy community of prosperous merchants.

Wood and coal are easily obtained within a short distance of the town, while there is an abundance of excellent water and some living springs. The usual advantage of educational institutions are enjoyed, having a fine large school house, (graded,) with about 250 scholars in attendance, under an able staff of teachers. There are also four organized churches, namely: Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian and Congregational, with good houses of worship. Here also is published the Union (weekly) newspaper. The population is about 2,500 persons.

Geneseo.

Is a large and flourishing town of Henry County, on the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, 159 miles west of Chicago. This town is beautifully situated in a rich farming district, and is one of the finest grain depots in the State. There is probably no town of its size where so large a grain business is done, and consequently, a large mercantile business is here carried on.

The public schools of this town are large and well attended, while the religious advantages are equal to any, there being seven churches of the usual evangelical denominations. Two newspapers are published here, namely, the Republic and Union Advocate. Mails are received and despatched daily. Several good hotels are in operation, and the town presents the aspect of a busy and industrious people, with all the elements of social life well developed, and sustained by an excellent community of between two and three thousand people.

Genessee Grove.

A postoffice in the township of Genessee and county of Whiteside.

Geneva,

A flourishing village, the capital of Kane Co., on the Dixon Air Line Railroad, about 35 miles west from Chicago. It is pleasantly situated on elevated ground, on both sides of the Fox river. It contains an elegant court house, erected at a cost of $60,000, together with a number of fine private residences. The river furnishes an excellent water power, which has been improved by the erection of two flouring mills, and an extensive manufactory of agricultural implements. The "Kane County Advertiser," a weekly newspaper, is published here; also the "Gospel Banner," a semi-monthly religious magazine. At the office of the latter publication, has just been issued an elaborate and curious work, entitled "The Emphatic Diaglott, containing the original Greek Text of the New Testament, with an Intelineary English Translation," with notes and references. The entire work of translation, composition, printing, electrotyping, etc., was performed by Mr. Benjamin Wilson, entirely in his own establishment, and has occupied his time, principally, for upwards of three years. Population of the village, 1,500.

Hennepin,

A post town and township of Putnam county, on the east bank of the Illinois River, 110 miles from Chicago. It contains two churches, Methodist and Roman Catholic, and a Masonic Lodge No. 70, an Odd Fellow's Lodge, No. 118, and a Good Templars Lodge. The high, dry plain upon which Hennepin is situated, extends more than half the length of the town, is about 70 feet above high water mark, and of unsurpassed fertility. Its deep sandy soil needs no drainage to make it arable, and on the other hand, its porous nature permits exhalation from beneath, that to a great extent neutralizes the effect of drought. The high broken grounds bordering the river are preeminently adapted to the production of fruit. The apple, peach, cherry, plum and pear attain their highest perfection and flavor. The grape in health, vigor and productiveness, is surpassed in no part of the United States. Its culture is increasing and will soon constitute a material element in the domestic and social economy. The lesser fruits also thrive well. The high prairie lands, back from the river, are rich, dry and undulating, producing all the grains and grasses that help to build up an independent agricultural community. Population, 700. Postmaster, Henry Casson.

Jacksonville.

Jacksonville, the county seat of Morgan county, is a pleasantly built town, situated in the middle of a fertile and undulating prairie, and bordered on the east and north by Mauvaisterre Creek, a small tributary of the Illinois River.

It is on the line of the Great Western Railway, the oldest railroad in the state, 22 miles east of the Illinois River, 34 miles west of Springfield, and 222 miles south-west of Chicago, at the junction of the G. W. R. W. with the Chicago, Jacksonville & Alton and the Illinois River Railroads.

By the Quincy & Toledo Railroad, and its branch from Clayton to Keokuk, Jacksonville is connected on the west with Keokuk, and the Des Moines Valley Railroad, in Iowa, and with Palmyra, St. Joseph, and all intermediate points in Missouri; on the east, the Great Western Railway furnishes, by its connections with the Wabash Valley Railroad, and other important roads, the most direct communication with New York, and the other eastern cities, and by its intersection with the Chicago, Alton & St. Louis Railroad, at Springfield, and with the Illinois Central at Decatur, and the Chicago Branch at Tolono, ample facilities for communication with the other parts of the State.

The completion of the Illinois River Railroad, will unite Jacksonville with Peoria and its connections, and the completion of the Chicago, Jacksonville & Alton Railroad, will give direct connection with La Salle and Chicago on the north, and with Alton and Saint Louis on the South. The construction of these two roads is already well advanced, and will probably be completed within the year, when Jacksonville will be second in Railroad facilities to no place in the state except Chicago.

The population of Jacksonville is 8,000, and rapidly increasing, but to the stranger, who judges from the area covered, it has the appearance of a much larger place. The neatness of its streets, the extent of its sidewalks, bordered with elms and other beautiful shade trees, the home like character of its residences, its spacious door yards, with their almost universal floral and horticultural embellishments, unite with many natural beauties of landscape to render Jacksonville a delightful summer residence. The value of the real estate in the town, exclusive of its public institutions, is about $5,000,000. It contains seventeen churches, one college, two female seminaries, one orphan asylum, three public schools, two weekly newspapers, and one monthly, an Agricultural Association, a Gas Light and Coke Co., two foundries, three woolen factories, four flour mills, one saw mill, one brewery, three hotels, two public halls, and two banks.

It is also the seat of the Illinois State Hospital for the Innsane, the Illinois State Institution for the Education of the Blind, and the Illinois State Institution for the Education of the Deaf and Dumb. For a more complete account of the last named, see page 46. The original plat of Jacksonville, having the present Public Square as its center, was laid out in 1825, by Thomas Arnott and Isaac Diaal. The first store was opened the same year, by George Rearick, Esq., who still resides in the place. His daughter, Catherine E., now the wife of Curtis F. Coun, Esq., of Keokuk, Ia., was the first child born in the place, who still lives.

In 1830 the population numbered 446, in 1840 it had increased to 1,900. During the next ten years it grew but slowly, the population in 1850 being 2,745, a gain of only 845. Since that time it has been increasing with a constant and healthful growth.

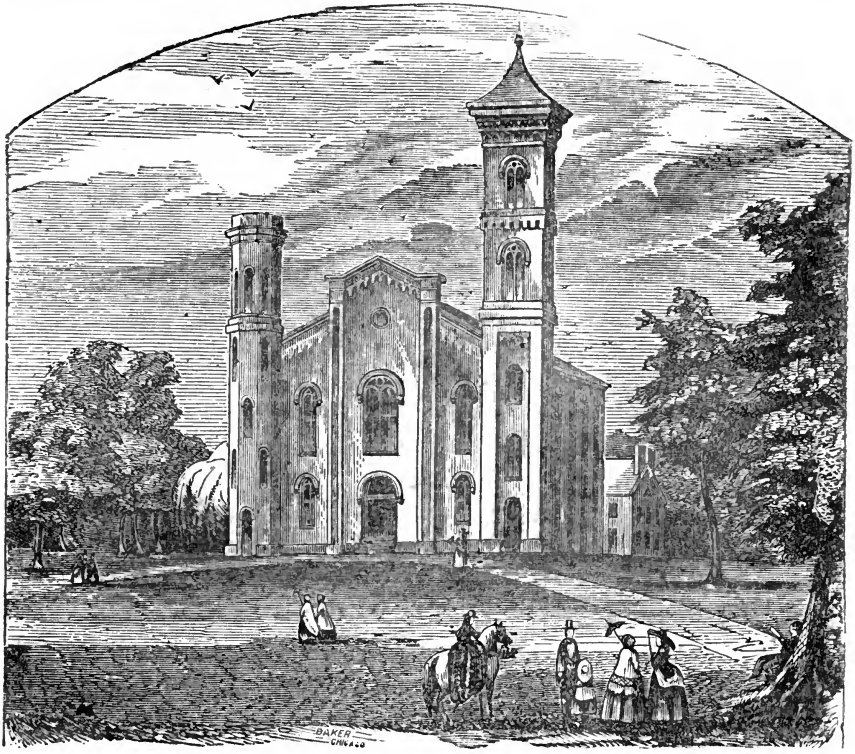
The agricultural interest is the predominant one, the surrounding country being of the best quality of prairie soil, well cultivated and handsomely improved. The farmers give their chief attention to the raising and handling of stock, the county being noted for the number and quality of the cattle which it sends to the eastern market.

The distinguishing characteristic of the place, however, is the number of its educational and benevolent institutions, of some of which a more extended account will be found below.

Jacksonville has never been incorporated under a city charter, its municipal affairs being under the management and control of a board of trustees elected annually.

In the Fire Department there are two organizations, viz: "Union Fire Co. No. 1," and "Rescue Fire Co. No. 2." Union Fire Co. No. 1, has repeatedly won prizes at various "firemen's tournaments" in different parts of the state.



ILLINOIS COLLEGE, JACKSONVILLE ILLINOIS.

FACULTY.

Rev. Julian M. Sturtevant, D. D., President, Professor of Moral Philosophy.

Samuel Adams, A. M., M. D., Professor of Chemistry and Natural Philosophy.

Rev. William D. Sanders, A. M., Professor of Rhetoric and Elocution.

Rev. Rufus Nutting, jr., A. M., Collins' Professor of the Greek and Latin Languages and Literature.

Rufus C. Crampton, A. M., Professor of Mathematics and Astronomy.

Besides the permanent Faculty, tutors are employed as circumstances may require.

TERMS.

Tuition in the Collegiate Department, $30 per annum; in the Preparatory Department, $25.

This is the oldest college in the state. The beautiful site on which it now stands, was selected in A. D., 1828, after a careful exploration of the central and southern portions of the state. The institution was first opened to students, Jan. 4th, 1830. It graduated its first class in 1835, one member of which was RICHARD YATES, the present popular and eminently efficient Governor of the state. In 1852, the extensive and costly buildings, erected in 1832, for boarding and lodging students, were almost entirely destroyed by fire. The Trustees having been long dissatisfied with the system of college dormitories, now resolved to abandon it, and to erect a building for public purposes only. With this view, the present beautiful and commodious edifice was completed in 1857.

The permanent funds of the institution now amount to nearly $50,000, and it has pledges which will increase this to about $80,00. Its site and buildings, library and apparatus are worth nearly $100,000.

Its course of instruction is extended and thorough, and has been too exclusively devoted to the higher departments of a liberal education, to attract a large number of students. Previous, however, to the breaking out of the war, its members were yearly increasing. Some sixty of its students, besides a much larger number who were formerly its students, are now in the army of the Union, or have sealed their patriotism with their blood. Notwithstanding this, its numbers are again on the increase, and its prospects cheering.

It is the present wish and intention of the Trustees to increase the attractions and the usefulness of the institution, by enlarging the system of instruction, so that it shall embrace not only what is required as a condition of graduation, but every branch of an accomplished and useful education; and to offer its advantages in every department, to all who wish to avail themselves of them, whether for a longer or shorter time. Plans to this end are maturing.

Students are boarded and lodged in private families, each selecting such accommodations as he prefers. At few places in our country are social and moral influences more favorable than here. Society is cultivated and religious in its character, and temptations to idleness, extravagance and dissipation, are comparatively few.

For any other information respecting the institution, apply to HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE, JACKSONVILLE, ILLINOIS.

THE ILLINOIS STATE HOSPITAL FOR THE INSANE was incorporated by act of the Legislature in 1847, and located one mile south of Jacksonville, on a fine tract of land, consisting of one hundred and sixty acres. The buildings, which are of brick, consist of a centre, one hundred feet in front, and six stories high, and of lateral wings, giving an entire frontage of something over five hundred feet. It will, when entirely completed, easily accommodate five hundred patients, with the necessary officers and attendants. The buildings, though plain in exterior, are very convenient in arrangements. The whole institution is warmed by steam, lighted with gas, and has an apparatus for a forced ventilation, by which, with the aid of steam power, a rapid and frequent change of air is secured through all the apartments occupied by the patients. The whole cost to the state has been nearly three hundred thousand dollars. The Hospital was opened for the admission of patients in Nov., 1851, under the superintendance of Dr. James M. Higgins. He was succeeded in June, 1854, by Dr. Andrew McFarland, under whose charge it has since remained. The general government of the institution is vested in a board of six trustees, appointed by the Governor.

Joliet, Will Co.

Is situated about forty miles south of Chicago, and due west of the extreme southern end of Lake Michigan. It is divided by the Des Plaines River and Illinois and Michigan Canal, the latter connecting the navigable waters of the Illinois and Mississippi Rivers with Lake Michigan, and is navigable for canal boats of one hundred and fifty tons burthen. Major James B. Campbell, Dr. Albert W. Bowen and Martin H. Demmond, were the owners and proprietors of different parts of the then new town; in the summer and fall of 1834, Major Campbell laid out that part of the city known as the original town of Joliet, lying between Chicago street and the river. Dr. Bowen laid out that part of the town known as East Joliet, lying between Chicago and Michigan streets, and in the spring of 1835, that part of the town lying east of Michigan street, known as Bowen's addition to Joliet. Mr. Demmond laid out that part of the town lying on the west side of the river, known as West Joliet, formerly Juliet. The town was originally designed to be called Joliet, but by an error in recording the plot it was changed to Juliet, by which name it was known and called for several years, until it was changed by an act of the Legislature. The town was named after M. Joliet, one of the original French pioneers that discovered and explored the country in the seventeenth century; having passed from Lake Michigan down the Des Plaines River to the Illinois, and afterwards to the Mississippi River by way of the Illinois, in boats, establishing an Indian trading post where the present city of Peoria is located. Before the city of Joliet had been laid out, and during the war with the Sac and Fox Indians, a fort had been built on the west side of the river, as a protection to the inhabitants of the county from the fury of the savages. This fort was built upon the ground now occupied by the German Lutheran Church and the residence of H. N. Marsh, Esq. Mount Joliet, a natural mound containing about thirty acres of land, three miles below the city, was named after the same person from whom the town received its name.

The first settlers in the vicinity of Joliet were Capt. Robert Stevens, who settled on his present farm, one mile east of the town, in the year 1832; David Maggard, who lived about one mile north of Joliet, on the west side of the river, before the Sac war, and Charles Reed, who built a house on the farm known as the "Campbell place," before the town was laid out. James McKee built the first house in the town, it was a log house, and stood on the ground adjoining the National Hotel, in 1834.

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs, Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

During the session of the Legislature held at Vandalia, in the winter of 1835-6, an act was passed erecting the county of Will from a portion of the county of Cook, and making Joliet the county seat.

The population of Joliet is between 8,000 and 9,000. There are nine churches in the city, viz: Congregational, two Catholic, Baptist, (old), German Lutheran, Evangelical, Methodist, (brick), Universalist, (stone), and Episcopal.

The free schools of Joliet afford facilities for giving all classes a good English and classical education; two school houses having been built by the city at a cost of about $25,000.

Two papers, the Signal and Republican, are published weekly. There are four Masonic societies, Joliet Commandery, No. 4, Knights Templars, Joliet Chapter, No. 27, R. A. M., Mount Joliet Lodge, No. 42, A. F. & A. M., and Matteson Lodge, No. 175, A. F. & A. Masons. Two Lodges of Odd Fellows, William Tell, No. 219, and Powhan, No. 29, and two Lodges of Good Templars, Fidelity No. 50, and Congress, No. 115.

Railroads extend from Joliet in five different directions, viz: the St. Louis, Alton and Chicago Railroad connecting Chicago and St. Louis; the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, connecting Chicago with Rock Island, the the Joliet & Northern Indiana Railroad, being a branch of the Michigan Central, connecting with the latter road at Lake Station, Indiana; the Joliet and Chicago Railroad, going direct to Chicago by way of Lockport, each and all of which are important thoroughfares.

Joliet contains some of the finest stone quarries in the western country, many of which are worked extensively, and afford a large revenue to the town, employing several hundred men.

The Illinois State Penitentiary is located near one of these quarries. It is nearly completed, and when fully done it will have cost the State about $950,000, and will be the finest building of the kind in the United States.

Joliet has an immense water-power, capable of propelling a vast amount of machinery. Among others a flouring mill has been erected by Howk, Hyde & Co., at a cost of about $20,000. Joliet contains an enterprising population, is growing rapidly, and will in a few years become one of the finest inland towns in the western country.

Kankakee City,

A city and capital of Kankakee county, on the north side of the Kankakee River, and on the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad, 56 miles south-south-west of Chicago. The first house was built here by Hiram Bailey, in 1853. The village was incorporated in 1855, since which time it has been rapidly improving, until it now has a population of about 4,000.

The surrounding country is a fine rich prairie, yielding large crops of all kinds of grain. About 500,000 bushels are shipped annually from Kankakee.

There is a large stone quarry near, from which 864 car loads of stone were shipped during seven months. The county court-house is built of this material.

Two weekly papers are published in the city. There are nine churches, Baptist, Congregationalist, English Episcopal, French Episcopal, French Presbyterian, German Lutheran, Methodist, Presbyterian and Roman Catholic, and also two flourishing educational institutions. It has a flour mill, tannery and brewery. The superior water power renders this a good place for manufacturing.

Kewanee, Henry Co

Kewanee is an incorporated post town, situated on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, on the highest point of land, and equa distant from Chicago and Quincy. The nearest point on the Mississippi River is Rock Island, 42 miles, and the nearest point on the Illinois River, Henry, 35 miles distant. On the survey of the C., B. & Q. or central Military Tract Railroad, one farm house stood on the original quarter section, now covered by the principal part of the town, which was then owned and occupied by M. B. and J. P.

Potter. In the spring of this year, 1853, Silas Willard, of Galesburg, took the first step in starting the town, and under the superintendence of George A. Morse, the first store building was erected, and the first store opened under the name and firm of "Willard & Morse." In the month of June, 1854, the town of Kewanee, (first called Berrian,) was laid out, the north-west quarter of thirty-three by Messrs. Nelson Lay, from Kenosha, Wisconsin, Henry G. Little, Sullivan Howard, and R. A. Tenney; and a part of the north-east quarter of the same section by Messrs. C. C. and W. H. Blish. The following year the balance of the north-east quarter was added, and also the south-west quarter of the same section, by Mr. James Elliott. The first dwelling house was erected in the summer of 1853, by George A Morse. During the summer of 1854 the first hotel, now known as the "Kewanee House," was built by Messrs. Howard & Tenney; also the first drug store, by T. D. Fitch, M. D., and the first saddle and harness shop, by Charles Beaumont. In July, 1855, the Henry County Dial, was purchased by a joint stock company, and commenced its course under the editorship of J. H. Howe, Esq., now in the hands of Mr. J. E Wheeler. The first white child born in the town was a son to George A. and Carrie Morse, August 10, 1854. The first death was a son (Charles,) of Thomas Todd, in the fall of 1854. The present population of the town is about 2,500. The resources of the surrounding county are of the first class in grain, stock, fruits, and coal, the coal fields being among the best in the State. Timber in fair supply, and stone to some extent. There are now six church edifices and seven religious societies. Episcopalians, Congregationalist, Baptists, Episcopal Methodists, Protestant, Swedish Lutheran, and Roman Catholic. Four school houses have been erected at a cost of over twelve thousand dollars. The schools are conducted on the "free graded system," employing ten teachers. There are various organizations in a flourishing condition, as

Knoxville,

Is located on sections 28, 29 and 33, in township 11, north range 2, east of 4th principal meridian, about 3½ miles south-west of the centre of Knox county. It was originally located on the south-west quarter of section 28, 11 north, 2 east, by an Act of the General Assembly of 1831, as the permanent seat of Justice for Knox county, and the tract of land so located was entered by pre-emption under a law of the United States granting the right of pre-emption to counties, for that purpose.

It is pleasantly situated near the summit of the dividing ridge between the tributaries of the Illinois and Mississippi rivers, and is surrounded by a beautiful and fertile country, and well cultivated farms.

It contains about 2500 inhabitants, and its public buildings are as follows: A substantial brick Court House, with offices and jury rooms upon the first floor, a large and commodious fire proof building for the offices and records of the Circuit and County Courts, a Jail, Masonic Hall, six churches of the following denominations: New School Presbyterian, Old School Presbyterian, Congregational, English Lutheran, Swedish Lutheran and Methodist Episcopal; a fine large building of four stories for the "Ewing Female University," a large and commodious School House for the higher grades, and three ward school houses for the lower grades of common schools.

Ewing Female University, which was chartered by the Legislature in 1859, is in a flourishing condition, well sustained, and under the care of accomplished teachers, of whom Miss Emiline Dyer is principal.

The public schools are graded, and supported by the city for three-fourths of the year.

Knoxville has twenty-three dry goods and other stores, three hotels, two steam flouring mills, besides wagon and other manufactories, also, Knoxville Lodge, No. 66, and Pacific Lodge U. D. of A. F. & A. Masons, and a Lodge of Odd Fellows.

La Salle,

The city of La Salle is situated in a county of the same name, at the head of navigation on the Illinois river, where the Illinois Central intersects with the Rock Island Railroad, 99 miles from Chicago. La Salle is one of the most important commercial and mining points on the river, which is navigable to here for steamboats of considerable size. A very large amount of wheat, corn, oats, hogs, and barrels of salted provisions are annually exported. There are immense coal beds in the vicinity of the city, 400 tons daily, are taken out of one of the numerous mines. The La Salle coal mining basin forms the northern boundary of the coal mines of the state. It is intersected by the railroads above mentioned, and is the terminus of Illinois and Michigan canal, which unites with the river at this point. The coal procurred at these mines is of good quality, and admirably adapted for manufacturing purposes, and the cheap rate at which it is afforded, place it in competition with that of eastern mines.

The river at La Salle is spanned by a substantial and magnificent railroad bridge, having 20 arches of 45 feet span, each supported by massive stone pillars and abutments.

Manufacturing is carried on here to a great extent, embracing almost all branches, among which are extensive breweries, brick yards, lime kilns, steam flouring mills, a saleratus factory, rectifying distillery, a large glass factory &c., &c. In educational advantages this city is not behind others of her size, having a catholic and potestant seminary, and good graded schools. There are several churches, Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Methodist, and Roman Catholic. The latter edifice is the finest of its kind in the State, with the exception of some of those in Chicago. It is large, elegant, of joint cut masonry; and is called the church of St.Patrick—having 3,000 communicants. There are also, lodges of Masons, Odd Fellows and Good Templars. A weekly news paper, the La Salle Press, is published by E. C. Webster.

The city is built on a bluff rising from the river, affording an excellent view of the surrounding country. Taking into consideration the vast amount of mineral wealth which underlies the city and surrounding district, the facilities for transportation to and from other points, and the healthiness of the climate, this may justly be considered one of the most prominent points of interest in the west.

Lewis,

A postoffice in Kendall county.

Lewistown,

The seat of justice of Fulton county, is an incorporated town, and terminus of a branch of the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, and is situated in a fertile and well timbered section of the county. The distance to Chicago by Railroad, is 220 miles, and to St. Louis by the Illinois river, is 260 miles. The first settlement in Fulton county was made at Waterford, on Spoon river, about six miles south of the town, by John Ereland, from Kentucky, in March, 1819. Among the first settlers of the town were Ossian M. Ross, Stephen Chase, Hugh R. Coulter, Stephen Dewey, and Stephen Phelps. The land upon which the town was laid out, was owned by Ossian M. Ross. In January, 1823, the general assembly of the state of Illinois appointed three commissioners, namely: John Totten, Stephen Chase and Hugh R. Coulter, to locate the seat of justice of Fulton county. On February 14, 1823, they selected Lewistown, and it has been the county seat to this time. Ossian M. Ross donated lots for a burying ground, court house, jail, public square, meeting house, school house and masonic hall. For a number of years after its settlement, it was an important trading post with the Indians. Timber is abundant, consisting of oak, walnut, hickory, elm, mulberry and sugar maple. Coal of a good quality and building stone are also abundant. The soil is productive and adapted to wheat, corn, rye, oats and barley; stock raising is also extensively carried on. There are in the immediate vicinity, six saw mills, and in the village one grist mill, one steam hub and spoke factory, two steam carding machines, two drug stores, two hotels, one boot and shoe store, and eight stores of general merchandise. The Presbyterian (O. S.) and the Methodist Episcopal have good brick church buildings, and the Episcopal society is erecting a brick edifice. The graded system of schools is the one in use. The Fulton County Agricultural Society holds its annual fairs at the grounds immediately adjoining the town. The Masons and Odd Fellows have each a lodge in the town. The railroad has been in operation for two years. All classes of business are thriving, and the population and wealth steadily increasing.

Limestone,

A postoffice and township in the central part of Kankakee county.

Lincoln,

The capital of Logan county, is near its centre, in a township of the same name, on the Chicago & Alton Railroad, distance from Springfield 29 miles, and from Chicago 155 miles. Among the principal buildings in the town is the court house, a substantial brick edifice, with a detached wing on each side for fire-proof offices. The first story of the court house is divided into offices and jury rooms. Above, is the main audience room, where the circuit courts are held. Few counties can boast of better buildings of the kind, and none of more talented and efficient corps of county officers than have served this county for the last few years.

This town was laid out in 1853, by Colonel R. B. Latham and John D. Gillett, Esq., of this county, and Virgil Hickox, of Springfield. These liberal minded gentleman laid out and donated to the county, some four public squares in the best parts of the town, which are fenced and nicely carpeted with timothy and blue grass, and well set with forest shade trees.

Since the town was first laid out, several additions have been made. The population at this time is more than 2,000. Five churches have been built, to wit: Methodist, Baptist, Cumberland Presbyterian, Catholic and Christian. Other denominations also have societies, and some, regular service each Sabbath; among these are the Congregationalists, Lutherans, Universalists and Israelites. Lincoln Lodge No. 204, I. O. O. F., and Lincoln Lodge No. 210, A. F. and A. M., each have a hall. Three public school houses have been built, but are not sufficient to meet the wants of the people in that line. The citizens of the school district have voted a tax to build a large Union school house, sufficient to accommodate all the grades of scholars in the district. The principal hotels are the "Lincoln House" and "Western House." The town contains at present about thirty stores —4 dry goods, 4 dry goods and groceries, 9 groceries and provisions, 4 clothing, 2 boot and shoes, 2 hardware, 2 drug and 3 furniture —as well as numerous other smaller places of business. It has 2 flouring mills; one owned by L. Rickter, Esq., has been running several years, the other was recently built by Messrs. Elliott, formerly of Chicago. The railroad buildings and lots are ample and conveniently arranged.

Lincoln is one of the largest shipping points on the road for grain and stock. From July 1st, 1862, to July 1st, 1863, 500,000 bushels of corn, 200,000 bushels of wheat, 5,000 beeves and 20,000 hogs were shipped. Two newspapers, the Lincoln Herald and Logan Courier are published here.

Few towns of the size of Lincoln exhibit more thrift, life and business.

Lockport,

A post town in Will county, on the St. Louis, Alton & Chicago Railroad, and Illinois and Michigan Canal, 32 miles from Chicago. It was laid out by the canal commissioners in 1836. The town site was selected because upon the plan of the canal then adopted, (which was to make a "deep cut" so as to draw a supply of water directly from Lake Michigan,) the Lake level would here run out, and the first lock or locks be located. The land upon which the village is built, rises gently from the river to the canal, some 20 feet, and the canal is from 150 to 200 feet from the foot of the main bluff, so called, which here raises abruptly some 25 feet to the level of Main street. The first settlers were Mr. Griggs, Horace Morse, John Rogers and Dr. Bronson. It has now six churches, viz: Baptist, Congregational, Episcopal, Roman Catholic and Unitarian, also Des Plaines and Fraternity Lodges I. O. O. Fellows and a Lodge of Good Templars. There is here a fine water power, a flouring mill, numerous warehouses, stores, etc. Population about 3,000. For description of Canal see p. 46.

Macomb,

An incorporated city and capital of McDonough county, situated on the C. B. & Q. Railroad, 210 miles south-west of Chicago, and 60 miles north-east of Quincy. The city is named after General Macomb and the county in honor of Commodore McDonough, both distinguished men in the history of this Government. Macomb was first settled in 1830, by emigrants from Kentucky, although the county had been sparsely settled some years previously. It is situated on what was known in the early history of the State as the "Galena trail," or great highway to that celebrated mineral district. The city site was donated by Congress for county purposes, the sale of lots on the grant aforesaid defraying the expenses incurred in building county offices and Court House. The first County Court was held at Macomb, July 3d, 1830—James Vance, James Clark and John Hardisty, County Commissioners, Michael Stenson, clerk, pro. tem. Previous to that date McDonough county was attached to Schuyler and Pike counties. The present boundaries of McDonough county were established during the year 1830 by proclamation of the Governor of the State. The first Circuit Court of said county was held at Macomb, Oct. 7, 1830, the Hon. Richard M. Young, Judge. This Circuit Court district was subsequently presided over by the learned and lamented Hon. Stephen A. Douglas. Among the first white inhabitants who made Macomb their home, were James M. Campbell, James Clarke, David Clarke, Nicholas J. Rogers, Solomon and Abraham Dover, Wm. P. Richards, Charles Chandler, Thompson Chandler, John Anderson, William H. Randolph and Thomas A. Brooking.

During the year 1848, the Masonic Fraternity purchased an eligible site in Macomb, on which was erected a handsome brick building, to be used as a Masonic College, under the auspices of the Fraternity of the State, but circumstances were such that it subsequently passed into the hands of the Presbyterian Synod and was established as the Synodical College of that branch of the church, and named "McDonough College," the project not proving successful it reverted to the Masonic Fraternity of Macomb. It is now used as a Graded School, under the control of the city. For many years after the establishment of the county seat, the county was slowly settled, owing to the difficulty of obtaining titles, it being situated in the military district granted to soldiers of the war of 1812, however, in 1850 and subsequently, a steady and rapid increase has been made, and has given impulse to the growth and increase in population and importance of Macomb, which is keeping pace with the settlement of the neighborhood. Since the completion of the C., B. & Q. Railroad the city has acquired an additional importance and has become one of the liveliest towns in this part of the State. During the season for marketing grain it is difficult for teams to make their way through the principal streets.

The city has an air of life and business seldom met with in an inland town, and is suggestive of enterprise, industry and general thrift. There are within its corporate limits 2 grist mills, 2 saw mills, 1 woolen factory, 1 foundry and machine shop, 1 brewery, 11 dry goods stores, 3 clothing stores, 3 drug stores, 2 hardware stores, 2 flour and feed stores, 12 grocery stores, besides jewelry and watchmaking, millinery and confectionery stores, etc., 2 newspaper offices, the Macomb Journal, published weekly, by T. S. Clarke, and the Macomb Eagle, published weekly, by Nelson Abbott, two good hotels, the "Randolph House," a first class hotel, J. W. Randolph proprietor, and "Brown's Hotel," James Brown proprietor, 3 wagon and carriage manufactories, 2 agricultural implement depots, 1 book store, 2 banks, 1 public hall for lectures and concerts, 9 churches, viz: M. E. church, Baptist, Christian, Old School Presbyterian, Cumberland Presbyterian, Universalist, Episcopalian, Congregational and Catholic.

There are five public graded schools; two primary, two intermediate, one high school, under the control of the city, with 800 scholars registered in the district, and one select school.

The city is divided into four wards. Population in 1860, 2,350, and is steadily increasing.

Marshall,

The county seat of Clark county, is located on a beautiful swell of land, 127 feet above Terre Haute, Indiana, and is the highest point of land between that place and Vandalia, as determined by the government survey in locating the national road. The land on which it stands was purchased by Governor Joseph Duncan and Colonel William B. Archer, in 1833, at government price, $1.25 per acre. Subsequently, in the fall of 1835, Colonel William B. Archer laid out the town, and made sale of lots; and soon after, purchasing Governor Duncan's interest, became sole proprietor of the town. It is situated on national road, at the crossing of the Chicago and Vincennes state road, 16 miles west of Terre Haute, Indiana, 10 miles from the State line. The first log cabin was erected in the fall of 1835. Among the first settlers may be mentioned John Bartlett, Abraham Washburn, James Whitlock, James Pounds, James B. Anderson, Stephen Archer, and Uri Manly. The first white child born here was John A. Whitlock, now a printer at Wheaton, Illinois. The first death was that of James G. Mathews.

Enjoying a pure air and excellent water, Marshall has always maintained a high reputation for health. The surrounding country abounds in building material of the very best quality, lime and sand stone, black walnut, poplar, maple, ash and oak timber. The growth of the place has been slow, but steady and sure, each year adding something to its material strength. The log cabins have given place to substantial frame buildings, while all, or nearly all, of the recent improvements are of brick on permanent foundations of lime stone. The courthouse and jail are built of these materials. The churches, in order of building. are, Congregational, Rev. Jacob Chapman; Episcopal Methodist, Rev. P. McNutt; German, Rev. Christian Ude; Catholic, Rev. J. H. Hoven; Old School Presbyterian, Rev. Ellis Howell· Christian or Campbellite, at present without a pastor.

There are two good brick school houses, and an academy of the same material, of respectable dimensions, recently chartered as a college. We have Masonic, Temperance, Agricultural, and other societies.

The town is incorporated, and contains about 1,400 inhabitants.

The facilities for making railroad communication are excellent, but as yet, the railroads are wanting.

Marshall occupies the very gate of the fertile and far-famed Valley of the Wabash. Since the writer's residence in the place, large quantities of wheat and fruit, (apples and peaches,) have been wagoned through town to the Chicago market. Indeed, Chicago is the legitimate channel of trade for all the Wabash Valley, but now trade flows to St. Louis, Terre Haute, Evansville, and other cities beyond the limits of our own State, by means of railroad facilities east and west. Were Chicago connected with this valley by rail, the abundant products of our soil would flow again in their wonted channel. When Marshall is thus put in connection with the rest of the world, it will be found one of the pleasantest towns in Eastern Illinois.

Mechanicsburg,

A village of Sangamon county, very pleasantly situated, in the midst of a delightful country, 15 miles east of Springfield, and three miles south of Mechanicsburg station, otherwise called Buffalo, on the Great Western Railway, from which place it receives a daily mail. The village contains about 500 inhabitants, and three churches, Methodist, Presbyterian and Disciples. These are all built of brick and neatly finished. There is also a lodge of Good Templars and a Masonic lodge, both in a flourishing state, four stores, one carriage manufactory, one steam flouring mill, and not one saloon, or place where liquors are sold to make drunkards.

The people have shown their love for education by their liberality in erecting a very fine and commodious brick building for seminary purposes. This, together with their excellent common schools, affords first class advantages for the rising generation. Postmaster, Morris Bird.

Mendota,

An important and flourishing city of La Salle county, at the intersection of the main line of the Illinois Central with the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, 88 miles west by south from Chicago. Daniel D. Guiles, Esq., at present a respected citizen of the place, was the first settler upon the site of Mendota. He located here in the spring of 1853, and was closely followed by Levi Kelsey, Esq. and George Wells. Messrs. Guiles and Wells were both contractors for the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, which had, at that time, together with the Illinois Central, been just located through the place. T. B. Blackstone, now of Chicago, was at that time engineer of this division of the I. C. Railroad, and was among the first purchasers of the place, and at his suggestion the village was laid out and named "Mendota," an Indian word signifying "wide and pleasant view." The town is surrounded by rich prairies, to the north and east rolling, and to the north and west level. A fine body of timber known as "Troy Grove," and containing 4,200 acres, is situated two miles south-east. The location is considered very healthy, there being no local diseases of any kind. Land is worth from $30 to $60 per acre at a distance of from 1 to 3 miles from town. The proposed "Illinois Grand Trunk Railroad," from Joliet to Albany on the Mississippi river, to connect with the Iowa & Nebraska line at Camanche, is located through this place, and when completed will add greatly to the importance of the town. The place has now a population of about 3,000. It contains a male and female college, under the direction of the Lutheran denomination, and having an average attendance of 80 students, nine churches, six public schoo's, a Lodge each of Masons, Odd Fellows and Good Templars, a weekly newspaper, two steam flour mills, a brewery, an iron foundry, and a machine shop, together with a variety of manufactures, trades, etc.

Moline,

A flourishing town of Rock Island county, on the Mississippi river and Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, 3 miles east of the city of Rock Island and at the head of Rock Island proper. It is celebrated chiefly as a manufacturing town and has already gained the title of the "Lowell of the West." A dam has been built across from the Illinois shore to the head of the island, thus affording one of the best water powers in the west.

S. W. Wheelock's paper mill is the largest in the western states, and manufactures Fourdrinier, print, book and manilla papers of every description. It supplies the daily papers of Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis with paper.

Deere's Factory is celebrated throughout the west for the great number and superior quality of the cast steel plows, cultivators, etc., which it sends forth.

There are, besides these, Sickels & Bro.'s Moline flouring mills, Dimock & Gould's wooden ware factory, an extensive foundry, saw mill, two fanning mill factories, and two banking houses.

The Moline Independent is published weekly and has attained a wide circulation. The town has seven religious societies, viz: Baptist, Congregational, Methodist E., Roman Catholic, Second Advent, Swedish Lutheran and Universalist; also, a Lodge of Odd Fellows and a Young Men's Association. Moline promises to become a manufacturing town of unprecedented importance, which will be increased by its advantageous commercial position and the fine farming region back of it. Population between 3,000 and 4,000.

Monmouth,

The county seat of Warren county, is situated on the line of the Chicago, Burlington and Quincy Railroad, 181 miles W. S. W. from Chicago.

It was located on the 7th of April, 1831, by John G. Sanborn, Hazen Bedell and John McNeil, Commissioners appointed by act of the General Assembly to establish a permanent seat of justice for Warren county. The first sale of lots (all of which the county owned) took place June 6th, 1831, and the town immediately became the seat of justice. The first Court House was built of logs, by Francis Kendall, at a cost to the county of fifty-seven dollars, and the first term of the Circuit Court, held in October, 1831, was presided over by Judge Richard M. Young, then a resident of Quincy, who subsequently represented the State in the Senate of the United States, a sensible, good man, and dignified, hospitable gentleman of the Old School.

Daniel McNeil was the first settler in Monmouth in 1831, and in the same year were added Joel Hargrove, Elijah Davidson, and others. Mr. McNeil (now a resident of DeWitt, Clinton county, Iowa,) was then, and for many years thereafter, Postmaster, Recorder, Clerk of the Circuit and County Commissioner's Courts, and Judge of Probate.

This county (Warren,) was organized on the 3d day of July, 1830, by the election of John B. Talbot, John Pence and Adam Ritchey, jr., County Commissioners; Jacob Rust, Sheriff, and John Ritchey, Coroner, at which time it included the area now embraced in the county of Henderson, which was detached in the year 1841.

The summit level between the Illinois and Mississippi rivers is found near the centre of the county, and consequently its waters flow into both rivers. Thus situated, and having no large streams or extensive bottom lands, it is remarkably free from diseases incident to the Western climate.

The face of the country is undulating prairie, abundantly watered and diversified with ample groves of woodland of dense growth and superior quality. Along the creeks and ravines extensive quarries of limestone and sandstone are found, and abundance of coal of good quality. The soil is a dark loam, extremely fertile. Large quantities of corn, wheat, oats and rye are annually exported. Taken all in all it is one of the best agricultural counties in the State, its soil being unsurpassed in fertility, and it having probably a less proportion of land incapable of tillage than any other county. The facility with which corn is produced is rapidly giving it a high rank as a stock growing region.

The first settler in the county as originally constituted, was Dr. Isaac Garland, who settled in 1827 at the Lower Yellow Banks, (now Oquawka, the county seat of Henderson county). Within the bounds of the county, as now existing, the first settlers were John B. Talbot, Allen G. Andrews, Adam Ritchey, called "Sandy" Adam, John Ritchey, his brother, Adam Ritchey, jr., cousin to the former, John B. Atwood, James Robinson, Solomon Perkins, James Hodgson, and others, in 1828.

The first child born in the county was Rev. Henderson Ritchey, son of "Sandy" Adam Ritchey, now a Presiding Elder of the Methodist Episcopal Church, in the Central Illinois Conference. The first marriage was on the 10th day of May, 1831, of Samuel S. White and Huldah Jennings, by John B. Tabot, a justice of the peace. The first death was that of Mr. Daniel Harris, murdered in his cabin, of the circumstances connected with which the writer is not informed. The first sermon was by a Mr. Finch, a local Methodist preacher. The first church organized was the Associate Reformed Presbyterian, about 1830 or 1831, Rev. James Bruce, pastor. About the same time Rev. Barton H. Randall was the first circuit preacher of the Methodist church, Rev. Mr. Whitman of the Christian, and Rev. Charles Vanderveer, of the Baptist church. The first school was taught by Dr. Alpheus Russell.

The early progress of the town was slow, but since the completion of the railroad in 1855 and the establishment of "Monmouth College" in 1856, it has made rapid advancement, and now has a population of 3,500 to 4,000.

"Monmouth College" and the United Presbyterian Seminary, both under the control of the United Presbyterian Church, and more particularly noted hereafter, are located here and are well sustained. There are three graded schools, two of which occupy two large brick school houses three stories in height, and with six rooms in each, and the other occupies a two story frame building with four rooms. There are six church edifices—United Presbyterian, Old School Presbyterian, First Baptist, Methodist, Second Baptist, and Catholic. The United Presbyterians have lately formed a second church organization and will soon erect a place of worship.

There are two steam flouring mills, two grain elevators, having each a capacity to shell and ship about 75,000 bushels of corn per month, a planing mill, several wagon shops, at one of which elegant carriages are manufactured. Messrs. N. & J. Carr have a foundry, machine shop, and an extensive manufactory of plows, cultivators, and other agricultural implements, among which is their two horse cultivator for the culture of corn, said to be unsurpassed by any in use.

Shipments from Monmouth for thirteen months ending Nov. 7th, 1863.—Corn, 561,350 bushels; wheat, 103,000 bushels; rye, 25,000 bushels; oats, 150,750 bushels; barley, 1,350 bushels; 2,063 green hides; 399 dry hides; 18,176 lbs. wool; 311,000 lbs. butter; 11,264 lbs. lard; 31,860 lbs. tallow; 519 bbls. eggs; 9,779 bales hay; 39,825 live hogs; 342 dressed hogs; 5,166 live cattle.

The Warren County Agricultural Society has a Fair Ground of 15 acres near the city, well enclosed, and with all the necessary buildings. The Society is prosperous, and nearly free of debt.

MONMOUTH COLLEGE.

Monticello,

Was laid out on the 4th day of July, A. D. 1838, and was then in Macon county. In 1841 the county of Piatt was organized, when Monticello became the county seat. It is an incorporated town of about 1,000 inhabitants. For many years after it was laid out, it improved slowly, and has been principally built and improved within the last five years. It is beautifully situated on a rolling prairie, near the centre of Piatt county, half a mile east of the Sangamon River, and adjoining the timber skirting said river. It is seven miles north of the Great Western Railroad.

The surrounding country is not excelled by any portion of the State for productiveness in grain, grass, fruits, etc. The building material are timber and brick. There are Methodist, Presbyterian, and Baptist churches; one large school, with three departments, affording good facilities for education. The societies are, "Fraternal Lodge," No. 58, A. F. and A. Masons, which meets the Saturday evening of or next preceding the full moon; "Markwell Chapter," No. 48, Royal Arch Masons, meets the Thursday of or next preceding the full moon. There is also a County Agricultural Society. The health, enterprise, industry and wealth of Piatt county, all considered, will compare favorably with any portion of the State.

Among the first settlers were James Piatt, Nicholas Divore, John Tinbrood, P. Outten, A. J. Wiley, E. Ater, John Richetts, and James Reeber. The first child born in the vicinity of Monticello was Jacob Piatt, February 17th, 1831. He is still a resident of the place. The first death was James Piatt, senior, the father of Jacob Piatt.

Morris,

This is a large village, and the capital of Grundy county, situated on the Rock Island Railroad, and the Illinois and Michigan Canal, about 62 miles from Chicago.

This point is one of considerable business, and occupied by a population of active and enterprising people. It is very beautifully situated; considerable timber in the vicinity, and the land of the richest and most productive kind. Large quantities of grain are shipped annually to Chicago. There is also a considerable lumber trade. Extensive machine shops located at Morris, manufacturing plows and other agricultural implements We know of no point where a more progressive and industrious people can be found, and the local advantages of Morris must make it always a town of considerable trade importance.

Morrison.

Is one of the most enterprising and rapidly increasing villages in the State. It is pleasantly situated in a gently rolling prairie country, on Rock Creek and on the line of the Fulton branch of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, 123 miles west from Chicago. It is an incorporated village, the county seat of Whiteside county, and is principally noted as a great grain shipping point, it being in this respect one of the most important places in the State. During the year 1863 there were upwards of 900,000 bushels of grain of various kinds shipped by the G. & C. U. R. R. from this place eastward. Morrison is emphatically a railroad village, having sprung into existence in consequence of the completion of the G. & C. U. Railroad. It was laid out in 1856, and named in honor of John H. Morrison, Esq., a wealthy merchant of New York, who was one of the original purchasers of the village site. The place now contains a population of over 1,500. It is built on level ground, with a range of wooded hills in the rear, upon which are the county buildings together with many handsome private residences. There is a weekly newspaper published here. The village also contains six churches, a private banking house, a lodge each of Good Templars, Odd Fellows and Free Masons, an excellent graded school and a proportionate number of trades, professions, etc. The surrounding country is mostly rolling prairie, well watered, very productive and noted for healthfulness. Population principally emigrants from eastern states.

Mount Sumner,

A postoffice in Thompson township, northern part of Jo Daviess county.

Mount Vernon,

This town is the seat of justice for Jefferson county, and was located in 1819. It is situated very near the center of the county, about 16 miles east of Ashley and 20 miles south-east of Centralia, on the Illinois Central Railroad, and 22 miles south of Salem, on the Ohio and Mississippi Railroad.

It contains a population of about 1,200, and is rapidly improving. It has been long noted for the excellence of its schools and the refinement and morality of its inhabitants. Its schools (one male and two female) are well attended, having usually about 200 pupils.

Its public square is large and handsome, with a brick Court House in the center.

There are nine dry goods, one clothing, two family grocery, and two drug stores, three hotels, three commodious churches—Christian, Methodist and Presbyterian,—a Lodge each of Masons, Odd Fellows and Good Templars, and three large merchant mills. The "Unconditional Unionist," (weekly,) is published by John A. Wall.

This town is beautifully located on the north side of a handsome and fertile prairie, and protected on the north and north-west by a heavy forest of timber.

The First Grand Division of the Supreme Court of the State holds its session here. The State Legislature has built a very handsome Court House, at a cost of $20,000. Its library contains about 2,700 volumes, and is being annually increased by the addition of new books.

The mineral springs and wells in and around the town were for many years sources of great attraction to strangers, and will when properly improved, be a source of great wealth to the community.

Murphysboro,

A post town, the county seat of Jackson county, situated eight miles from Carbondale on the Illinois Central Railroad, and on the Big Muddy River. The surrounding country is underlaid with beds of bituminous coal of a good quality, which, in some places on the river, crops out of the bank, and is shipped in considerable quantities, at high water, down the Big Muddy to the Mississippi, 15 miles distant. There is a large flouring and saw mill in operation here. The land in the vicinity is very fertile. Large quantities of cotton and tobacco are annually raised about here, to the culture of which the farmers and monied men in the vicinity seem to be devoting a great deal of attention. There are two churches in the town. Population, about 400.

Naperville.

This thriving village, the capital of DuPage county, is about 30 miles west of Chicago, on the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad.

There are some good stores in this place, and a large amount of business is transacted in all kinds of merchandise. Grain is extensively handled, and much shipped to Chicago. Wool is a staple of considerable importance in this district. Religious and educational institutions are established, and the population, between 2,000 and 3,000, possess all the facilities enjoyed of social and rational intercourse.

The time is approaching when Naperville will greatly advance in numbers and material wealth, as its location is so well adapted for extensive growth. There are two Masonic Lodges.

Nauvoo,

A city of Hancock county, on the Mississippi River, near the head of the lower rapids, 220 miles above St. Louis. It was founded by the Mormons in 1840, and in 1846 contained 16,000 inhabitants. Its situation is one of the most beautiful on the river, the ground rising gradually from the water, and terminating in a broad plain overlooking the surrounding country. On this plain the city was laid out, the streets being broad, and crossing each other at right angles. Among the best of the Mormon buildings were the "Temple," "Masonic Hall," "Lord's Storehouse," and "Mansion," now kept as a hotel, by Major L. C. Bidamon. The "Temple" was formerly the great object of curiosity to visitors. The plans and style of architecture of this building, Smith claimed to have received by revelation from God; although subsequently the plans were materially altered from the original draft, but if by revelation we are not informed. The Temple was commenced in 1841, with the laying of the corner stone and impressive ceremonies, attended by a vast multitude of people. To its erection the whole people of the Mormon church gave their enthusiastic aid—all being required to give a tenth of their income or labor. In 1845, two years after the death of Smith, the Temple was finished and dedicated. The account of its size, height, and general appearance in 1846, we find in the Fulton Gazette.

"The Temple is built wholly of stone, procured from quarries near the city. This stone is of the best description, firm in texture, beautiful to the eye, and susceptible of a fine finish. I am not acquainted with architectural terms, and hence cannot say in what style the Temple is built; but were it not for its tower and belfry, and some attempts at modern ornamentation, I should think it was purely Grecian. In size, the main building is 180 feet long, by 80 feet wide, and probably 80 feet in height. The tower and belfry reach above the main building some eighty or a hundred feet; but of that I could gain no certain knowledge. Although I should think the entire height of the Temple from base stone to ball cannot be less than 180 feet."

The basement hall, in which was situated the baptismal font, itself, a miracle of art and beauty, with its appointments of life-sized oxen in purest marble, the marble basin and elaborate railings—the preparation and reception rooms; the immense audience chamber above, with its pews and changing backs, its immense altars and oratories, its gorgeous tapestry and mottets in gold and silver, its ponderous chandeliers and innumerable columns and frescoes every where bewildered the eye with gorgeous beauty. The cost of the building was estimated at $800,000.

About the year 1848 the usurpations of the Mormons had become so flagrant, and their influence so demoralizing, that a war of extermination was commenced against them by the citizens of the surrounding country, and they were compelled to leave the city and State. In 1849 the Temple was destroyed by fire. In the same year a body of French socialists calling themselves Icarians, purchased the temple site and adjoining property, and during six or seven years attempted to establish a permanent colony under the phalanstery system. In 1857 the colony was broken up and its members scattered through this and adjoining counties.

The soil in and adjacent to Nauvoo has been discovered to be finely adapted to grape culture, and within five years what had been commenced as an experiment has become an immense interest. A large nun ber of persons are now reaping a competency—some of them fortunes—who five years ago had no income from other pursuits. The number of acres of bearing grapes is almost 180; those set last summer about 160 to 200 more; and we are told that fully 200 acres more will be planted this spring. The grape growers of Nauvoo realized from their last summer's crop of wine $75,000, and many of them cut their vines closer than usual in the view of adding to quality rather than to quantity. The cost of trenching, setting and staking an acre of grapes will not exceed $125. The third year's growth will generally produce grapes for 400 gallons of wine, which at present prices will average $1.75 to $2.00 per gallon, leaving from necessary expenses of expressing, cooperage and bottling, a profit of almost $600.

Numbers of the largest wine growers have spacious cellars, built of stone in the most substantial manner. That of John Bauer, Esq., is, perhaps, the largest, being 45 feet by 20. Mr. B. has in cultivation three and a half acres of vines, which in 1862 yielded him 1,300 gallons of excellent wine. His wine averages $2.00 per gallon at wholesale, and is greatly in demand. Mr. Bauer also manufactures a very superior quality of brandy from the lees and pumice of grapes, and which has also a ready sale at $8.00 per gallon.

There are other extensive vineyards and cellars in the vicinity, owned by Messrs. Berton, Beger, Siller, Schneider, Rheinberger, Leopard, and others.

The business of Nauvoo is slowly recovering from the troubles that have beset it. It has two extensive breweries, a large steam flouring mill, etc. There is here an excellent steamboat landing, and the city will no doubt soon become a very important point. Its population is now between 3,000 and 4,000.

Otsego,

A postoffice in the township of Benton and the north-eastern part of Lake county.

Ottawa.

This city, the capital of LaSalle county, is situated at the junction of the Fox and Illinois Rivers, principally upon the right bank of both. That part of it which is north of the Illinois river stands upon a plateau, elevated about 30 feet above ordinary stage of water, and fifteen feet above extreme high water mark.

The plateau is about a mile in width, from the Illinois river to the foot of the bluff, in the rear of the town, and extends several miles up and down the river.

The course of the valley, for several miles above the city, and a mile or two below it, is nearly east and west—the bluff, or bank of the river, on the south side, approaching nearly to the water's edge. Each bluff is about seventy-five feet in height above the plateau on which the principal part of the town stands, and from their edges, overlooking the city, a gentle rise is continued for a mile or two in the rear. This configuration of the valley and bluffs, gives to the location of the city a range and beauty of prospect, difficult to be equalled elsewhere.

The city is situated 85 miles a little south of west from the city of Chicago, upon the line of the Chicago & Rock Island Railroad, which pursues its course nearly west 104 miles, to the city of Rock Island, on the Mississippi. It is also upon the line of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, which unites the waters of Lake Michigan, at Chicago, with those of the Illinois River, at LaSalle, 14 miles below this city.

The site of the city itself, and the country for a short distance to the north and many miles in all other directions, is underlaid with coal—its location being upon the northern extremity of the great Illinois coal field.

The manufacturing conveniences of the waters of the Fox River are unsurpassed, and a feeder to the canal, four miles in length, delivers in the heart of the city a surplus of water sufficient to propel sixty run of stone. A further outlay of about seventy-five thousand dollars, would deliver at the city the waters of the Illinois, in sufficient quantity to make Ottawa the largest manufacturing city in the north-west. A charter, with ample powers, has already been obtained for realizing this result.

The country in the vicinity of the city and tributary to it, is unsurpassed in beauty and fertility, and has already made the city of Ottawa the largest contributing point to the grain trade of Chicago.

The population of the surrounding country now averages about forty to the square mile, an important fact to be known in estimating the future growth of Ottawa.

It will be seen that the position of this city, midway between the waters of the Lakes and the Mississippi, connected by water-ways and railroad with both, in the heart of the richest agricultural region of the world, and with manufacturing advantages unsurpassed, occupies a position that gives assurance of future prosperity equal to the most sanguine expectations.

In the circumstances of its early settlement, Ottawa was peculiarly fortunate. It is the precise point where the emigration from the Southern States, ascending the waters of the Mississippi and the Illinois, first met, about the year 1831, the stronger wave of Eastern emigration that came by the Lakes. The necessity of the times and the individual characters of the early settlers, contributed to establish a harmony of social intercourse and an independence of individual action, the effects of which are apparent at this day.

The industry and enterprise of the eastern settler have united to make the city, in its business and social aspects, what it now is—if not the gem, certainly a jewel in the diadem of the Great West.

The first white settler in Ottawa or its vicinity was Doctor Davidson, who came to Covil Creek, near the city, in 1823, and died there in 1826. Rev. Jesse Walker came here in 1823, and in 1824 established a Mission School at Mission Grove, in this county.

The termination of the Black Hawk war, concurring with the attention that Chicago had already excited in the Eastern States, led, after 1832, to a more rapid settlement in the town and surrounding country. Settlers continued to arrive by the rivers, and emigration began to be established by way of the lakes. The line of the Illinois and Michigan Canal was established, and its importance, as the connecting link in the longest inland navigable waterway in the world, attracted to this spot the attention of all classes of men, not only in the Eastern States but in Europe. Accordingly, with the commencement of the canal in 1834, capitalists of enterprise and skill, principally from New York, with a few from Canada and Europe, repaired hither to engage in the great enterprise of its construction. These brought with them, in the course of the few succeeding years, many thousand laborers, generally Irishmen, with and without families, by whose skillful labor, after a suspension of the work from 1844 to 1846, it was at last, in 1848, finally completed.

This work, from its known certain ultimate necessity and importance, was commenced and prosecuted nearly to completion in advance of the agricultural wants and even resources of the country. All supplies—except moderate quantities of fresh beef and of wheat—at the commencement and up to the time of the suspension in 1844, were drawn from the Eastern and Southern markets. Pork, salt, beef, bacon, flour, beans, iron, tools and powder were all imported, at high prices, up to 1844. Almost all men's attention, business and enterprise, up to that time, were connected with the work on the canal. Hence its stoppage prostrated, for the moment, the whole business of the country. But the men who had been engaged in this business had good eyes and ready hands; they saw the fruitfulness of the land, and were not slow to avail themselves of it. While for the time being it ruined the contractors, it saved the laborers; they scattered themselves over the country; the land was fruitful and cheap, and thousands of them are at this day wealthy farmers, who would otherwise have perished in their labor, or have remained laborers yet.

Dr. Howland, in his narrative of Ottawa, has said "that in 1832, directly after the Black Hawk war, the inhabitants of La Salle county were only about 100 persons. In the summer of 1833, Peru and La Salle had no existence. Ottawa consisted of a rough board Court House, 24 by 16, and log jail and log building called the "Fort," and two frames unenclosed; one small enclosed building occupied by David Walker, and one 10 by 12 shanty in which Henry Hicks dispensed whisky, powder, shot, blankets and baubles to the natives, of whom there were about 40 or 50 who made this place their summer headquarters, and five or six white men, who claimed to reside here during and before the war."

"In July, 1833, the ground now covered by the City of Ottawa was clothed with an unbroken carpet of verdure and golden flowers, waving in the sunlight of a glowing summer sun, presenting to the beholder a parterre too picturesque and beautiful to be defaced by the tread of man. At this time, nature here sat upon her gorgeous throne, rapt in the splendid solitude of her own originality."

At Ottawa the Supreme Court of Illinois, the Third Grand Division, is held once a year, commencing the third Monday in April.

There are ten churches, namely, one Baptist, one Episcopal, two Congregational, two Methodist Episcopal, one Presbyterian, one Roman Catholic, one Advent, and one French Mission Chapel.

There is also one Masonic lodge, and Shabbona Chapter R. A. Masons No. 37; one lodge of Good Templars, and one of Odd Fellows.

Two newspapers are published here, namely, The Ottawa Republican and the Ottawa Free Trader.

The public schools of Ottawa are very extensive, and much attention is paid to the educational interests of the city by the citizens. Two large buildings were erected in 1855 at a cost of $25,000. The plan of education is that of the graded free school system.

This city is most favorably situated, and is constantly increasing and improving, and will continue to be one of the most important inland cities of the State of Illinois.

Palestine,

This town in the township of the same name, is the capital of Crawford county. It is situated in the western part of the county, about one and a half miles from the Wabash river, at the south end of LaMotte Prairie, which is about seven miles long by three wide, of a rich sandy loam, and well adopted to raising grain. South of the town the country is heavily timbered, of a rich clay loam, and adapted for wheat and forage crops. The Wabash River being navigable for a small class of steamers, about six months of the year, the town has river communication with all points on the Ohio and Mississippi rivers on the south, and Terre Haute on the north, via. which point shipments of merchandise are made from Chicago and New York. The leading markets for the surplus products of the county are Cincinnati and New York, prior to the breaking out of the war, New Orleans was the principal point of shipment. The annual number of hogs packed and shipped from Palestine, averages 6,000 head. The annual exports of grain are, of wheat 50,000, rye 5,000, oats 3,000, and corn 40,000 bushels. Flax seed and castor beans are also quite extensively raised and sold in St. Louis. The annual sales of merchandis amount to about $100,000. There are in the town one saw mill, two flour mills, two churches, one O. S. Presbyterian and one Christian, also a division of the Sons of Temperance, (LaMotte No. 125,). The distance to St. Louis is 165 miles, and to Chicago 210 miles, to the latter of which considerable of the trade would be diverted, if there were facilities for transportation by railroad. There is a daily mail to the town. Population, 600. Postmaster, O. H. Bristol.

Paxton,

A rapidly growing town and the county seat of Ford county, on the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad, 103 miles south of Chicago, on a high rolling prairie, convenient to heavily timbered lands. The first settlement was made by W. A. Goodrich, in the fall of 1854, near the now southern limits of the town, then one and a half miles from any improvement. In the spring of 1855, Benjamin Stiles and sons also made a small improvement in the southern limits of the town, they, as also Mr. Goodrich, opening small stores. The same year, L. Britt and R. R. Murdock purchased jointly the land on which the central portion of the town now stands, and the following year commenced improvements.

In the spring of 1857, a postoffice was established, called Prospect City. The name of the settlement had prior thereto been Prairie City.

During the same summer, under the direction of George B. McClellan, then superintendent of the Illinois Central Railroad, a side track was laid, and on the first day of November the town was made a station.

In the winter of 1858 and 1859, a bill was obtained erecting the present county of Ford, and sustained by a vote of the people, and in May, 1859, this town was fixed upon as the county seat During the years 1860 and 1861, the court house was erected, a building creditable to the enterprise of any community, at a cost of $18,000.

In September, 1859, the name of the town was changed to Paxton, in honor of Sir Joseph Paxton, of England.

The first death that occurred in the settlement was of Thomas Payne, 1857; the first child born, David Daniells.

There are now in the town six churches, representing the Baptist, Congregational, Methodist, Lutheran, Presbyterian and United Presbyterian denominations, and four church edifices; also, a school house, which, for style and convenience, is rarely surpassed in much older and larger towns. This place has also been determined upon as the location of Augustana College, which it is expected will soon be erected, at a cost of about $25,000. The Paxton Record, a weekly newspaper, is published here. A lodge of Good Templars is organized in the town.

From the recent and present rapid growth of the town, with corresponding improvements in the surrounding country, its beautiful and healthy location, together with the enterprise of its inhabitants and present importance, it is but reasonable to suppose that at no very distant period it will equal any in this part of the State. Population, 1000. Postmaster, R. S. Buckland.

Pekin,

An important and flourishing city of Tazewell county, situated on the east side of the Illinois river, and on the line of the Peoria, Pekin & Jacksonville Railroad, 160 miles south by west from Chicago, and 240 miles northeast by river from St. Louis. It is pleasantly located on an elevated plain, and is handsomely laid out. The main street is about one mile in length, runs directly back from the river and is clos ly built up with substantial brick blocks. The court house is a handsome structure of brick, having a fine portico, supported by corinthian columns. The other county buildings are creditable to the place. The city also has a number of elegant private residences. The first settlers of the place were Messrs. Jacob Tharp and William Clark, who located here in 1824. The location being considered an excellent one for a great central city, a village plat was made out in 1828 and the place named "Pekin." This name was suggested by the wife of Mr. Nathan Cromwell, as being expressive of the future size and importance of the embryo city. In 1834 the cholera visited the place, which was, at that time, regarded as one of the principal towns in the west, being by far the largest in that section of the country. Many of the inhabitants were carried off by that fearful epidemic, and the town received a blow that retarded its growth for many years. In 1849 the city was incorporated. It now contains a population of 7,000, and it is rapidly increasing. It has ten churches, eight public schools, (having an average attendance of 557 scholars,) also, one high and several private schools, a lodge of Odd Fellows, two of Free Masons, an encampment of Sons of Temperance and a "grove" of Druids, together with a number of literary and benevolent societies. It has also seven hotels, two weekly newspapers, a private banking house, a large iron foundry and machine shop, carriage and wagon shop, agricultural implement manufactory, distillery, three breweries, a furniture manufactory, pork packing establishment, etc. Large quantities of grain, pork, ice and manufactured articles are annually shipped from this point by river and railroad. The city has a daily stage line to Peoria, tri-weekly to Bloomington and semi-weekly to Atlanta. It has, also, a packet running twice a day to Peoria, and, in good stages of water, a daily packet line to and from St. Louis. The Peoria Pekin & Jacksonville Railroad, (formerly the Illinois River Railroad,) just completed, passes through the city, connecting the Bureau Valley road at Peoria, with the Great Western at Jacksonville, and eventually to continue south to Alton. At a point two miles from and opposite Pekin the P. P. &. J. R. R. connects with the Peoria & Hannibal Railroad now in course of construction. The county surrounding Pekin is equal in productiveness to that of any section of the State, and for many miles on each side of the river abounds in coal of excellent quality, which is being extensively worked. The railroad crosses the river in front of the city, on a handsome iron trestle bridge, supported by six stone piers.

Peoria, Peoria Co

Is a handsome and flourishing city on the right bank of the Illinois River, at the outlet of Peoria Lake, sixty miles north of Springfield and midway between Chicago and St. Louis. The river is navigable for steamboats at all stages of water, and is already the channel of an immense trade. At low water, Peoria Lake is three-fourths of a mile wide from the foot of Main street, at a higher stage of water, when the low lands opposite are overflowed, it is nearly two miles. This lake, with the wooded bluffs beyond, is a most beautiful object of view from all parts of the city. It affords in summer and winter opportunity for the most delightful recreation, the low-lands beyond furnish to the sportsmen, in their season, water fowl in great variety and abundance, from beneath its surface the fisherman draws his prey, and its ice carries coolness to the tables of warmer latitudes.

For situation Peoria is unsurpassed. It lies in the middle of a high plateau four miles in length, and of a width varying from a half mile to a mile and a half, between a circling range of bold bluffs on the west, and the lake and river on the east. The bluffs overlooking the city are occupied with residences, but the larger part of the city is on the level prairie below. Back of the bluffs are the woods along the Kickapoo and beyond them the prairies. Along the Kickapoo, which enters the Illinois just below Peoria, are inexhaustible fields of coal and quarries of free-stone. At the upper end of the plateau on which the city stands, where the range of bluffs approaches the river again, the citizens of Peoria have laid out a cemetery of a hundred and sixty acres, in a spot secluded from the outer world, and most picturesquely varied with wooded hills and ravines.

Towards the last of August, 1673, Father Marquette, a member of the Order of Jesus, burning with zeal for the glory of the Cross, as ardent as that of Loyola and Xavier, each in a different hemisphere, on his return from a voyage down the Mississippi as low as the mouth of the Arkansas, entered Lake Peoria and set foot, (the first white man,) upon this soil. He was accompanied by Monsieur Joliet, a French gentleman of Quebec, concerning whom little else is now known. Father Marquette says in his journal:

"I never saw a more pleasant country than the banks of that river (the Illinois). Altho' my tedious journey shou'd be attended with no other advantage than the salvation of one soul, I shou'd think my pains sufficiently rewarded; and I hope I may presume so much, for having preached the Gospel to the Illinois of Perouarca for three days together, in our return, my words made such an impression upon that poor people that as we were imbarking they brought to me a dying child, to christen him, which I did about half an hour before he dy'd, by a special providence of God, who was pleas'd to save that innocent creature."

The party of La Salle and Hennepin were the next Europeans who visited Peoria. On the first of January, 1680, they entered Lake Pimiteoui, as Father Hennepin calls it, from the Indian tongue, that is a place where there is abundance of fat beasts. They shortly after erected a fort not far from the present city, which La Salle, in grief for losses and disappointments he had suffered, named Crevé cœur. A post was thus established here by the French, which drew around it, gradually, the usual number of missionaries, traders, hunters, explorers and vagabonds, like other trading posts in the West. The whole population of the State of Illinois, when ceded by the French to the English in the year 1763, was not more than 3,000, mostly living at or near Kaskaskia, Cahokia and Peoria.

The first village was in the upper part of the present city, above where the Pottery now stands, but it seems to have been considered an unhealthy location. In the year 1778, the year in which Washington fought the battle of Monmouth, and LaFayette that of Brandywine, one Maillet, taking a disgust to the place, transferred his household gods to a spot on the river bank, a mile and a half lower down. Gradually his compatriots followed him. They called the new metropolis La Ville de Maillet, but little by little the name Peoria usurped its place. Here this community of Canadian French, Indian traders, voyageurs, hunters, idlers and half breeds, cut off from agitations that attend the founding of States and Empires, continued to live in tolerable harmony among themselves and with the surrounding tribes, an easy, indolent, useless life, until the present century.

In 1812, Ninian Edwards, then Governor of the territory of Illinois, ordered a certain Capt. Craig to ascend the Illinois with some militia, to chastise, or hold in check, the Indians. He burnt the village of Peoria, which then contained about seventy dwellings. The greater part of the inhabitants fled to settlements on the Mississippi river. Craig said his boats were fired on from the shore, but the French deny it. Thus, however, ended the French village of Peoria, but the titles to their lots, known as the French claims, have figured largely since in the history of real estate transactions in Peoria.

In 1813 Fort Clark was erected on the river bank, and for a while gave name to the place; in 1826 the present town was laid off and named; in 1831, March 1st, it was duly incorporated by act of legislature, and in 1847 it received incorporation as a city.

The first Trustees of the town, elected in 1835, were Rudolphus Rouse, Chester Hamlin, R. P. Burlingame, Charles W. McClallan and Cyrus Leland. Mr. John Hamlin, the oldest living inhabitant, came to the place in 1826.

Peoria is destined to become a great manufacturing town. Its position, with regard to the State, is central, the surrounding country is unsurpassed in fertility, and within a mile of the city limits, among the bluffs of the Kickapoo, lie inexhaustible beds of coal, from which during the year 1863 were mined, according to the books of the U. S. Assessor, more than seventy thousand tons. These same bluffs possess numerous quarries of most excellent sand stone, fit for building purposes. Its situation upon a river that is navigable at all seasons, and which communicates, through the Illinois and Michigan Canal, with the great Lakes, and through the Mississippi with the Gulf, and its numerous railroads already centering here, or in process of completion, se cure unlimited means of transportation.

A Pottery, the largest in the West, has been erected here and put into partial operation. Foundries of iron and brass, flouring mills, machine shops, plough factories, and manufactories of other agricultural implements, already form a large feature in the business of the place. A single establishment employs eighty hands and consumes a hundred barrels of flour a day in the manufacture of bread and hard biscuit. In the manufacture of the various kinds of refined candies the same establishment consumes from a thousand to twelve hundred lbs. of white sugar each day.

But surrounded by a rich prairie country, of which corn is the staple, and with rising prices to stimulate production, it is not surprising that during the last few years the business of distilling should have obtained an overshadowing predominance.

According to the books of the U. S. Assessor for this district, there were manufactured here, during 1863, seven millions, one hundred and sixty-eight thousand, seven hundred and sixty-two, (7,168,762,) gallons of high-wines. Of this amount 889,772 gallons were exported to foreign countries, without paying duty. The duty on the remaining 6,278,989 gallons, at twenty cents per gallon, yielded the national government one million, two hundred and fifty-five thousand, seven hundred and ninety-seven dollars and ninety-two cents, ($1,255,797,92.) The attention and capital now turned in this direction, will, in the course of a few years, undoubtedly seek other channels equally profitable.

Factories spring up on ground that has coal for a subsoil. The cost of transporting the raw material to the factory or the manufactured product to market, enters largely into the cost of the article to the consumer. But it is the transportation of the fuel which drives the machinery that costs the most. The copper of Lake Superior, the lead of Galena, and the iron of Missouri are not far off. The food to nourish millions springs from the bountiful soil of these surrounding prairies, and here, upon these shores and under these hills, are provided, by the lavish hand of nature, the two remaining requisites for a great manufacturing town—facility of transportation and abundance of coal.

Peoria takes pride in her well established and efficient system of Public Schools. Six large, commodious edifices afford accommodations for the Grammar, Intermediate and Primary departments of the various districts. The noble High School, of imposing effect, crowns the series.

Of churches there are twenty-seven, viz: Two Presbyterian, O.S., one Presbyterian, N.S., one Cumberland Presbyterian, one United Presbyterian, one Congregational, five Methodist, two Lutheran, one Episcopal German, four Baptist, two Episcopal, one Disciples, three Catholic, one New Jerusalem, one Universalist and one Hebrew.

There is a City Library with 4,000 volumes, and a reading room connected with it. The German Library has 1,500 volumes. The Germans have also a very flourishing German school, with three teachers, the building erected and the school sustained by private effort. There are five newspapers, two English and two German (dailies), and one monthly magazine.

There are the usual number of other institutions. Seventeen hotels, nine flour mills, three tobacco factories, four private banking houses, a water company, bridge association, Turner's Society, Gas and Coke Company, Agricultural and Mechanical Society, Typographical Union, Young Men's Christian Association, two Fire Insurance Companies, four Blue Lodges, one Royal Arch Chapter, one Council R. & S. Masters, and one Commandery Knights Templars, three Lodges and one Encampment of Odd Fellows, one "Grove of Druids," and an efficient Fire Department.

By the census of 1860, the population of Peoria was about 15,000. It is now much larger.

Peotone,

Pera Station,

Perry,

A post village and township in the northern part of Pike county, ten miles south-east of Meredosia.

Peru,

An imporant city of La Salle county, on the northern bank of the Illinois River, immediately below the junction of the Illinois and Michigan Canal, and on the line of the Chicago and Rock Island Railroad, 100 miles west by south from Chicago, and 230 miles north-east from St. Louis. In good stages of water Peru is connected with Peoria and St. Louis by a regular line of river packets.

The first settlement was made here in 1826, and the place incorporated as a city in 1850. The main business portion of the city consists of one street extending along the river bank, immediately behind which rises a limestone bluff from 150 to 200 feet high. The main street is quite closely built up with substantial brick blocks, and the bluff in the rear is crowned with many fine private residences. Its situation, combining as it does, excellent shipping facilities by river, canal and railroad, is such that it will always be a point for considerable trade. The site of the city is underlaid by an inexhaustible bed of bituminous coal, which, for the purpose of generating steam, is unsurpassed. The coal bed is now being extensively worked by the "Peru Coal Mining Company," having a shaft of 338 feet depth within the city limits. The galleries of this mine extend entirely under the river and for about one-fourth of a mile beyond. About 100 tons per day are now being taken out, worth, at the mine, in 1863, $3,50 per ton. About 60 men are employed, the miners receiving $1,60 per ton for getting the coal out, and the other laborers $1,50 per day. The manufacturing interests of Peru are important, and consist in part of two large steam flouring mills, three breweries, a plow factory, fanning mill factory, iron foundry, wagon shops, furniture factory, and the usual variety of mechanical trades. The city has three elevators and grain warehouses, a shipyard, weekly newspaper, private banking house, etc. Upwards of 1,000,000 bushels of grain are shipped from this point each year by canal, river and railroad. The ice trade is also an important branch of business, upwards of 20,000 tons being annually shipped down the river to St. Louis and other ports.

The place has six churches, eight public schools, and a lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows. Population about 5,000. The city of La Salle immediately joins Peru, and the main business portions of the places are about two miles apart. A spirit of rivalry has tended to keep the two places distinct, and has, perhaps, resulted to the benefit of each; they are so near together, however, that they must eventually become united, and will form one of the largest and most important cities of the State.

Pesotum,

A post village and station on the Chicago Branch of the Illinois Central Railroad, 143 miles south of Chicago.

Petersburg.

This town of about 2,000 inhabitants, is the county seat of Menard county, was laid out as a town in 1832. It was named, as we learn from a citizen, after one of the early settlers, named Peter Lukins, changed into Petersburg. There is a story of some local amusement between him and another early settler, George Wasturten, by which Peter succeeded in having it named after himself.

It has a Court House, four churches—Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist and Presbyterian,—the offices of the collector and assessor of the U. S., for this Cong. district are here, it has, also, three steam mills,—two flouring and one saw mill,—one woolen factory, carrying on the business in all its branches, also, several tin ware, stove, plow, wagon and cabinet manufacturing establishments.

The town is beautifully located on the Sangamon River, twenty-two miles north-west from the Capital. It is nestled among the hills, and has plenty of wood, water, coal and stone, and is the wealthiest and most prosperous agricultural portion of the State. Connected by railroad with St. Louis, which will soon be extended north, connecting with the east. The principle surplus of this county is cattle, hogs, wheat and wool. This town offers great inducements to manufacturers, on account of its great supply of material.

Pinckneyville,

Is a post town and capital of Perry county. This place was incorporated under the general incorporation law, in 1857. It was afterwards in 1861, incorporated by special act of the Legislature. It is located near the centre of the county, in Section 24, Township 5, S. R. 3 west, 10 miles from Tamaroa and Du Quoin Station, on the Illinois Central Railroad. It was laid out July 21st, 1829, by William H. Threlkel, William Johnson and John Pile, jr., county commissioners of Perry county, as the county seat. Dr. H. B. Jones, Joseph Wells, Col. William Edwards and Alonzo Edwards were the first settlers of the place. Dr. Jones, a native of Kentucky, moved here from old Brownsville, Jackson county, in 1827, and was for several years a practicing physician, and during the latter portion of his life a lawyer of high standing. He was a member of the Constitutional Convention which formed the present constitution of the State, in 1847. He held the first office after the organization of the county. At one time he was clerk of the county and circuit courts, probate judge, justice of the peace and postmaster of the place. He died in 1855, in the 55th year of his age.

Richard Jones, a son of Dr. Jones, was the first child born in the place, in 1829.

The first store was put up by Charles C. Gloose, in 1830, an old resident of this county, now deceased.

The country around the place is very productive, the soil is rich and in a good state of cultivation. All kinds of fruit, such as are grown in any part of southern Illinois, grows here profusely. There is an abundance of building material in the vicinity, such as wood and stone, and plenty of timber to supply the prairies. There are inexhaustible coal fields, the whole country surrounding the town, and the town itself, being underlaid with a strata of from six to seven feet of the best of coal, from 10 to 40 feet below the surface, with good limestone and slate roofing.

There are three churches, Methodist, New School and Old School Presbyterian, in a prosperous condition.

Mitchell Lodge No. 85 of A. F. and A. M., meet at the Masonic Hall, the first Saturday on or before the full moon. The Sons of Temperance meet at their Hall on Friday evening of each week. The Perry County Agricultural Society hold their county fairs annually at the fair grounds, which are beautifully situated one-half mile west of the town.

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs. Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The public buildings of the place are a court house, jail, etc.

The town is improving and has a good, healthy growth.

Polo,

A thriving incorporated village of Ogle Co. in the township of Buffalo, on the line of the Illinois Central Railroad, 12 miles north of Dixon, and 97 west from Chicago. The place is emphatically a railroad town, having sprung up entirely since 1850. It was incorporated, in 1857, and named after the celebrated eastern traveler Marco Polo. The country in the midst of which Polo is situated, is unsurpassed for fertility by that of any part of the state; it is mostly rolling prairie, and produces in the greatest abundance, both root and cereal crops. This is one of the principal grain shipping points in the interior of the state. The village is pleasantly situated, and contains several fine private residences. It has four churches, two hotels, two public schools, two Masonic lodges, and a lodge each of Good Templars and Odd Fellows. It has also a weekly republican newspaper, together with manufactories

Princeton,

The county seat of Bureau county, is situated 109 miles W. S. W. from Chicago, on the C., B. & Q. R. R. It is surrounded by a rich agricultural country, and is a place of considerable importance as a shipping point for grain, cattle, hogs, etc., and a centre of trade for a large section of country.

The situation is one of the most desirable, for an inland town, of any in the State. A beautiful prairie stretches to the south and east, while north and west, skirting the town, is the "Bureau timber." The Bureau River is one mile distant.

The principal street is Main, on which, within a few blocks of the court-house, the greater part of the business was formerly done, but since the completion of the railroad a flourishing business has sprung up near the depot, one mile west from the court-house.

As a place of residence, Princeton has many advantages. The streets are well kept, and provided with about twenty miles of good plank side walks. The lots are spacious, and many elegant gardens and grounds surround the dwellings of both the poor and the rich.

The inhabitants are mainly from the New England and Middle states. The foreign population consists principally of Swedes, who are, as a class, thrifty and industrious.

The first settlement in Princeton township was made in 1829, by Elijah Epperson. In 1830, John and Curtis Williams settled at Round Point, now the farm of Cyrus Bryant. In 1831 the Hampshire Colony, Roland Mosely, Daniel Smith, John Musgrove, John M. Gay, Robert Clark, Joel Doolittle, Nathan Chamberlain, jr., Mrs Flint, James Hays and families, Cyrus and John H. Bryant, Lucius Cutler, Alonzo Cook, William O., Ebenezer and Lucy Chamberlain, John L. Ament, Rev. Lucius Farnham, Arthur Bryant, Abraham Jones, and Silas D. Cartwright.

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs, Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

The first white child born in the village was a daughter of John M. Gay.

The village was laid off on the school section 16, T. 16, N. 9, E. of the 4th P. M. The first survey was made in the spring of 1832, but the "Black Hawk" war breaking out soon after, the inhabitants were driven off, so that no sale of lots occurred till May, 1833. The sale was held at Hennepin, the county seat of Putnam county, which then embraced all of the present county of Bureau. But few lots were sold, and the highest price paid for any one was five dollars. The smallest lot in the original survey contained one acre 17½ rods. The first building erected was a log blacksmith's shop, built in the autumn of 1833, by Silas D. Cartwright, on the lot on which the Congregational Church now stands. In September, 1834, John M. Gay built a small house, and removed his family to it. In 1835 and 1836 the population of the township and village increased very rapidly. In April, 1837, Bureau county was formed from Putnam county, and in June of that year the county seat was established at Princeton. Princeton from that time has had a healthy and constant prosperity and increase. In 1854, the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, was built through it, which added much to its growth and prosperity. The whole population received a new impulse. Old buildings were demolished, and fine blocks of stores occupied their places. New business men came in, and old business men retired. A new era had opened upon the once quiet and retired village.

The principal public buildings are, a courthouse, (one of the best and most convenient in the State); several churches, among which are the Congregational, where Owen Lovejoy preached for 17 years; Disciples, German, Methodist Episcopal, Moravian, Presbyterian, Protestant Methodist, Roman Catholic, (unfinished,) and Swedish. The Methodist Episcopal Church, especially, is a fine new brick building. The principal hotel is the "American House," built at an expense of $32,000, one of the most commodious and best kept hotels in any county town in the State. There are two public union school buildings, "North" and "South" schools, and three or four select schools.

The population of the town is about 3,000. There are two weekly papers published here, the Bureau County Republican, and the Bureau County Patriot. The Republican office has been established since 1846. The office now runs a cylinder power press, with facilities for job work, exceeded by few country offices. Coal is furnished the town from mines in the county near Sheffield and Tiskilwa.

Quincy.

Adams Co.

The city of Quincy is situated upon the eastern shore of the Mississippi, at an elevation of about one hundred and twenty feet above the level of the river. The river bank at this point rises almost from the water's edge, and forms a landing, practicable for steamboats of the largest class, at all seasons of the year.

Quincy was originally selected as a town site in the year 1821, by the Hon. John Wood, who visited this neighborhood in the fall of that year, in company with two others, named Moffitt and Flinn, in order to look for and examine some land belonging to the latter, and which is now within the city limits. He was so impressed with the beauty of the spot, and so well satisfied that from its geographical position it must become the great point of outlet for the immense productions which must speedily follow emigration to this and neighboring counties, that he determined, in his own words, to "settle here for life." He returned in the fall of the succeeding year, and erected the first house within the present bounds of Quincy.

In the spring succeeding Mr. Wood's arrival, Major Jeremiah Rose, a native of New York, came with his family and shared his cabin, Mrs. Rose being the first white woman, and her daughter, now Mrs. George W. Brown, the first white child, residing in Quincy. The next house was built in the spring of 1824, by Mr. Willard Keyes, a native of Vermont, and a former acquaintance of Mr. Wood. At this time there was no white settlement in the Military Tract north of Gilead, a point sixty miles south of Quincy, (then called Cole's Point,) near the centre of Calhoun county, and but two other white men, by name Perigo and Lile, in the bounds of what now is Adams county.

In the fall of 1824, John Wood inserted in a newspaper printed in Edwardsville, a notice that application would be made to the next Legislature for the establishment of a new county, defining its boundaries. In accordance with this application, by an act approved January 13th, 1825, the Legislature provided for the organization of Adams county, fixing its boundaries as described in the notice, and as they now exist. Three commissioners were appointed to locate the county seat, who, after traveling through and attentively examining the county, decided upon this spot as the one best calculated for the future convenience and accommodation of the people. They christened the new town Quincy, in honor of the President, and, although it must be confessed the ceremonials were not of the most imposing character, thenceforth the city of three log cabins rejoiced in a name.

Henry H. Snow, pursuant to an order dated November 9th, 1825, was employed to survey and draw plats of the town, and two hundred and thirty lots, ninety-nine by a hundred and ninety-eight feet, were laid off. Streets were laid off sixty-six feet wide, all but Maine street, which is eighty-two and a half feet wide, and crossing each other at right angles. A space of four hundred feet square was reserved in the centre of the town for a public square, now called Washington Square, and the inclosure which now is Jefferson Square was set apart for a public cemetery.

From the close of the year 1825 until the beginning of the year 1835, the growth of Quincy was not rapid. A variety of causes combined to produce this result. Many miles distant from mills, and from any point where provisions or supplies of any kind could be obtained, her residents were obliged to dispense with many of those articles which are considered in older communities as among the "necessaries of life." Their nearest blacksmith shop was at Atlas, forty miles distant, where they carried their plows to be sharpened, swung upon a horse's back.

In the spring of 1826, Mr. Asher Anderson opened the first store, and in the fall of the same year a court house was built of hewed logs, on the corner of Maine and Fifth streets, and in this building the first school was organized and kept.

In 1833, the first regular church was organized, numbering fifteen members.

In June, 1834, the town was incorporated, and from this period may be dated the rapid advancement of Quincy in population and wealth. In the year 1835, it contained about seven hundred inhabitants.

During the year 1837, the Quincy House, which even now, surrounded as it is with the imposing structures of a later date, will attract attention, was erected. The Court House was built the same year, upon the east side of the Public Square, and the "Quincy Library Association," which has since become so important a feature in the literary character of Quincy, was organized.

Quincy is 160 miles above St. Louis, and 110 miles west of Springfield, the seat of government of Illinois;—the county seat of Adams county, the second county in the State in population and wealth. She is the market for a country which is unsurpassed for fertility and productiveness. On the north and east, within a distance easily accessible by railroad, lie vast beds of superior coal. The principal of these is at Colchester, McDonough county, fifty-three miles north-east, on the C., B. & Q. R. R. The mines are owned and worked by residents of Quincy. About 100 miners are employed. The quality of the coal is considered superior to that of any other mines in the State. The average price of coal in Quincy is $4.50 per ton, and about 30,000 tons are consumed per annum.

Rafts of pine lumber are constantly arriving from the Upper Mississippi, but supply heretofore has scarcely been commensurate with the demand. Upon the bluffs adjoining on the north and south, on the island in the river within a short distance above and below, and immediately opposite on the Missouri shore, lie vast tracts of timber lands which will eventually be made to furnish not only a large proportion of timber required for building purposes, but also of that employed in manufacturing wagons, household furniture, &c., to which it is admirably adapted.

The bluffs in the neighborhood contain large deposits of the best limestone, admirably suited to building purposes, and extensive quarries supply the city with it in great abundance. Lime and brick are manufactured on an extensive scale, and late patented improvements, have greatly facilitated the process, and materially lessened the expense. In short, all kinds of material employed in building, may be purchased in any quantities at the lowest rates.

The beauty and healthfulness of the location, as well as the comparatively low figures at which real estate is held, have attracted to this point a large proportion of mechanics and laboring men, who are to a large and perhaps unequalled extent house-holders and proprietors of the dwellings which they inhabit.

The position of Quincy upon the Mississippi River enables her readily to import the raw material which goes to supply her manufactories. In addition to this great natural advantage which affords cheap and reliable means during three-fourths of the year for the distribution abroad of manufactured articles, as well as for the reception of materials, railroads are built to the north, south, east and west. On the west lies a country of unsurpassed fertility, of great extent, and rich in mineral resources that must become tributary to her, and she will thus be put in possession not only of a large and profitable trade, but of a plentiful supply of products necessary to feed her work-shops and factories.

The Levee and Harbor are unsurpassed by those of any other port on the Mississippi river. The Levee is wide and admirably suited to business purposes. It is easily accessible to boats of the largest draught, at the lowest stages of water. Quincy Bay, which extends from the northern end of the Levee, four miles in a northerly direction, being completely landlocked, offers rare inducements of which many steamers yearly avail themselves, as a secure place for winter quarters. The depth of water is sufficient to admit the largest boat with perfect safety, and their security from damage by floating ice, upon the "breaking up" of the river in the spring, is entire.

Two daily lines of packets run to St. Louis, and one to Keokuk—a city in Iowa, some 40 miles above here, at the foot of the lower rapids.

In the year 1853, Quincy was made a port of entry and attached to the collection district of New Orleans. A yearly increasing number of her merchants import their goods directly from the European manufacturers, with but a single re-shipment. The freight upon goods to New Orleans, from the various European ports, is much less than from the same ports to Boston, New York, Philadelphia, or other eastern cities.

On the Illinois side of the Mississippi River for a distance of more than one hundred and fifty miles, Quincy is the only point where the bluffs approach the river, and where the landing of steamers of heavy draught, during the lower stages of the water, is at all practicable. She is connected with different points by the Chicago, Burlington & Quincy Railroad, the Toledo & Wabash Valley Railroad and the Quincey & Palmyra, which connects at Palmyra with the Hannibal & St. Joseph Railroad, thus opening to her the most fertile parts of Illinois and Missouri.

The elevation upon which the city is built commands a view of the county for more than fifteen miles in either direction, which is unsurpassed for the variety and beauty of its scenery. No landscape on the Mississippi is more lovely than that which is here presented to the eye in the season of foliage. The bold outline of the bluffs skirting the western horizon, the wide expanse of forest on either side extending to the water's edge, and the thickly wooded islands dotting the surface of the stream, combine to form a picture such as rarely meets the eye amid the comparatively monotonous scenery of the West. The Mississippi at this point is about one mile in width. Its western shore is lined by a dense forest, extending several miles into the interior, and affording an ample supply of fuel and lumber. The north-western portion of the city extends along the shore of "Quincy Bay," a beautiful sheet of water. Many of the largest manufacturing establishments of Quincy are built upon the shore of this beautiful inlet. The flour mills consume about 2,000,000 bushels of wheat yearly. The four principal ones are the Eagle, Castle, Star and City Mills, each with a capacity of about 1,250 bushels daily. About 100,000 hogs are packed here annually. There are three extensive tobacco factories, each with large brick buildings; one large agricultural implement manufactory; four iron foundries and machine shops; one stove foundry; several distilleries and breweries; and saddle and harness manufacturing is carried on extensively.

There are other manufactories of plows, wagons, carriages, etc., too numerous to mention. The country in the immediate vicinity of the city is gently rolling. Groves of magnificent trees, alternate with fields which, in the season of tillage, are covered with an abundant vegetation. Neat and comfortable farm houses and highly cultivated farms every where attest the industry and success with which the business of agriculture is carried on. The area embraced within the corporate limits of the city is about five square miles.

Gas works were erected in the fall of 1855, and the streets are now well lighted in all the most frequented parts of the city.

Great attention has been given to shading and adorning public and private grounds throughout the city. The forest trees have been preserved, so far as it could be done consistantly with the necessities of building and grading; and where they were wanting, thrifty elms and maples have been transplanted, and are now becoming yearly more valuable for the purposes of ornament and shade. Large tracts of valuable real estate, some of it in the very heart of the city, have been purchased by the city government, and reserved for Parks and Ornamental Grounds.

From the business centre of the city the ground inclines gently to the north, south and east, affording many sites of rare beauty for private residences. The natural advantages of the location have been improved with a taste and liberality seldom found in a country where the useful is is so generally cultivated at the expense of the beautiful. Many elegant residences are now in process of erection in various parts of the city. Among these is the dwelling of ex-Lieut.-Governor Wood, which, when completed, will be the most beautiful, as well as the most costly, private residence in the state. It is of octagonal form, faced on all sides with Athens marble, and 93 feet in depth. The style of architecture is Modern Italian, with a rotunda in the centre 24 feet in diameter, and surmounted by a fine observatory.

Woodland cemetery is situated in the southwestern portion of the city, extending on the western side nearly to the river. It includes an area of forty-five acres. The grounds are tastefully arranged, and thickly wooded with noble oaks and maples of native growth. The retirement of the situation, and the delightful scenery around, render it singularly appropriate to the purpose to which it is devoted. No one who has ever visited it can fail to admire the taste which presided over the selection and adornment of this beautiful spot.

The mineral springs situated three miles north of Quincy, and surrounded by the most beautiful scenery in the west, are destined, when improved, to become one of the most important features of Quincy. They are three in number, the largest supplying thirty gallons per minute. Their chemical properties are sulphur, iron and iodine, and as a stimulant, tonic, dietetic and alterative, the water is pronounced by physicians, who are familiar with springs, both in this country and Europe, to be the most valuable extant. They are accessible by carriages over good roads, leading through some of the finest scenery in the Mississippi valley.

Much attention has been given to the organization of an efficient system of public schools. Large and convenient buildings have been erected in various parts of the city, and these are well supplied with experienced and competent instructors. The large number of pupils in attendance—being over 1,000—is a flattering indication of the interest which is felt in the important subject of popular education. In the public schools instruction is given in those branches of science which are of universal utility. For pupils who desire to pursue a more extensive course of study, there are a variety of private institutions—many of them of a very high character. Among these the Methodist Male and Female College is worthy of especial mention. It is well endowed, and employs a large corps of accomplished and competent teachers, who give instruction to a large number of pupils, in the various practical and ornamental branches which are considered essential to a thorough and finished education. The building occupied by this school is large and handsome, and well supplied with libraries and scientific apparatus. The buildings occupied by the public schools of Quincy are generally large and commodious, and are sufficient to accommodate all the children of the city who are entitled by law to participate in the advantages which they afford. The Fifth Ward school house is an excellent specimen of school architecture. The public schools have been, since their establishment, under the supervision of competent superintendents, and the system which has been organized and administed has proved, in the highest degree, efficient and satisfactory.

Quincy is honorably distinguished among her sister cities by the unusual number, as well as the size and beauty, of her churches. Her religious societies are numerous, influential and wealthy, and are remarkable for the liberality with which they contribute to the various objects of Christian benevolence. Their influence is strongly felt in maintaining an elevated moral tone in the community.

To the emigrant who is about selecting a permanent location in the great west, no consideration is more important than the moral and social character of the population in the various localities which invite emigration and settlement. No facilities for the prosecution of business, and the acquisition of wealth, can compensate for the absence of an intelligent society and educational advantages.

In enumerating the advantages of Quincy as a place of residence, the healthfulness of her location should not be forgotten. The city is almost entirely exempt from the diseases which are the scourge of the Mississippi Valley. The elevated site upon which it is built, and its copious supply of excellent water, may account for the very small annual mortality, as shown by the official returns.

Having thus enumerated some of the many advantages of our beautiful city as a place of residence, we have only to say, in conclusion, that we invite the emigrant, who is in search of a home, to visit Quincy and test the correctness of our statements by the results of his own observation.

Rockford,

An important and rapidly growing city of Winnebago county, of which it is the seat of justice, beautifully situated on both sides of the Rock River, 90 miles north-west from Chicago. It is located on the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, at its intersection with the Kenosha, Rockford & Rock Island Railroad. It is surrounded by an excellent agricultural country, and is unsurpassed in point of health, beauty of location, or business facilities, by any inland city in the State.

The Rock River furnishes here an immense water power, which has been improved by the erection of a large number of flouring mills, manufactories of agricultural implements, etc., the number and character of which will be seen by reference to the annexed list of professions, trades, etc. The celebrated "Manny Reapers" are manufactured here, upwards of 4,000 of which were turned out during the year 1863.

The place was settled in 1835, principally by emigrants from New York State and New England, and now contains a population of nearly 7,000. Its growth has been steady, slow and healthy, and there is no doubt but that its natural advantages will eventually cause it to become one of the largest inland cities of the North-west.

The city is regularly laid out, on high and level ground, with the streets running at right angles, lighted with gas, and mostly shaded with trees. The "Rockford Female Seminary," an excellent educational institution, under the management of the Congregational Church, is delightfully situated on the east side of the river, in a beautiful grove. There are no public buildings worthy of note in the city, with the exception of two handsome public edifices, of cream-colored limestone. There are, however, many elegant and tasteful private residences, and the whole town has an air of substantial wealth and prosperity seldom seen in the new cities of the west.

The city contains five flour mills, three reaper manufactories, two machine shops, a large manufactory of threshing machines, together with planing mills, saw mills, tanneries, breweries, etc. It has three weekly newspapers and one monthly, (one weekly being printed in the Swedish language, the organ of the Swedish Methodist denomination,) four banking houses, an insurance company, a lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows, ten churches, five hotels, a public library, and numerous schools. The surrounding country produces fine crops of corn, wheat, sorghum, wool, etc. Large quantities of butter, cheese, pork, beef, etc., are annually shipped by railroad from this point to Chicago and the East. Upwards of 1,600,000 bushels of the various kinds of grain were shipped from Rockford during the year 1863.

Mechanics wishing to select a Western town as a business location, will find as many inducements at Rockford as at any place in the interior of the State.

Rock Island,

A flourishing city, capital of Rock Island county, on the Mississippi River, at a point where it takes a westerly course two miles above the mouth of Rock River. It is situated at the foot of the upper rapids, which extend nearly fifteen miles. The place derives its name from an island three miles long and from one and a half to two miles wide, the southern extremity of which is nearly opposite the town. The base of the island is limestone, and on two of its sides the rock rises perpendicularly above the water and forms the foundation walls of Fort Armstrong on the south end of the island. This Fort was erected in the year 1816, under the direction of Lieut. Col. William Lawrence. A United States Arsenal is about to be erected at this point.

In the immediate vicinity of the city the celebrated Indian Chief Black Hawk and his band resided. Four miles south is Black Hawk's Watch tower, a high bluff facing Rock River, from which there is an extensive view, and on which Black Hawk stood and saw the approach of the whites who were about to drive him from his favorite hunting grounds.

Rock Island is connected with the East by the Rock Island Railroad to Chicago, 181 miles distant, and with the West by the Mississippi and Missouri Railroad, and its various branches. At this point is the great railroad bridge which connects Illinois and Iowa, and which was a few years since the subject of a long and vexatious litigation in the U. S. Courts.

For manufacturing purposes there is no city in the West offering greater advantages than this. Having an immense water power, near access to coal, and the best facilities for transportation of wares and merchandise north, south, east and west. A large number of factories, flouring mills, breweries, &c., are in successful operation. The city contains a number of churches, among which are Baptist, Lutheran, Methodist E., Presbyterian, Protestant Episcopal, and Roman Catholic. The schools are conducted on the Union principle. The High School building is very large and convenient. Two daily papers are published, "Rock Island Union," (daily and weekly Republican,) and the "Evening Argus," (daily and weekly Democratic.) There are secret and benevolent societies: Trio Lodge, No. 67, Fort Armstrong Lodge, No. 186, and Barret Chapter, No. 18, A. F. & A. M.; Rock Island Lodge, No. 18, Watch Tower Lodge, No. 113, Black Hawk Lodge, No. 170, and Rock Island Encampment, No. 12, I. O. O. F. There is also a City Library, Reading Room Association, and a County Agricultural Society.

The Chippiannock Cemetery is situated about a mile and a half from Rock Island, and embraces about sixty acres. The name Chippiannock is an Indian word signifying "a village of the dead." The greater portion of this cemetery was formerly a Sioux burial ground. Its natural beauty is not excelled in the West, having every variety of hill and dale, as well as numerous varieties of native shade trees.

The stranger who may visit the city for pleasure will find many objects of interest, as well as beautiful scenery in the vicinity. Population, in 1860, 5,130.

Shelbyville,

An important and flourishing city of Shelby county, of which it is the county seat, situated about half a mile north of the St. Louis, Terre Haute & Alton Railroad, and on the west bank of the Okaw, or Kaskaskia, River, 110 miles east by north from St. Louis.

The place was first settled in 1824, by Robert Daniel, and in the spring of 1827, Joseph Oliver opened a store. In 1831, George H. Beebe erected a corn and flour mill. In the fall of 1829, the first county court was held here, in a log court house, and in the same year a Methodist church was erected.

Until the opening of the railroad, the place attained to no prominence, but since that event it has greatly improved, and is now one of the most prominent towns in the State. It is surrounded by a fine farming country, with a fair proportion of rich prairie and wood land. Fine quarries of sand and limestone are worked on the river, but a short distance from the city. Coal of excellent quality abounds in the vicinity. The city has now a population of 2,000, five churches, two public schools, three flour mills, one woolen factory, two weekly newspapers, two hotels, a private banking house, and various trades and professions.

Springfield.

Springfield, the county seat of Sangamon county, and capital of the State of Illinois, is situated upon a beautiful prairie stretching from the Sangamon river on the north to the timbered lands which line its tributaries on the south. The evenness and monotony of the prairie is happily relieved by the many creeks and branches which wind their way across it; and the isolated groves, scattered here and there along their banks, render the whole scene very attractive and picturesque. The city itself is distant about five miles from the nearest point on the river, and had the first settlers supposed for an instant that the rude huts which they were erecting would form a commencement for the State Capital, they would undoubtedly have built upon the elevated lands that lie contiguous to the river. But there was no evidence at this time that such was to be the case, and thus the location of the Prairie City was unintentionally fixed.

The present center of the city, however, is by no means the oldest part of it. Farther west, on the hill-sides and in the locality now familiarly known as "Old Town," the work of building the "Seat of Empire" was commenced. Here, about the year 1819, a hardy pioneer from North Carolina, named Kelly, together with his two sons, built for themselves a permanent residence in the shape of a rude log cabin. Two more cabins were soon erected, one for each of the sons, and then the blue smoke curling up from the clay chimneys of the hunters' home and the sharp crack of their trusty rifles as they brought down the unsuspecting deer with unerring aim, convinced the "red men" around, that their supremacy was broken, and that the "Star of Empire" was still driving them to the more distant west.

Another family of emigrants named Dugget arrived in the year 1820. They settled a little south and east of what is now "Hutchinson's Cemetery." No other settlements were made in the immediate locality until the spring of 1821, when several families were added to the infant colony. Prominent among these may be mentioned C. R. Matheny and Elijah Iles. The last named was a Kentuckian by birth but had emigrated to Missouri several years before the time of which we are writing. Dissatisfied with that country, he turned eastward again, determined to locate in the country of the Sangamon. Ascending the Illinois river on a flat-boat, he disembarked at Beardstown, which then consisted of a single log cabin and that unoccupied. Striking boldly across the country he made his way to the new settlement, and found a welcome in the family of the elder Kelly. Here he remained as the guest of this "Nimrod of the Prairie" for several months. The writer will never forget the animated expression of this old pioneer's face as, standing almost beneath the shadow of his palatial residence, on a beautiful evening not long since, he declared that those were the happiest days of his life. "Better living," said he, "I never enjoyed. Kelly's cabin was a home indeed. Johnny cake, venison and wild honey every day, with roast pig on Sundays. Ah!" sighed the old man as he concluded, "those happy days are over."

The population of the "rising town" gradually increased, until Springfield,(or Calhoun as it was then called,) became the most important point in the country. The first circuit court was held here at the house of John Kelly, on the first day of May, 1821, continuing in session nearly all of one day. Hon. John Reynolds was judge; C. R. Mattheny, clerk; John Tailor, sheriff, and Henry Starr, prosecuting attorney.

In the year 1823, commissioners were appointed to select a permanent seat for the Circuit Court of the county. We are told that the claims of "Calhoun" to that honor were stoutly contested by the "town of Sangamon," a little cluster of cabins that stood nearer the river. After considerable strife between the "rising municipalities," and no small display of electioneering and "log-rolling," on the part of the leading men of both localities, the commissioners decided in favor of Calhoun, and from that time the fortunes of "Sangamon Town" began to wane. It is said that not a "mouldering stone" nor "rotten log" remains to tell the story of her desolation.

From this time forward courts continued to be regularly holden, but nothing of peculiar interest occurred to break the monotony of judicial circles until the 27th day of September, 1826, when a special term was called to try Nathaniel Vannoy for the murder of his wife. He was found guilty, and sentenced to be hung. The execution took place on the 20th of November, 1826. It was the first and last infliction of the death penalty in Sangamon county from its organization down to the present writing.

Soon after his arrival, Elijah Iles opened a small store in a cabin which he had erected for that purpose, and from his shelves the handful of settlers throughout the county received their supplies. Some years afterwards, when the population of the county had increased sufficiently to justify it, one Price opened a hotel in a two story log house. He made an excellent "host," it is said, but was soon eclipsed by Mr. A. Herndon, who opened what was known as "The Indian Queen Hotel." It long remained the principal hotel of Sangamon county.

Having no great natural advantages, the town of Springfield and the country round about increased but slowly in population, and there was nothing in the early history of either to indicate their future importance. The southern part of the State was at this time the most thickly settled, having received the great tide of emigration that rolled up from the states below the Ohio; and while the hardy pioneers of Sangamon were upturning the virgin soil, and struggling with uncultivated nature, the chosen representatives of the people were devising a code of laws, and wrangling in fierce debate, in the ancient and more civilized town of Kaskaskia. The eastern emigrants, true to their early predilections, had established themselves in the most northern parts of the State, commenced the now great city of Chicago, and opened communications across the lakes with the great commercial marts of the Middle States. Thus, while both extremities of the State were being rapidly populated, the untamed growth of nature was waving over the prairies of Central Illinois; the solitude of its forests was unbroken, and Springfield scarcely known beyond the limits of its own county. Under these circumstances, the wonder is, not why Springfield has not become a great city, but rather, why she has become a city at all.

Still, as the time drew near for the removal of the State Capital from Vandalia, Springfield was considered of sufficient importance to have her claims to that honor favorably considered. Here nine representatives to the General Assembly were all pledged to vote for the removal of the seat of government to Springfield, and by a system of "log rolling" and "legislative barter," which reflected very little credit on those engaged in it, the great desideratum was accomplished.

It was about the time that the "Town Lot" and "Internal Improvement" excitement was at its height, that the representatives from Sangamon saw that it would be an excellent lever with which to roll the seat of government to their own county seat. Accordingly, they readily agreed with the members favoring "Internal Improvements" to vote "aye" with them on their great measure, provided they, in turn, would vote for making Springfield the Capital. The "trade" was effected, and thus, in the language of Governor Ford, in his excellent "History of Illinois," "It was made to cost the state about six million of dollars to remove the seat of government from Vandalia to Springfield, half of which sum would have purchased all the real estate in that town at three prices.

The first session of the Legislature held in Springfield was in the year 1839–40. As no building had as yet been appropriated, the Senate held its session in the Old Methodist Church, and the House of Representatives met in the Second Presbyterian Church. A bill to incorporate the city was immediately introduced. It readily passed both Houses, and received the assent of the Governor, and the old town organization was immediately thrown aside to make way for the more important organization of a city government. At the first election for city officers, Benjamin S. Clement was elected Mayor, and James R. Gray, Joseph Klein, Washington Iles and William Prentiss were chosen Aldermen, to represent their respective wards in the Common Council. The other offices created by the charter were filled by the appointment of the Council, immediately after its organization. The population of the city at this time was about 2,600.

The building of the two Railroads, which now pass the city was undertaken by the State soon after the adoption of the "Internal Improvement" system; but the work upon them progressed so slowly that they were fast becoming a by-word among the people. At length they were placed in the hands of private corporations and active work on them was resumed. The Alton & Chicago Railroad was opened for traffic on the 10th of September, 1852, and was extended to Bloomington on the 18th of October, 1853. On the 1st day of August, 1854, the first train ran through to Joliet. Since that time its business operations have been eminently successful. It has constantly gained the public favor and is now hardly surpassed by any railroad in the west. The extension of the Great Western Railroad to Toledo, a few years ago, has also been a source of incalculable benefit to the city; and if the business on these roads continue to increase according to the ratio that has marked their course during the past five years, the absence of lake and river navigation will hardly be deplored.

The population of Springfield is now about 15,000, and is rapidly increasing. Here are representatives from nearly every nation under the sun—the German element being stronger perhaps than that of any other foreign nation. They are settled principally in the north-western part of the city, while the Portuguese, who found a refuge here several years ago from the persecutions of their native country, are confined the north-eastern part.

The dwelling Houses are principally of wood and the varied styles of architecture which they present afford a striking display of mechanical excellence and artistic taste. At an early day much labor was expended in planting forest trees along all the principal streets. These have been carefully preserved and are now so large and dense that in the summer season they completely shade the sidewalks and give to the streets the appearance of beautiful avenues and gay promenades.

The streets are generally broad and ample, and invariably intersect each other at right angles. The Town Branch which runs through the southern part of the city was long a source of great annoyance to those who lived near it, and the city council was repeatedly called upon to devise some means of abating the nuisance. This was accomplished a few years ago by a system of sewerage which embraced all of the principal streets. The Town Branch is now encased in solid masonry, and its unhealthy effects are no longer felt.

Much attention is here given to the cultivation of flowers and shrubbery. A Horticultural Society has been in existence for several years and has met with marked success. A floral exhibition is given annually in the Rotunda and Hall of the State House, and is always an occasion of rare interest to all. The society owes much to its able and courteous President, Mr. I. H. Currier, for efficient discharge of his duties, and the earnest manner in which he has labored to further its interests.

As most of the State Institutions are located at Jacksonville, the number of public buildings in Springfield is much more limited than one would expect to find at the capital of the State. Foremost among them is the capitol, situated in the middle of Capitol Square. The grounds around it are thoroughly set with shrubbery and trees of every description, and in the spring and summer season present the appearance of a blooming park. The building itself is a massive structure of solid limestone, Its form is that of a rectangle, being longest from east to west. The main entrances are on the north and south. Here are lofty porticos supported by massive pillars, with heavily wrought pediments above. The material for its construction was obtained principally from the quarries on the South Fork of the Sangamon River, distant a few miles south-east of the city.

The work upon the building was commenced soon after the removal of the seat of government, but as there was no railroad communication at that time, it progress was necessarily slow. The huge stones were drawn from the quarries on wagons constructed for the purpose. Many rocks may be seen to-day, scattered here and there through the fields, where formerly ran the road to the quarry, having been rolled from the wagons to lighten the draught upon the wearied teams.

Next in importance must be mentioned the Governor's mansion, situated in the midst of a beautiful park, occupying an entire block, between Fourth and Fifth streets. It is an imposing edifice of superior brick masonry, and occupies a commanding site. It was built during the administration—as Governor—of J. A. Matteson, and under his immediate supervision.

The Armory, on north 5th street also deserves to be mentioned,as being the depository of the arms of the State. It increased very materially in importance at the breaking out of the Rebellion, and several importand additions were made to it.

The educational interests of the city have been carefully fostered and generously encouraged. Free schools are in successful operation in every ward of the city. The buildings are large and commodious, being built upon the most approved plans, and the corps of instructors has always been all that could be desired. The City High School is constantly sending forth graduates of which any institution of learning might be proud, and they are occupying high places of honor and trust throughout the city. The Illinois State University, incorporated A. D. 1852, and situated about one mile north-east of the Public Square is an institution of which central Illinois is justly proud. It is under the management of the Lutheran Church, with an experienced and able faculty. Although seriously embarrassed with a heavy debt, it pursues its way steadily onward with a fair prospect of outriding every financial storm which it may encounter.

It will be seen from what has been written, that in a few years an insignificant and almost unknown country town has become the capital city of a great State. A City, not only by virtue of its charter of incorporation, but by virtue of its business transactions and commercial relation, the energy of its people, the number and successful operation of its educational institutions, and the disinterestedness and public spirit which marks the conduct of her leading men. By labor, patience and the endurance of great hardships she has been made what she is to-day. By a continued exercise of these virtues, linked with a willingness to sacrifice individual interest for the public good she may soon become the metropolis of her State and the pride of all her people. We have the past to stimulate us to noble purpose and great endeavor. Let us not forget that here, in the olden time, were wont to meet in judicial investigation and legislative council, that illustrious Coterie whose names have since become historic. Let us not forget that they were citizens of Springfield—Douglas, Bissell, Shields, Harris, Edwards, Hardin, Baker and Lincoln—great men, whose names are all written high on the scroll of Fame. Most of these, it is true, are gone from us now. They have fallen in the great battle of life; some surrounded by friends in their peaceful homes and some pierced by the bullets of the foe on bloody fields, as they struggled for their nation's honor.

But the memory of their noble deeds is still with us to prompt us to a just emulation of their merit. Let the spirits which went up through the smoke of battle, and from the midst of the family circle, to the Heaven of the martyr and the hero, look down with pride and satisfaction from their better home, at the manly struggles of their younger brothers in carrying on the work they so gloriously begun. Let us remember that "Peace hath her victories, no less renowned than war," and that the highway upon which the car of civilization and science is now moving, is ample enough to receive the efforts of all resolved to make each to-morrow improve upon to-day, let a record be left for posterity which the capital city of Illinois will be proud to treasure and protect.

[For the above article we are indebted to the kindness of A. Montfort, Esq., a member of the Springfield Bar, at present assistant secretary of the Illinois Central Insurance Co. of that city.]

Sterling,

An important thriving city of Whiteside county, situated on the Rock river, and on the Fulton branch of the Galena & Chicago Union Railroad, 110 miles west from Chicago. This place was originally settled in 1837, and at first consisted of two small villages known as "Harrisburg" and "Chatham," afterwards united under the name of "Sterling," in honor of the birth-place of one of its early settlers, Mr. Nelson Mason. Until the completion of the railroad to this point, the place was of but little importance, but after that date it increased rapidly in population and trade, having in 1863 about 3,000 inhabitants. The city charter was obtained in 1856. The Rock river at this point is crossed by a new and handsome trestle bridge, also by a substantial stone dam, which has been improved by the erection of two large flouring mills, turning out an aggregate of 50,000 bbls. of flour per year. The city is very pleasantly located, principally upon three hills or swells of the prairie, extending along the valley of the river. It contains several fine business blocks, together with three hotels, six churches, three public schools, two private banks, an insurance company, weekly newspaper, a lodge each of Masons and Odd Fellows, an iron foundry and machine shop, 2 flour mills, a sash and blind factory, planing mill, agricultural implement manufactory, together with the proportionate number of other trades, professions and mechanical pursuits. The entire surrounding country is noted for its healthfulness and productiveness, in this respect being unsurpassed by that of any section of the State. Cattle, hogs, grain and produce of all kinds are shipped from here in immense quantities. For the year 1863 the total amount of all kinds of grain shipped by railroad, reached to upwards of 1,300,000 bushels. In the prairies surrounding the city there are several interesting Indian mounds, of a character similar to those found in the valley of the Ohio.

Vandalia,

A village of Fayette county, of which it is the county seat, on the line of the I. C. R. R., 70 miles east from St. Louis. The place was laid off in 1819, and in the spring of 1820, before any actual settlement was made, the place was chosen as a location for the State capital, which was accordingly removed here in that year from Kaskaskia, and the village at once became a place of importance, and boasted a population of 2,000 souls. In 1839 the capital was removed to Springfield, and Vandalia rapidly declined until its population numbered less than 500, at which figure it remained for many years. It has recently, however, taken a fresh start, and now bids fair to become an important and thriving city. The location of the town is very beautiful, being upon rising ground, surrounded by wooded hills. The court house, formerly the State Capitol, is a fine structure of brick, 60 by 100 feet, and standing in the centre of a handsome square. The Kaskaskia river flows immediately in the rear of the town. The great National Road from Washington has its western terminus here. The city now contains a population of upwards of 2,000, and has four churches, an excellent graded school, a weekly Democratic newspaper, two flour mills, two carding mills, two breweries, a saw mill, iron foundry and machine shop, four hotels, and various professions and mechanical trades, for a full enumeration of which see the annexed.

Watson,

A post office of Sangamon county.

Wauconda,

A post village of Conda township, Lake county, about 10 miles east of Dearborn station on the Chicago and Northwestern Railway. There is another post office in the same township, called Forksville.

Waukegan,

The county seat of Lake county, is situated on the western shore of Lake Michigan, distant thirty-five miles north from Chicago, on the line of the Chicago and Milwaukee Railway, though without a harbor for the protection of vessels, yet, by means of piers extending into the Lake, steamers and vessels of a large class touch, and receive and unload their freight. The grain products of the County are mainly shipped by lake to an Eastern market, while almost the entire supply of lumber for the use of city and county is landed at its piers. Since the completion of the C. & M. Railway, the trade has been somewhat diverted from its former channels. During the year 1863, however, there were shipped by the Pier company 91,442 bushels of grain, 68,322 lbs. of wool, and 1,300 bbls. of beef and pork.

In the year 1849, Waukegan, (then called Little Fort,) became an incorporated town, at which time the name, by a vote of its inhabitants, was changed to Waukegan, being the Indian word for Little Fort. By Act of the Legislature of 1859, it was made an incorporated city.

The earliest settlements in the town of Waukegan were made in the year 1836, and among the early settlers were Samuel Pellifant, Henry Knapp, Charles S. Cary, James G. Cary, Elmsley Sunderlin, Peleg Sunderlin, Paul Kingston, Hezekiah Bryant, D. S. Dewey, Samuel

W. W. KIMBALL, Piano Fortes, Melodeons and Parlor Organs. Wholesale and Retail, 142 Lake Street, Chicago, Ill.

H. Gilbert, Dr. David Cory, Burleigh Hunt, Cornelius Veiley, Edward Snider, James B. Goxton, Erastus Blakesley, Thomas B. Benjamin, William B. Benjamin, James McKay, Arthur Patterson and D. O. Dickinson.

The County seat of Lake county was originally located by the commissioners appointed by the legislature at Libertyville, which in an early day in the history of the County, gave rise to considerable bitterness of feeling, and the question was agitated for several years until a numerously signed petition was presented to the Legislature at its session in 1841, the result of which was the passage of an act submitting the question of removing the county seat to the people of the county. They decided that it should be removed to Little Fort, which caused much rejoicing on the part of the inhabitants of Little Fort and their friends generally through the county. The County seat being thus definitely settled, it gave a new impetus to the growth of the place, which, at the period mentioned, consisted of but one or two frame buildings and perhaps four or five log cabins.

The natural advantages of the surrounding country for farming purposes, were soon developed by the strong arm of the pioneer settlers from New York and the New England States, and Waukegan keeping pace only with the surrounding country, at this time has grown to be a city of some 3,500 inhabitants, and we believe it is becoming to be conceded that, for healthfulness and beauty of location, it has no rival on the shores of Lake Michigan; locations for residences are being eagerly sought for here by many of the business men of Chicago, especially in the summer.

Of churches we have the Baptist, Catholic, Congregational, Episcopal, German Methodist, Methodist, and Presbyterian. There are three Public School buildings capable of seating about 450 scholars, and employment is given to three male and six female teachers. Of Masons there are, Union Lodge, No. 78, Waukegan Lodge, No. 324, Waukegan Chapter, No. 41, and Waukegan Commandery, No. 12. Lake County Agricultural Society holds its annual fairs on the County farm-grounds at Libertyville, each autumn. Regular meetings are held in February and June. Pres., Hurlbut Swan, Fremont; Sec'y, James L. Cory, Waukegan; Treas., Warren A. Ellis, Waukegan. Of late much taste has been exhibited by the citizens in the beautifying and ornamentation of these grounds with trees and shrubbery, which is beginning to be felt and seen so very generally, that what was once only adopted by an occasional amateur, is now becoming a necessity with all, and Waukegan in summer now strikes the new comer with admiration at this feature of her beauty.

It is 56 miles from Chicago, and 16 from Joliet, and is in the center of what is rightly called the "Garden of the West." It possesses one of the finest water powers in the West, upon which are situated large flouring mills that furnish this and the adjoining counties with flour, numerous manufacturing establishments, doing a large business, are also located here. The country around Wilmington is one of the most productive in the State, thickly settled with an enterprising class of farmers. On every hand may be seen well cultivated fields, good and commodious houses and barns. Many of the farms are surrounded with shrubbery and thriving orchards. The country is well watered by the majestic Kankakee and its numerous tributaries, the shores of which are most all heavily timbered.

Windsor,

Is a very flourishing incorporated town, situated in the eastern part of Shelby county, on the line of the Terre Haute & St. Louis Railroad, twelve miles west of its crossing with the Chicago Branch Illinois Central Railroad.

The town was laid out in the spring of 1856, by Messrs. Huggins & Ryder, who owned a section of land on which the town stands. The first house was built by J. D. Bruce, soon after the town was laid out. There are now about 500 inhabitants in the place. It has three churches, one Presbyterian, one Methodist and one Christian—all three respectable buildings. It supports two good schools.

Windsor Lodge No. 322 A. F. and A. M. meet on Tuesday, on or before the full moon. Windsor Lodge No. 270 I. O. O. F. meet in their hall every Thursday. Both societies are in a very flourishing condition.

There are five dry goods houses, one furniture store, two blacksmith shops, one carriage and wagon shop, several groceries, and one first class flouring mill, doing a good business. There are in the neighborhood of two hundred thousand dollars worth of goods sold here annually.

The resources of the surrounding country are numerous and varied. Grains and fruits of all kinds adapted to this climate are produced in great abundance, amply repaying the husbandman for his labor. In the immediate vicinity of the town are immense forests of valuable timber, consisting mostly of hickory, ash, walnut, elm, maple and nearly all the different varieties of oak.

Professions, Trades, etc.

A small post village of Morgan county, on the Jacksonville, Alton & St. Louis Railroad, about six miles south of Jacksonville.

Woodstock,

A thriving town, the county seat of McHenry county, on the Chicago & North-Western Railway, fifty-one miles north-west of Chicago. The town was located in 1844, when a dispute having arisen between McHenry, the then capital of the county, and other small towns in reference to the location of the county seat. Woodstock was fixed upon on account of its location, being the geographical centre of the county. The land where it now stands was covered with timber, the plot being about three miles in extent, and was originally owned by Allen Judd, who afterwards sold it to James M. Judd and George C. Dean, under whose ownership the town was laid out. They afterwards sold out to Messrs. Sloan and Platt, two lawyers then practicing in the place. The first settlers were men from the eastern States and the town now indicates that they were men of enterprise and taste. The first house erected was a court house, in

1844, which was used as such till the year 1856, when it gave way to the present one, a massive brick structure, built at an expense of $40,000, in a manner alike creditable to the taste of the architect, skill of the builders —Messrs. Hibbard & Son—and enterprise of the citizens. It is said to be the best in northern Illinois, except that at Chicago after the style of which it is built. In front of the court house is a beautiful square or park planted with shrubbery and ornamental shade trees and around which the stores, bank, post office, hotels and other places of business are located, giving to the town at the same time a picturesque and business like appearance. There are on the square two large brick blocks. Phoenix block, designed for seven stores, and Excelsior block on the opposite side of the square having five stores, each building being three stories high. The surrounding country is fine rolling prairie, interspersed with plots of timber, (some of them being of considerable extent) and abundance of small streams and beautiful spring lakes, the most noted of which is Crystal Lake. The soil is rich, productive, and well adapted to grazing and raising all kinds of grain and root crops. Large quantities of wheat and live stock the production of the county are yearly shipped from Woodstock. There is here a bank working under the new national banking system, capital $50,000. Here was first projected the Railway which passes through the town, the first survey of which was run and paid for by private means of citizens of the town. and the charter obtained under the name of Wisconsin and Chicago Railroad,—William Sloan, Esq., of Woodstock, now deceased, being elected the first president. "Woodstock University," (male and female,) chartered in the early part of the year 1860, with a large and competent staff of professors and teachers is located here. The average attendance numbers one hundred and thirty.

There are three church edifices—Methodist E., Presbyterian, and Roman Catholic. The Baptists, Universalists and Adventists also have church organizations.

There is a steam flouring mill, a brewery and a planing machine, each doing a thriving business. There are two good hotels and several large stores. There are three warehouses for grain and produce. The Woodstock Sentinel, a weekly newspaper, is published here. There is a lodge of Masons, St. Marks Lodge No. 63 and Light Guard Lodge of Good Templars, No. 425. Population about 2,000.
